In addition to the four major systems which the Agency uses, it owns some 120 assorted Personal Computers, 10 FAX machines, and 11 Photocopiers. A substantial number of these items are elderly and due for routine replacement before 2000. The remaining items will be checked individually for Year 2000 Compliance by September 1998, and replaced if necessary. The replacement costs will emerge during this process. They are expected to be met from within the Agency's budget.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from A. W. Pollard to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding testing for millennium compliance, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Logistic Information Systems Agency.

LISA is responsible for providing Year 2000 in-house and contractor support to the Quartermaster General's Top Level Budget (TLB) in respect of all Army Logistic Information Systems, whether operated by LISA or its customers. All costs are borne by the TLB and LISA bears no additional costs. Year 2000 progress, compliance and funding information is reported by the TLB, through the Ministry of Defence, in respect of all of the TLB Agencies and users.

Letter from M. J. A. Smallwood to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about the Ministry of Defence Police, on behalf of the Chief Constable/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence Police (MDP) Agency, as this falls into his area of responsibility. The Chief Constable/Chief Executive is away from the office at present.

The date of completion of final testing for millennium compliance in the Ministry of Defence Police is dependent on the supply of solutions by manufacturers. MDP plan to complete their work by 31 March 1999, and put in place contingency work for unproven solutions not available by that date.

At the date of your question and this reply there were no consultants nor contractors employed in the Ministry of Defence Police working on Year 2000 computer problems.

There has been no extra cost to date for millennium computer compliance work for the Ministry of Defence Police. The range and cost of these and other computerised and microchip dependent millennium issues, e.g. vehicles, communications, environmental, access and alarm systems, is being addressed.

Letter from J. H. S. McAnally to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State about the date for completion of all Millennium compliance testing within the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA) in my capacity as Chief Executive of the NRTA.

Of the 511 NRTA systems, 424 (83%) have been assessed for compliance to date. Completion of compliance testing of the remainder is expected to be achieved by 30 April 1998. The NRTA is working to achieve Year 2000 compliance for all critical systems by 31 December 1998, and for non-critical systems the compliance target date is 31 December 1999. For completeness, I have included NRTA systems owned by the MoD (Procurement Executive and other third-parties), although responsibility for achieving compliance remains with those authorities.

Letter from J. H. S. McAnally to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State about the number of consultants and contractors working on Year 2000 computer problems within the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA) in my capacity as Chief Executive of the NRTA.

There are currently no consultants or contractors working on Year 2000 problems associated with NRTA-owned systems.

Letter from J. H. S. McAnally to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State about a breakdown of costs of Millennium computer compliance for the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA) in my capacity as Chief Executive of the NRTA.

The estimated costs to rectify NRTA-owned systems known to be non-compliant is £859k. Further estimated costs in the region of £900, are estimated for the systems still to be assessed. This leads to an overall cost estimate of £1.76 million for this Agency.

Letter from M. A. Rowe to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about testing for millennium compliance within the Pay and Personnel Agency as the matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Pay and Personnel Agency.

Within the plans for the agency, and in line with general MOD requirements, all business areas within the agency are scheduled to have completed their compliance testing by the end of December 1998. Most areas are currently scheduled to complete by the end of September 1998, which allows for up to 3 months extra contingency.

Letter from M. A. Rowe to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about consultants and contractors working on Year 2000 computers problems for the Pay and Personnel Agency as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Pay and Personnel Agency.

At the moment we have no consultants within the Agency working on Year 2000 problems. Similarly we have no contractors specifically employed on Year 2000 matters. However we do have a contract with EASAMS for support of our IT systems at Worcester, and they have been requested to include migrating the software to a millennium compliant environment within that contract.

Letter from M. A. Rowe to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost of ensuring millennium computer compliance for the Pay and Personnel Agency as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Pay and Personnel Agency. The actual spend to date on Year 2000 issues is approximately £155,000 of which £80,000 is the costs of the staff resources so far expanded in checking the legacy systems. The remaining £75,000 was for PC replacements, including the software, and some mainframe testing tools.

All these costs have been subsumed within the planned operating budget, and no additional cost has yet been allocated.

Letter from G. Jones to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking when all testing for millennium compliance will be complete, as these matters fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment Defence Agency.

The Agency has a large number of computer-based systems on site, some purchased and maintained by the Agency in support of its own business, others supplied by external sponsors responsible for RAF-wide Information Technology infrastructure. The projects to complete millennium testing for this second category are managed separately by the external sponsors and are not known at individual sites. Testing of all systems for which RAFSEE has direct responsibility will be completed, and an action plan published, by 30 Sep 98.

Letter from G. Jones to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking for details of consultants and contractors employed on the Year 2000 computer problems, as these matters fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment Defence Agency.

The Agency has a large number of computer-based systems on site, some purchased and maintained by the Agency in support of its own business, others supplied by external sponsors responsible for RAF-wide Information Technology (IT) infrastructure. The numbers of staff employed (elsewhere) addressing Year 2000 problems for this second category are not known at individual sites. Support for the systems for which the Agency has direct responsibility is provided under a Multi Activity Contract, and it is estimated that no more than one contractor (part time) is currently working on Year 2000 issues. There are no consultants currently employed by the Agency on the Year 2000 problem since the Agency has its own IT experts who are addressing the problem as an internal task.

Letter from G. Jones to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

The Agency has a large number of computer-based systems on site, some purchased and maintained by the Agency in support of its own business, others supplied by external sponsors responsible for RAF-wide Information Technology infrastructure. The costs associated with achieving Year 2000 compliance for this second category will be managed separately by the external sponsors and are not known at individual sites. The Agency is currently embarking on a comprehensive upgrade programme of its business systems to improve efficiency and reduce ongoing support and licence costs. The new systems will be Year 2000 compliant and will therefore solve the millennium problems so far identified. However, it would not be appropriate to count the cost of this upgrade against the Year 2000 problem since it would have happened anyway. The only costs that could be assigned specifically to addressing the millennium problem are the staff costs of our in-house team, approximately £50,000.

Letter from A. J. Stables to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Defence about when testing for millennium compliance will be complete, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency.

Letter from A. J. Stables to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Defence about which consultants and contractors are working on Year 2000 computer problems, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency.

Oracle UK Ltd and Sequent Computers Systems Ltd are currently supplying consultancy services on Year 2000 issues to this Agency.

Letter from A. J. Stables to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Defence about the costs of millennium computer compliance, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency.

Up to the end of Fiscal Year 1998, this Agency has contained all millennium testing and associated replacement within existing replacement and resource schedules. Consequently, no expenditure has been incurred which can be uniquely identified as Year 2000 expenditure.

Letter from J. P. Clarke to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 13 March 1998:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence three Parliamentary Questions relating to specific aspects of millennium compliance at the United Kingdom Hydrographic Office (UKHO). As these matters fall within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the UKHO I have been asked to reply to you direct. I hope you will accept this reply as a response to all three Parliamentary Questions.

Turning first to your question about the completion of millennium compliance, there is undoubtedly a considerable amount of work to be completed and it is anticipated that testing will have to continue right up to the end of 1999. That said the later testing will be in relation to systems of low criticality; it is planned that rectification and testing of our critical systems will be completed by the end of March 1999.

The UKHO has entered into a contract with AMTEC Consulting Limited to carry out most of the work on this project. In addition to this a Project Manager with some key staff from existing resources have been allocated to support the AMTEC team. It is envisaged that a further contract will be negotiated with AMTEC to take through to full assessment, rectification and testing. As a consequence it is inevitable that some staff enhancement will be needed.

Finally, as regards your question about a cost breakdown for the millennium programme, I should explain that the programme is broken down into two distinct projects. The first project is the pre-assessment and scoping project, whilst the second project—that relating to full assessment, rectification and testing—is still in the process of being negotiated. As such, it is not yet possible to provide you with a detailed breakdown of the costs likely to be incurred. Apart from the work let to AMTEC it is also relevant that certain internal staff costs will be incurred as some of the work being conducted for millennium compliance would have been undertaken anyway for internal UKHO business reasons.

I am sorry that I cannot be more specific about the costs involved, but it is my judgement, and the one upon which planning assumptions are being made, that the total costs likely to be incurred, covering internal and external services, will be in the region of £2.25M.

I hope this reply has been of some assistance.

Ex-service Men

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason the Government have refused to allow ex-service men to have access to an independent assessor for their complaints. [32269]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 March 1998]: Service personnel, both serving and ex-serving, have the statutory right, under the Army Act 1955, the Air Force Act 1955 and the Naval Discipline Act 1957 and Queen's Regulations, to submit a complaint to the Defence Council about any matter relating to their service. The current provisions stipulate that complaints must be submitted within three months of the date of the action complained of, although there is provision for the discretionary acceptance of late complaints where it is accepted that earlier submission had not been reasonably practical. The time limit for the submission of complaints, and the application of the provisions to ex-Service personnel, were introduced in October 1997. Prior to that, there was no time limit and complaints from ex-Service personnel were accepted for investigation on a discretionary basis.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many properties which manufactured or stored mustard gas are still owned by the Ministry of Defence; and if he will list them. [33797]

Mr. Spellar: Mustard gas was manufactured at certain Ministry of Supply factories none of which remain on the defence estate. Further research will be required to identify storage sites which are still owned by my Department. I will write to my hon. Friend once these inquiries are complete.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the conclusions were of the survey carried out in 1986–87 into the extent of contamination and the cost and feasibility of decontamination of six former chemical warfare storage sites in the United Kingdom; for what reason this survey was carried out; who carried out this survey; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the report of this survey. [33795]

Mr. Spellar: My officials are seeking to discover the extent of any survey work carried out and whether the relevant reports are still extant. I will write to my hon. Friend once these inquiries are complete.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many surveys have been conducted into the contamination of and pollution from the former chemical warfare filling and storage sites at (a) Norton Disney/Swinderby in Lincolnshire and (b) RAF Risley in Bedfordshire since 1980. [33796]

Mr. Spellar: According to available records, since 1980, five surveys have been carried out at the former Forward Filling Depot at RAF Norton Disney and this site was sold in 1997. There have been six surveys of Risley. The surveys include revalidation of earlier studies, radiological and chemical surveys, and Land Quality Assessments.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent work has been carried out to remove mustard gas decontamination from the former chemical warfare filling and storage site at RAF Risley in Bedfordshire; for what reason this work was necessary; when this work is expected to end; who currently owns the site; if compensation has been paid out to local residents in connection with contamination of the site; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the report of Operation Coleman Keg which was conducted in 1988 to remove contamination from the site. [33798]

Mr. Spellar: The major work to remove mustard gas contamination from the MOD-owned Risley site in Bedfordshire was carried out in 1988 under Operation Coleman Keg. I am arranging for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

In 1996, independent consultants were engaged to assess the current condition of the land. That work has subsequently been revalidated by the further surveys carried out in 1997. The latest report has recently been received from the consultants and its contents are currently being evaluated. An executive summary of the consultants' report will be made available to the Bedfordshire County Council.

Separately, the RAF's Explosive Ordnance Disposal team is engaged on clearing ordnance and associated material from the site. This clearance work is expected to complete by the end of the year.

No claims for compensation have been received.

Clearance of Chemical Warfare Sites Committee

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the RAF Clearance of Chemical Warfare Sites Committee was established; what its remit is; what its membership is; and what the current security classification is of its papers and minutes. [33802]

Mr. Spellar: The Committee was established in 1949, but subsequently disestablished, probably in the 1950s. I will write to my hon. Friend once further inquiries are complete.

Under current arrangements, clearance of RAF sites is arranged through consultation between the relevant parties, including Defence Lands, the RAF Infrastructure Organisation and the RAF Explosive Ordnance Disposal team.

Intelligence Gathering

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January 1998, Official Report, column 480, if he will de-classify and make available all information concerning the use of trawlers for specific and incidental intelligence gathering throughout the Cold War period. [34130]

Dr. Reid: I am placing in the Library of the House a paper describing the contribution of British trawlers to intelligence gathering during the Cold War period.

Visiting Forces

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 43, if he will list those countries other than the United States which at present have visiting forces based in the United Kingdom. [34497]

Dr. Reid: This information is not held centrally. However, from the records available, personnel from the following overseas armed forces, other than the United States, are currently serving in the United Kingdom:

Australia
Bahamas
Bahrain
Bangladesh
Barbados
Belgium
Belize
Botswana
Brazil
Brunei
Bulgaria
Canada
Chile
China
Czech Republic
Denmark
Ecuador
Egypt
Fiji
Finland
France
Germany
Ghana
Greece
Guatemala
Hungary
India
Indonesia
Ireland
Israel
Italy
Jamaica
Japan
Jordan
Kenya
South Korea
Kuwait
Malaysia
Morocco
Mozambique
Namibia
Nepal
Netherlands
New Zealand
Norway
Oman
Pakistan
Papua New Guinea
Paraguay Philippines
Poland
Portugal
Qatar
Romania
Russia
Saudi Arabia
Senegal
Seychelles
Singapore
Slovakia
Slovenia
South Africa
Spain
Sweden
Switzerland
Tanzania
Thailand
Trinidad and Tobago
Turkey

Ukraine
United Arab Emigrates
Uruguay
Zambia
Zimbabwe.

This includes foreign military personnel on training courses in the UK, non-UK personnel in NATO appointments, and personnel on exchange or attachment with our own armed forces. It does not include personnel attached to foreign embassies and high commissions.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 45, at which establishments the presence of United States visiting forces is primarily to pursue (a) objectives peculiar to United States policy, (b) objectives relating to United Kingdom-United States agreements, (c) objectives determined by NATO and (d) other objectives. [34498]

Dr. Reid: All US Visiting Forces are based in this country in support of NATO objectives and in furtherance of our mutual defence interests.

Plutonium

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much plutonium his Department has (i) produced in the United Kingdom and (ii) used in the United Kingdom in each year since 1979; [34474]

(2) how much plutonium his Department has held in each year since 1979. [34472]

Dr. Reid: In April 1995 the then Foreign Secretary announced that the UK no longer manufactured fissile material for explosive purposes. As part of the Strategic Defence Review, this Government are examining all aspects of the nuclear programme, including the management and holdings of fissile materials. I am withholding the detailed information sought under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to defence, security and international relations.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of providing security to protect the stocks of plutonium held by his Department for the latest year for which figures are available. [34469]

Dr. Reid: The costs of providing security to protect Ministry of Defence owned plutonium are not held separately from the costs of guarding those establishments where plutonium may be held. It would entail disproportionate cost to attempt to identify the cost of any one element of the overall guarding procedure.

Chatham House Speech

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of his speech at Chatham House on 12 March together with a transcript of answers to questions. [34286]

Mr. George Robertson: A copy of my speech was placed in the Libraries of both Houses yesterday. As this is a public occasion, I will also arrange for a copy of the transcript of the question and answer session to be placed in both Libraries when it is available.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Office Cost Allowance

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council (1) if she will list the hon. Members who (a) retired at the 1997 Dissolution and (b) were defeated in the 1997 general election who have claimed a full year's office cost allowance for 1997–98, broken down by party; [34690]

(2) if she will list the hon. Members who (a) retired at the 1992 Dissolution and (b) were defeated in the 1992 general election who claimed a full year's office cost allowance for 1992–93, broken down by party. [34689]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: No.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid Board

Mr. Andy King: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the Legal Aid Board's responsibilities when a franchised solicitor is responsible for delays in the proceedings of a case beyond the three-year time limit. [33600]

Mr. Hoon: The Legal Aid Board has no power to investigate allegations of professional negligence in the legal sense. A client can seek redress for loss caused by his/her solicitor's alleged negligence through the courts. The Office for the Supervision of Solicitors (OSS) does not have the power to investigate allegations of negligence. It can, however, refer the client to a solicitor who is a member of the Negligence Panel Scheme for further assistance if the OSS believe there may have been negligence in the client's case.

The Legal Aid Board undertakes audits of a sample of franchisees' files to ensure that the solicitors continue to comply with the requirements of the Franchising Specification. It also investigates any complaints made by clients about the quality of service given by a franchised solicitor.

One of the requirements under the Franchising Specification is a system to maintain a back-up record of key dates relevant to a case. If, during an audit, it was evident that no back up system was in place, the Board would categorise that as a major non compliance.

However, a single incident of a missed time limit would not necessarily lead the Board to conclude that a back-up system was not in place. The Board would investigate all the circumstances before deciding if action was appropriate under the franchise. If appropriate, the Board would require corrective action to be taken within twenty one days. A follow-up audit would be made to ensure that action had been taken. Failure to do so could lead to the Board either suspending the contract or terminating it, if necessary, to protect both the client's interests and those of the Legal Aid Fund.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Radioactive Discharges

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent correspondence his Department's ministers have had with Swedish authorities acting on behalf of the Nordic Council of Environment Ministers concerning radioactive discharges from Sellafield and Dounreay; and what response has been received. [33026]

Mr. Meacher: Mrs. Anna Lindh, Swedish Minister for the Environment, wrote to me on 27 February in her capacity as Chairperson of the Nordic Council of Environment Ministers, regarding discharges of technetium-99 from Sellafield. She enclosed a copy of a report from the Norwegian Radiation Protection Authority, entitled "Technetium-99 contamination in the North Sea and in Norwegian coastal areas, 1996 and 1997". I am placing copies of Mrs. Lindh's letter, my reply and the Norwegian Radiation Protection Authority's report in the Library.

Household Projections

Mr. Tom King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what timetable he proposes for the revision of planning guidance and the publication of the discussion papers, advice and research referred to in paragraph 93 of "Planning for the Communities of the Future" (Cm 3885). [33825]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government hope to issue a consultation draft of a revised PPG3 by the summer recess. We hope to publish the discussion paper on regional targets before we consult on the draft revised PPG3. The Department intends to issue a discussion paper on monitoring indicators during the Spring, with a view to incorporating the results in a draft PPG3 which we hope to issue for consultation by the summer recess.

With regard to research, the following timetable applies:

mixed uses and housing in town centres—we hope to let this imminently and to publish by Spring 1999;

density—publication should be by April 1998;

economic instruments—research seminars on planning obligations are to be held shortly and the results will be reported to Ministers thereafter;

land assembly—this issue will be examined as part of two projects—the mixed use one mentioned above and a project on land pooling which we hope to commission in April;

land use database—the first stage of this, incorporating a national assessment of previously developed land and buildings available for housing, will be available by January 1999. A timetable for the remaining stages, extending the database to other land uses, will be clarified over the course of the coming year.

Tourism

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what grants will be available to regional development agencies to assist the tourism industry; and what assessment he has made of the level of grants available to Scotland and Wales. [33908]

Angela Eagle: Government financial support for the tourism industry in England is currently being considered as part of the comprehensive spending review process. Arrangements in Scotland and Wales are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Royal Ordnance Site, Chorley

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will visit the Royal Ordnance site in Euxton, Chorley, to assess its potential for development. [33910]

Mr. Raynsford: The future of the Royal Ordnance Site is an important matter for Chorley and the North West. However, because of the potential quasi-judicial role of the Secretary of State should any proposal come before him for determination, it would be inappropriate for Ministers to visit at this stage.

Research and Development

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will set up regional banks to support research and development in industry. [33909]

Angela Eagle: The Government have no proposals to set up regional banks. However, Regional Development Agencies will be responsible for promoting competitiveness and exchange of best practice, including technology transfer, from innovative companies and higher education to the wider business community.

Aviation Industry

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Integrated Transport White Paper will include specific targets for improving the environment around airports, with particular reference to the impact of noise and congestion; and if he will make a statement. [34115]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Integrated Transport White Paper will set the framework within which detailed policies will be developed and implemented in due course.

Heathrow Airport

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what factors underlie the number of emergency take-offs and landings at Heathrow during the past three years; and what assessment he has made of the public safety implications of trends in these figures. [34111]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The number and type of emergency situations declared by pilots of aircraft landing at or taking off from Heathrow Airport in the last three years are listed in the following table. The majority of these emergencies were declared as a precautionary measure and involved no immediate danger to the aircraft.

Reason for emergency	1995	1996	1997
Low fuel	1	1	3
Medical (Passengers and crew)	2	5	3
Engine problems	2	2	3
Suspected fires	—	3	—
Mechanical etc. problems	4	6	8
Burst tyres	—	1	—
Wake vortex encounters	—	1	—
Birdstrikes	—	—	2
Lightening strike	—	—	1
Total	9	19	20

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he plans to take to strengthen the protection of sites of special scientific interest. [34118]

Angela Eagle: The Government are currently considering how best to improve the protection and management of Sites of Special Scientific Interest. Officials are preparing a consultation paper seeking views.

Public Transport

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to improve the flow of public transport on roads in urban areas in England. [34490]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government will announce their policies on all aspects of transport in the Integrated Transport White Paper due to be published this Spring. In the meantime, my Department is already supporting packages of integrated transport measures in the great majority of urban areas in England. £85 million have been allocated to transport packages in 1998–99 under the Transport Policies and Programme system. Improved facilities for public transport, including bus priority routes, feature in virtually all urban packages. We are also funding the development of a comprehensive bus priority network in London. £11 million are going to that project in 1998–99 alone.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the last date on which applications for consideration for membership of boards of regional development agencies may be made. [34680]

Angela Eagle: Applications for membership of regional development agency boards should be received in the relevant Government Office by Friday 27 March 1998.

Planning Applications

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will extend the right of appeal against decisions by local planning authorities to include objectors to planning applications. [34761]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 1 December 1997, Official Report, column 36.

Domestic Refuse (Recycling)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what volume of domestic refuse was recycled by each London borough in each of the last three years; and what his estimate is for 1998–99. [34301]

Angela Eagle: The table shows the total tonnage of domestic refuse collected for recycling by each London borough during the financial year 1995–96. Figures exclude quantities diverted to home composting.

Where no figure is given, either the local authority has not responded to the Department's survey or the authority was unable to provide weight data.

Figures for 1996–97 are being processed and will be published as soon as they are available. No estimates are made for future years.

Domestic refuse collected for recycling in 1995–96	Tonnes
Corporation of London	2,120
London Borough of Barking and Dagenham	—
London Borough of Barnet	9,269
London Borough of Bexley	1,792
London Borough of Bromley	16,071

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the proportion of waste (a) paper, (b) glass and (c) metal nationally has been recycled from domestic waste in each of the past three years; and what his estimate is for 1998–99. [34302]

Angela Eagle: The table shows the total reported tonnage of paper and card, glass and metal cans/scrap metal which was collected for recycling by local authorities in England and Wales during the financial year 1995/96. The data are based on information provided by local authorities representing 95 per cent. of the households in England and Wales.

It is not possible to provide the proportions as requested as there is insufficient national data on waste composition to express the tonnage of each material collected for recycling as a proportion of the total of each material in the domestic waste stream.

Figures for 1996/97 are being processed and will be published as soon as they are available. No estimates are made for future years.

Amounts collected for recycling by local authorities in England and Wales

	Tonnes
Glass	278,800
Paper	262,700
Card	16,900
Mixed paper and card	152,000
Total paper and card	431,600

Traffic Congestion

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to alleviate severe traffic congestion in urban areas. [34041]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is a subject that the Government will address in their forthcoming White Paper on integrated transport policy.

Rail Timetables

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place copies in the Library of the current notional railway timetables for Summer 2002 and 2005. [34314]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack is responsible for producing the biannual Great Britain Passenger Timetable, in consultation with the train operating companies. The timetables do not cover notional services that may be under consideration for future editions.

Water Companies

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Office of Water Services has the power to specify that water companies should consult with other organisations regarding their joint response to an emergency or a potential emergency; and if he will make a statement. [34178]

Angela Eagle: No. The Office of Water Services has no such powers. Under section 208 of the Water Industry Act 1991, the Secretary of State has the power to direct water companies to do whatever is deemed necessary to mitigate the effects of an emergency which includes consulting other organisations as necessary. Water companies already work closely with other organisations on emergency planning matters.

Rail Safety

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if the Office of the Passenger Rail Franchising has the power to specify that rail franchisees should consult with other organisations regarding their joint response to an emergency or a potential emergency; and if he will make a statement; [34179]

(2) if the Office of the Rail Regulator has the power to specify that rail companies should consult with other organisations regarding their joint response to an emergency or a potential emergency; and if he will make a statement. [34180]

Ms Glenda Jackson: All railway operators are required by the Railways (Safety Case) Regulations 1994 to prepare and have accepted a Railway Safety Case (RSC) which includes amongst other things, particulars of their arrangements for dealing with accidents and emergencies. The guidance which accompanies these Regulations makes it clear that these arrangements should make adequate provision for liaison with emergency services, and for co-operation and co-ordination with other railway operators.

The Director of Passenger Rail Franchising and the Rail Regulator have wide powers to specify the content of franchise agreements and of licences respectively. I understand that provisions relating to consultation on emergency responses have not been specified because of the wider requirements relating to safety cases and Railway Group Standards.

Mobile Phones (Drivers)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action his Department is taking to ensure that motorists are made aware of the dangers of using a hand-held mobile phone while driving; and if he will make a statement. [34859]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My noble Friend the Minister for Roads is today launching a publicity campaign to make clear to motorists the dangers of using hand-held phones while driving. The campaign includes advertisements in national newspapers and an advisory leaflet reminding motorists of the dangers of using hand-held phones and offering advice on hands-free phone use. Copies of the leaflet have been placed in the Library.

I am pleased to say that the campaign is supported by the mobile phone industry and four major mobile phone network operators who are producing complementary leaflets for their customers. This will help ensure that the message reaches the relevant audience.

Local Plans

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he is putting in place to improve the delivery of local plans and unitary development plans; and if he will make a statement. [34937]

Mr. Caborn: The statement "Modernising Planning", published on 15 January, set out our policies to improve the operation of the planning system. In accordance with those policies, my Department has today published a consultation paper on proposals for changes to the arrangements for the preparation and adoption by local authorities of Local Plans and Unitary Development Plans. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library.

The Government are committed to the plan-led system of development. This provides the essential framework for rational and consistent planning decisions, and plays a vital role in promoting development and growth which respects the environment. But if the plan-led system is to work there must be plans which cover all parts of the country and an effective system to keep those plans up to date.

The previous Government agreed a target date with local authorities for substantial coverage of local plans by the end of 1996. Only 43 per cent. coverage was achieved by that date. The figure is expected to be about 70 per cent. by the end of 1998. We therefore propose to introduce changes to national policy guidance and to procedures aimed at:

- promoting shorter, clearer plans;
- securing better targeted consultation;
- encouraging authorities to announce and be accountable for a target timetable;
- promoting negotiation on objections in order to reduce the number of issues requiring discussion at the inquiry;
- making the Inspector's report publicly available within a set time period; and
- encouraging the prompt adoption of plans.

Improvements in the quality and content of plans have a crucial role in speeding up the development plans' system. The revised guidance draws attention to the scope for authorities to learn from the best practice of others. However, ensuring that efficient procedures are in place is only part of the answer. Much of the success of these proposals depends on the approach adopted by the local authorities in taking them forward. These proposals will improve the system only if used constructively by planning authorities and there is real commitment from them to making the plan led system work.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total expenditure by his Department on (i) building maintenance and (ii) office running costs, on the last year for which figures are available, (a) in total and (b) broken down by offices and buildings in (i) London and (ii) Scotland. [34226]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport in London, on 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 421. Maintenance costs are included in the running costs quoted for each building. A further breakdown of these costs is not available.

TREASURY

Taxation (Professional Businesses)

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely effect on the availability of High Street solicitors of the Government's proposals for the withdrawal of the cash basis practice for the taxation of professional businesses. [33317]

Dawn Primarolo: The overall effect of the proposals on any professionals will of course depend on the final details to be announced in my right hon. Friend's Budget.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors governed the length of time taken to answer the question from the hon. Member for Chichester (ref. 28925) of 8 February, relating to Mr. C. Whelan. [34419]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 13 March 1998]: It has always been the case that the length of time to answer parliamentary questions varies.

Art Market

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the implications of VAT harmonisation in the EU on the United Kingdom art market. [32907]

Dawn Primarolo: I have received representations from the British Art Market Federation and from members of the art trade, and am aware of concerns about the effects on the UK art market of harmonisation of VAT on imports of works of art.

Economic Stability

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to strengthen economic stability. [35081]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I propose to implement a Code for Fiscal Stability. The Code, which will be underpinned by legislation in the Finance Bill, will enhance economic stability by ensuring that fiscal and debt management policy operate in accordance with the principles of transparency, stability, responsibility, efficiency and fairness. Copies of the paper which sets out and explains the Code for Fiscal Stability have been placed in the Vote Office and in the Library of the House.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the benefits to organisations with both travel and insurance interests of the different rates of insurance premium tax levied on travel insurance. [29537]

Dawn Primarolo: Organisations with both travel and insurance interests, the most typical examples being travel agents, will usually be paying the higher rate of insurance premium tax. However, travel agents often offer free insurance to assist their marketing of holidays, and in such cases they benefit from the standard rate of IPT on premiums paid to their insurance companies.

National Insurance

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in respect of how many employees the employers' marginal rate of contribution would be (a) higher and (b) lower than at present if the three steps increases in employers NICs were eliminated and this was financed by raising the rate of NIC to 12.2 per cent. [33511]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 March 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

If the steps for employers' contributions at £110, £155 and £210 were eliminated and the employers' contribution rate increased to 12.2 per cent., the marginal rate for employers would be lower in respect of employees earning immediately below £110, £155 and £210. The marginal rate for employers would be higher in respect of all other employees whose earnings attract employers' contributions.

DEFENCE

Exports

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 486, if he will place a copy of the Defence Export Services Organisation five-year Strategic Plan in the Library. [31319]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 27 February 1998]: The Defence Export Services Organisation's, DESO, Five-Year Strategic Plan is the Ministry of Defence's detailed assessment of future market prospects and the UK's marketing objectives. It is built up on the basis of sensitive information provided by companies and other Governments on the understanding that it would not be made public. It is normal practice for companies to withhold detailed information on their forward marketing plans because these provide information which could be an advantage to commercial competitors.

Publication of the DESO Strategic Plan would harm the UK's commercial and national interests. I am therefore withholding the document under the provisions of Exemptions 1, 13 and 14 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans he has for the international testing of computer systems for their millennium compliance with NATO allies; and if he will make a statement; [33383]

(2) what discussions are taking place in (i) the NATO Forum (ii) NATO Partnership for Peace and (iii) the OSCE on the millennium compliance of computer systems; and if he will make a statement. [33381]

Mr. Spellar: The UK is active in generating awareness of the millennium problem within NATO. The MOD has provided briefings to NATO Allies, with Partnership For Peace members in attendance, on its experience and progress in addressing the problem nationally. We have highlighted the need for a corporate commitment to address the problem in both NATO and national systems, and the need for a collaborative approach to checking and testing to ensure that critical systems and vital inter-operation are not jeopardised by the problem. In the context of the OSCE, Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe, the issue of 'millennium compliance' of the OSCE national consultation network is being raised at a meeting in Vienna later this month.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress in ensuring the millennium compliance of computer systems in the Royal Navy, and on plans to undertake the action necessary on ships on operational duty at sea. [33382]

Mr. Spellar: All computer systems currently in service with the Navy are being assessed for millennium compliance as part of the wider MOD activity currently being conducted. Any action required to make systems compliant will, as far as possible, be carried out as part of routine maintenance schedules, taking account of the high priority we attach to this issue.

We are liaising with suppliers to ensure that all future systems, including Naval computer systems, are designed and built with millennium compliance.

Nerve Agent Pre-treatment

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department is planning to seek a full product licence from the Medicine Control Agency for its proposed nerve agent pre-treatment using a combination of physostigmine and hyoscine. [33801]

Dr. Reid: The research currently being carried out by the Chemical and Biological Defence sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency into a proposed nerve agent pre-treatment using a combination of physostigmine and hyoscine is due to be completed in June 1999.

If the pre-treatment proves effective against nerve agent poisoning, it is likely to undergo a full safety evaluation prior to submission for approval for a full product licence from the Medicines Control Agency.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Weapon Engineering Division at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston, was set up; what is the purpose of this division; how many series of technical papers or reports are currently being produced by this division; and what are the names of each series. [33859]

Mr. Spellar: The "Weapon" Engineering Division at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, which is more properly known as the Warhead Engineering Division, was set up in 1954. The Division is now part of the Systems Engineering area. Its purpose is to undertake scientific warhead design through to an engineered system. This work enables AWE to underwrite the performance and safety of the warhead.

One untitled series of reports is currently being issued. There are also a number of general engineering technology studies.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 January 1998, Official Report, column 345, on the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston, how many unclassified papers were produced in each of the two series of reports produced by the chemical technology division of the Atomic Weapons Establishment between 1968 and 1991. [33855]

Mr. Spellar: Not all of the information sought is available. The Technical Memoranda series contains some 95 unclassified reports. The other series contained a large number of informal reports and documents and there was no requirement to record how many of these were unclassified. To obtain the information now, a very large number of files not in current use would have to be retrieved and examined and this could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Warhead Hydrodynamics Division

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 25 February 1998, Official Report, column 261, on the Warhead Hydrodynamics Division, how many unclassified papers were produced in the series known as Hydrodynamics Department-Technical Reports, R Series; and of which directorate the Hydrodynamics Department is now a part. [33856]

Mr. Spellar: There are 99 unclassified papers in the Hydrodynamics Department Technical Reports R Series. Hydrodynamics is part of the Physics Research Directorate.

Staff Newsletters

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current security classifications of the newsletters produced for the staff of (a) the Specialist Procurement Services Agency of his Department (b) the Naval Bases and Supply Agency and (c) the RAF Maintenance Group; how often each newsletter is produced; and when each newsletter was first produced. [33858]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executives of the Agencies concerned. I have asked them to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ken Procter to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 16 March 1998:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the current security classifications of newsletters produced for the staff of the Royal Air Force Maintenance Group Defence Agency, because this matter falls within my area of responsibility as the Acting Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Maintenance Group Defence Agency.

There are no Agency newsletters produced for staff within the Maintenance Group Defence Agency as a whole.

Letter from N. J. Bennett to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 16 March 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the current security classifications of the newsletters produced for the staff of Specialist Procurement Services (SPS), as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of that Agency.

SPS produces a newsletter in the form of an "in-house" magazine called "The Specialist". The magazine, which is unclassified, is published 6 times a year and the first issue was produced in April 1997. Copies of the newsletter are sent to all SPS staff and our MOD customers.

I hope this information is helpful, but please contact me if you require further clarification.

Letter from John Trewby to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 16 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me to reply to your Question about the newsletter for the Naval Bases and Supply Agency (NBSA) as this falls within my area of responsibility.

The current newsletter of the NBSA is entitled "First Issue" and is unclassified. It was first published in October 1995 following the formation of the Director General Naval Bases and Supply organisation. This corporate magazine has remained in circulation since the launch of the NBSA in December 1996 and continues to be published on a quarterly basis.

Intelligence Gathering

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January 1998, Official Report, column 480, whether Hull trawlermen were at any time required to sign the Official Secrets Act. [34131]

Dr. Reid: No information is available to indicate that trawlermen were required to sign the Official Secrets Act, nor is it considered likely that they would have been so required.

York Headquarters

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of maintaining (a) Land Command 2nd Divisional Headquarters and (b) Headquarters 15th Brigade in York. [34503]

Dr. Reid: The estimated cost of maintaining these headquarters next financial year will be:

(i) HQ 2nd Division, York	7,629,000
(ii) HQ 15 Brigade, York	2,017,000

These figures include pay and running costs of the headquarters and maintenance of the buildings.

Defence Personnel and Employees

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by economic planning region the number of Ministry of Defence (a) service personnel and (b) civilian employees based in the United Kingdom in (i) 1995, (ii) 1996 and (iii) 1997. [34504]

Dr. Reid: The information requested has been published in the UK Defence Statistics 1997 on page 28, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Civilian Staff

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the (a) number and (b) annual cost of surplus civilian staff retained on the payroll in each of the United Kingdom Land Command divisional areas. [34505]

Dr. Reid: As at 31 December 1997, which is the most recent date for which verified figures are available, Land Command employed no surplus civilian staff.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the (a) number and (b) annual cost of surplus civilian staff being retained on the payroll in each of the MoD top level budget areas. [34506]

Dr. Reid: As at 31 December 1997, the most recent date for which verified figures are available, the number of surplus non-industrial civilian staff retained on the payroll in each Top Level Budget area were as follows:

	Number
CINCFLEET	3
CFS	33
2SL	3
QMG	4
HQNI	0
RAF STC	0
RAF LOGISTICS COMMAND	16
RAF P&T COMMAND	1
CDP	12
2nd PUS (incl VCDS)	38
Total	131

Surplus staff are defined as non-industrial civilian staff with a full mobility obligation whose posts have either been abolished or will be abolished within 6 months. The number of staff who are temporarily surplus varies from month to month, as some are found permanent posts and others are declared newly surplus. Accordingly, it is not possible to estimate the annual cost of those staff who may be temporarily surplus.

Al-Yamamah Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) outside agencies, (b) middlemen and (c) trading organisations that have been used in arms or equipment purchases connected with the Al-Yamamah project (i) prior to and (ii) after the awarding of the contract. [34033]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 12 March 1998]: The British Government have not employed business agents, nor individuals, or organisations of the type described in the Question either prior to, or after, the award of the Al-Yamamah contract. Negotiations concerning the role of the British Government in the Al-Yamamah programme have been conducted by diplomats and civil servants in the normal way. Any use of agents by companies associated with Al-Yamamah is a matter for those companies, but the prime contractor, British Aerospace, has assured us that it operates in accordance with the laws and regulations of Saudi Arabia.

Training (Kenya)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training has been (a) requested from and (b) given by his Department to members of the Kenyan Ministry of Special Protection in each of the last three years. [34240]

Dr. Reid: I am not aware of a Kenyan Ministry of Special Protection. I can, however, confirm that no training in riot control or internal security techniques has been requested from, or provided to, the Kenyan authorities by members of the Ministry of Defence or the UK Armed Forces in any of the last three years.

War Memorials

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will establish a register of all war memorials in the United Kingdom erected since the First World War, for conflicts other than World Wars One and Two. [34272]

Mr. Spellar: No. These war memorials are already included in the National Inventory of War Memorials, which is jointly managed by the Imperial War Museum and the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of England.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which recent independent studies on links between military nuclear weapons production sites and childhood leukaemias have been evaluated by his Department; and what assessment was made of each. [34453]

Mr. Spellar: The most recent independent study, published in the British Medical Journal on 8 November 1997, concerned the incidence of leukaemia among children whose fathers have been exposed to radiation at work. Data on Atomic Weapons Establishment staff were included in the study. My Department accepts and agrees with the study's conclusions.

RAF Leeming

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1998, Official Report, column 149, concerning RAF Leeming, if he will list the bodies for which money was raised. [34764]

Mr. Spellar: Since 1 May 1997, RAF Leeming has donated tours of the Station as "prizes" in fund-raising draws to the following bodies: Dales Special School, Moreton-on-Swale, Starbright Childrens Cancer Fund, Broomfield Primary School, Northallerton, 'Dreamflight' (underprivileged children), East Cowton School, the Variety Club of Great Britain, British Field Sports Society, Allertonshire School, Northallerton and Friarage Hospital, Northallerton.

Iraq (Turkish Forces)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what monitoring of the activities of the Turkish armed forces in Iraq is undertaken by British troops; and if he will make a statement. [34309]

Dr. Reid: None. The RAF contributes to coalition patrols of the northern no-fly-zone over Iraq. This was established in 1991 to monitor Iraqi compliance with UN Security Council Resolution 688, which requires Iraq to cease repression of the civilian population of Iraq. These patrols do no monitor the activities of Turkish armed forces.

Scots Guards

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the procedure relating to the issuing of a challenge current in the 1 Battalion Scots Guards in September 1992; on how many occasions since 1 September 1992 such procedures have not been complied with; and what revision to procedures has taken place since that date. [34312]

Dr. Reid: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Holy Loch

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 3 March 1998, Official Report, column 538, what action he is taking to press the American Government to contribute to the cost of clearing up Holy Loch. [34295]

Mr. Spellar: None.

Procurement Contracts

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the defence procurement contracts with value of greater than £5 million for each year since 1987; and what were the companies involved in each of these contracts. [34183]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the original projected cost of the implementation of the MRPII Scheduling System at (a) NARO Almondbank and (b) NARO Fleetlands; and what has been the actual cost of implementation; [34592]

(2) what was the original projected timescale for the implementation of the MRPII Scheduling System in (i) NARO Almondbank and (ii) NARO Fleetlands; and what has been the actual timescale for implementation; [34594]

(3) what were the original projected cost savings to be gained from the implementation of the MRP II Scheduling System at (a) NARO Almondbank and (b) NARO Fleetlands; and what have been the actual cost savings of its implementation. [34591]

Dr. Reid: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation (NARO). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from S. R. Hill to Ms Roseanna Cunningham, dated 16 March 1998:

1. I am replying to your 3 Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence that sought timescales, cost savings and implementation costs in connection with the MRPII scheduling system in NARO Almondbank and NARO Fleetlands as this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive.

2. Timescales. The case approved in January 1992 projected implementation of the MRPII system in NARO Almondbank in July 1993 and in NARO Fleetlands in December 1993 but with the caveat that expenditure could not be committed until an ongoing Efficiency Study of the NARO had been completed. As a direct result of this delay the contract was not let until May 93. Taking this into account MRPII completion would not have been achieved to plan until May 96. At this time the project suffered delays due to data take on (the time for which had been under estimated) and performance and technical shortfalls identified during user pilots. These problems were rectified in time for the system to go live in NARO Almondbank in May 1997 and in NARO Fleetlands in July 1997.

3. Cost Savings. The case approved in January 1992 projected cost savings to be gained from the MRPII system of £53.6 million in NARO Almondbank and £35.4 million in NARO Fleetlands. The bulk of the perceived savings to the Ministry of Defence were attributable to reduced repair times, improved asset (spares etc.) visibility, and a consequent reduction in the number of assets procured. These savings fall very largely outside the NARO budget. Cost savings were forecast to be realised progressively over a period of 7 years following implementation. The actual savings to date within the NARO are estimated at £37K in NARO Almondbank and £1.0 million in NARO Fleetlands, these savings are deemed from the MRPII system subsuming pre-existing system functions and the decommissioning of the older legacy systems. It is too early yet for us to be able to carry out a post project evaluation of the overall effectiveness of the MRPII system in generating savings for the MoD.

4. Implementation Costs. The case approved in January 1992 projected a 10 year cost of implementation of the MRPII system in the NARO of £16.2 million (ex VAT at financial year 91/92 prices). The project costs were for the complete MRPII system and were not broken down between the NARO Divisions. The actual cost of implementation on the same price base has been £14.13 million and the current projected 10 year costs include some further costs associated with additional NARO Finance, Personnel, Training and Publications systems.

5. It should be noted that the MRPII Scheduling System forms part of an integrated business solution, the NARO Business System, which embraces commercial accounting, personnel, attendance and payroll.

Yorkshire and Lancashire Regiment Museum

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide finance to keep open the Yorkshire and Lancashire Regiment Museum in Rotherham. [31436]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 1 December 1997, Official Report, column 24.

PRIME MINISTER

Publications

Mr. Flight: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those European Commission (a) newsletters, (b) magazines and (c) occasional publications to which his Office subscribes. [33656]

The Prime Minister: My office makes use of a wide range of publications held within 10 Downing Street and other Government Departments.

Public Assets Sales

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Prime Minister if he will introduce measures to make Ministers liable for losses to the taxpayer if public assets are sold at less than their market value. [33610]

The Prime Minister: No. Such a proposal would be impractical. In selling public assets Ministers are accountable to Parliament in the normal way. The Government see no reason to change these arrangements.

This Government's approach to public-private partnerships is designed to ensure that the taxpayer's interests are fully safeguarded.

Yemen and Oman

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what meetings he has held since 1 May 1997 at which (a) Yemen and (b) Oman were discussed; and how many meetings he has had with representatives of the (a) Yemeni and (b) Omani Government. [34560]

The Prime Minister: I received President Ali Abdullah Saleh in November 1997 and Dr. Omar Zawawi, the Sultan of Oman's special emissary, earlier this month. The Omani and Yemeni Ambassadors were also present at a meeting of Arab Ambassadors at Downing Street in February.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to visit (a) Yemen and (b) Oman. [34559]

The Prime Minister: At present, I have no plans to visit either Yemen or Oman.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many ministerial visits there have been to (a) Yemen and (b) Oman in the last three years. [34558]

The Prime Minister: There have been 4 ministerial visits to Yemen and 14 ministerial visits to Oman over the last three years.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the oral answer of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs of 10 March 1998, Official Report, columns 307–8, what criteria he will use to determine the extent of Iraq's compliance with the recent agreement between Iraq and the UN to allow inspections to take place; and if he will submit these criteria to the scrutiny of the French, Russian and Chinese authorities as members of the Security Council. [34770]

The Prime Minister: Security Council Resolution 1154 was adopted unanimously by the Security Council. All members agreed that further violations of Iraq's obligations under relevant Security Council Resolutions and the Memorandum of Understanding signed in Baghdad would be followed by the severest consequences.

The question of Iraqi compliance will be dealt with in reports to the Security Council from the United Nations Special Commission and the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what is his current estimate of the expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on hospitality since 1 May 1997. [27810]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Mr. Loughton) on 26 February 1998, Official Report, column 311.

SCOTLAND

Publications

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those European Commission (a) newsletters, (b) magazines and (c) occasional publications to which his Department subscribes. [33651]

Mr. MacDonald: The Scottish Office subscribes to the following European Commission publications:

Com Documents of the commission of the European Communities;

Directory of Community legislation in force and other Acts of the community institutions;

Official Journal of the European Communities, Series C, Series L, Series S;

Index to the Official Journal of the European Communities;

Debates of the European Parliament

Cairngorm Funicular Railway

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what conditions the planning agreement for the proposed funicular railway on Cairngorm place on Highlands and Island Enterprise; and how expenditure to be incurred in fulfilling these conditions is to be approved. [33601]

Mr. MacDonald: There are a number of references to Highland and Islands Enterprise in the Agreement relative to the funicular railway on Cairngorm entered into under section 50 of the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Act 1972 and section 49A of the Countryside (Scotland) Act 1967. The majority of the references concern the need for HIE to be consulted or notified in certain circumstances, or for that body to have discussions with the other parties to the Agreement in certain circumstances. The Agreement also provides for HIE to be given a period in which to seek an alternative operator for the funicular railway in the event of the Cairngorm Chairlift Company Limited discontinuing its operation. If an alternative operator cannot be found, there is a duty placed on that Company to dismantle the railway and reinstate the site. Should the Company fail to fulfil that obligation, the Agreement requires HIE to fulfil it.

Any future expenditure on the funicular railway incurred by Highland and Islands Enterprise as a result of the application of these conditions would be subject to the usual approval arrangements which apply to the annual grant in aid to that body and to any specific approval arrangements which apply to projects involving expenditure beyond the budgetary limits delegated to that body.

Dounreay

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 6 March 1998, Official Report, columns 778–79, on Dounreay, if it is the responsibility of the Health and Safety Executive to monitor the stability of the contents of the storage shaft and other radioactive waste repositories at Dounreay. [34165]

Mr. MacDonald: Responsibility for safety at the Dounreay site, including monitoring the stability of radioactive waste, lies with the site operator, the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

School Bus Services

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he proposes to improve safety on school bus services in Scotland. [34029]

Mr. McLeish: The Government recognise the importance of high safety standards on school transport. Regulations, which are already in place, cover issues such as bus and coach construction, operator licensing and conduct and these apply equally across the board to all Public Service Vehicles. Construction regulations have recently been amended to require seat belts for children on minibuses and coaches when used on specific journeys. Decisions about the provision of supervision on school transport are for education authorities, as part of their overall responsibilities to provide a school transport service. Guidance on the provision of school transport, including safety matters, was issued by The Scottish Office to local authorities in April 1996.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the size of the membership of the Scottish Parliament following the next report of the Boundary Commission, pursuant to Clause 81 of the Scotland Bill. [34276]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 13 March 1998]: None. I cannot anticipate the recommendations of the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Scotland.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to attend a meeting of the Council of Ministers of the European Union in relation to agriculture. [34278]

Mr. MacDonald [holding answer 13 March 1998]: My noble Friend the Minister with responsibility for agriculture, the environment and fisheries in Scotland attended two Agriculture Councils last year and will attend future meetings as appropriate.

Work-related Injuries

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of (a) claims brought and (b) occasions when compensation was paid, by Scottish courts in respect of injuries received at work for each of the last five years indicating the number of injuries recorded per 100,000 persons at work in Scotland in each year or as much information as is readily available to him. [34572]

Mr. McLeish: This information is not held centrally.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from student representatives at Scottish universities about (a) the introduction of tuition fees in higher education and (b) the different treatment of students from Scotland and Europe as against those from England, Wales and Northern Ireland in relation to tuition fees for the fourth year of a Scottish degree course. [34586]

Mr. Wilson: I have received representations on both matters from the National Union of Students (Scotland), the Students' Associations of Dundee, Edinburgh, and St. Andrews Universities; and the Students' Representative Councils of Aberdeen and Glasgow Universities. Napier University Students' Association made representations on the introduction of tuition fees in higher education; Heriot Watt University Students' Association made representations on the different treatment of English, Welsh and Northern Irish students compared to those from Scotland.

Fisheries

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking in respect of the representation of Scottish fishing interests in the European Council of Ministers after the setting up of the Scottish Parliament. [34589]

Mr. MacDonald: The Government remain committed to involving Scottish Ministers in relevant Council meetings, which could include Scottish Ministers speaking for the UK in appropriate cases. Whoever speaks will do so on behalf of the UK as a whole and to an agreed UK position. Scottish fishing interests will therefore continue to be properly represented.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Middle East

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to further the Middle East peace process through the targeting of (a) the UK's and (b) the EU's aid to the region. [34727]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development plans to continue a programme of high quality development projects in the West Bank and Gaza, which are designed to be supportive of the Middle East Peace Process. Our projects are targeted at reducing poverty, strengthening the private sector and building up the Palestinian Authority's (PA) administrative capacity. We will do what we can to help give a new impetus to the peace process.

The EC aid programme to the PA, which is due to expire in 1998, has helped the Peace Process survive under very difficult circumstances. The UK will support its renewal which would demonstrate the EU's continuing commitment to the process. The programme is currently being evaluated by the European Commission and we will be seeking to ensure that lessons learned about quality and effectiveness are fully taken into account in the future.

Sanctions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in her plans to develop sanctions which hit elites rather than the mass of the people. [34769]

Mr. Foulkes: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development on 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 288.

WALES

National Assembly

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the cost to each council which put forward a bid for the site of the National Assembly for Wales of that bid. [33279]

Mr. Ron Davies: This is a matter for each individual Council, who will have determined the level of expenditure appropriate to the submission of their proposal.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking in respect of the representation of Welsh farming interests in the European Council of Ministers after the setting up of the National Assembly for Wales. [34587]

Mr. Ron Davies: Assembly Secretaries will be able to play a part in relevant meetings of the Council of Ministers as part of the UK team. As the UK lead Minister, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will have overall responsibility for the UK's line in agricultural negotiations. Assembly Secretaries will be able to speak, with the Minister's agreement, to advance the UK line in Brussels.

The arrangements will be spelled out in concordats which will be agreed in due course between the Assembly and the Government.

Civil Servants

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many non-career civil servants were appointed to his Department between 1 May 1996 and 30 April 1997. [33275]

Mr. Ron Davies: Between 1 May 1996 and 30 April 1997, my Department appointed 293 non-career civil servants on short term, temporary appointments.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many TB cases there were in Wales in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [33536]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information is given in the following table.

Notifications of TB in Wales

Gwent Tertiary College

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if, in respect of the projects for which Gwent Tertiary College successfully requested EU funding in the past three years, he will list the projects which (a) have and (b) have not received that funding and in each case the amounts received by (i) the college and (ii) the project; [34532]

(2) if he will list the projects for which Gwent Tertiary College received European Union funding in each of the last three years; [33904]

(3) if he will list the projects submitted by the Gwent Tertiary College for European funding in the past three years; which were successful; and what sums they involved. [33457]

Mr. Hain: A list of the projects has been placed in the Library of the House. ERDF Payments are made in arrears on receipt of claims submitted quarterly for the actual expenditure incurred by the college on a project. ESF payments are made to the successful applicant and not directly to projects. The applicant organisation is then responsible for delivering the project in line with the approved project specification.

Welsh Tourist Board

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the grant-in-aid to the Welsh Tourist Board in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [33503]

Mr. Hain: Welsh Office grant-in-aid for the Wales Tourist Board in the period 1996 to 1999 is as follows:

£ million

	1996–97 Outturn	1997–98 Forecast outturn	1998–99 Plans
Net provision	14.7	15.0	14.4

Farmers Subsidies

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the total sum paid to farmers in Wales under the (a) sheep annual premium, (b) suckler cow premium, (c) hill livestock compensation allowance, (d) arable area payment, (e) Tir Cymen and (f) environmentally sensitive area payment schemes in the last full year for which figures are available. [34510]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Total expenditure in Wales during 1996–97 was as follows:

(a) Sheep Annual Premium Scheme	131,481
(b) Suckler Cow Premium Scheme	38,320
(c) Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances Scheme	27,852
(d) Arable Crops Area Payments	11,983
(e) Tir Cymen	4,900
(f) Environmentally Sensitive Areas	3,456

Road Maintenance

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the amount spent by each unitary authority on road maintenance in each of the last five years. [34350]

Mr. Hain: The available information is given in the following table. Information for unitary authorities is not available prior to 1996–97.

District Health Authorities

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a comparative list of Welsh district health authorities, or combinations of district health authorities, as constituted before and after 1 April 1996. [34355]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Prior to 1 April 1995, there were 9 district health authorities (DHAs) in Wales: Gwynedd, Clwyd, Powys, East Dyfed, Pembrokeshire, West Glamorgan, Mid Glamorgan, South Glamorgan and Gwent. On 1 April 1995, the East Dyfed and Pembrokeshire DHAs merged to form Dyfed DHA. There were thus 8 DHAs, matching the 8 family health service authorities (FHSAs) and 8 former counties.

On 1 April 1996, health authorities and local government in Wales were reorganised. The 8 DHAs and 8 FHSAs were reformed into 5 unified health authorities, as follows.

A new North Wales Health Authority was created covering the former Gwynedd and Clwyd (with a minor change to the boundary between the former Clwyd and Powys, to reflect new local authority boundaries). A new Dyfed Powys Health Authority was formed covering the former Dyfed and Powys. The new Morgannwg Health Authority covered former West Glamorgan plus that part of the former Mid Glamorgan DHA area that fell within the new county borough of Bridgend. The new Gwent Health Authority included the former Gwent DHA area plus that part of the former Mid Glamorgan DHA area falling within the new county borough of Caerphilly. The new Bro Taf Health Authority covered former South Glamorgan plus the remaining parts of the former Mid Glamorgan DHA area.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide additional assistance to companies in Wales to relieve the effects of (a) changes in the exchange rate since 1 May 1997 and (b) changes to the ACT rules in July 1997. [33618]

Mr. Hain: No. The Government recognise the difficulties for exporters and manufacturers affected by the strong pound and the effect on exchange rates and exports is a factor that the Bank of England takes into account in determining interest rates. The Government are committed to delivering a stable macro-economic framework in which businesses will be better able to plan for the long term.

The abolition of payable tax credits in July 1997 removed a significant distortion from the tax system which encouraged companies to pay out profits as dividends rather than to retain them for investment. It was accompanied by 2 per cent. cuts in the main and the small companies' rates of corporation tax, backdated to 1 April 1997. These changes are for the long-term benefit of the UK economy, as so for companies in Wales.

Publications

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those European Commission (a) newsletters, (b) magazines and (c) occasional publications to which his Department subscribes. [33654]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office subscribes to the following European Commission publications:

COM and SEC series papers

Eurobarometer

European Economy

European File

Eurostat Quarterly National Accounts

The Week in Europe.

Regional Selective Assistance

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, for each offer of regional selective assistance made during 1997, the percentage of the project's capital cost represented by the grant offered; and if he will indicate, for each offer, if it related to an area of full or intermediate assisted area status. [33706]

Mr. Hain: In 1997, companies in Wales accepted 161 offers of Regional Selective Assistance. Information about the capital costs of individual projects is treated as "commercial in confidence". The relationship between offer levels and capital costs varies widely according to the type of project and reflects the selective nature of RSA whereby projects are secured for the minimum necessary cost.

In development areas offer values ranged from 8.5% to 29.4% of capital costs and in intermediate areas from 1.97% to 18.7%.

Farm Incomes

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to protect Welsh farmers from further falls in their income. [33713]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government have announced an agrimonetary aid package for the livestock industry of £85 million, of which just over £12 million will go to farmers in Wales. A further £70 million was announced in February to meet the costs of the Specified Risk Material Controls on cattle, sheep and goats and the entire start-up costs of the Cattle Traceability System.

In addition, my right hon. Friend is engaged in constructive dialogue with farmers' leaders about how a viable long-term future for Welsh agriculture can be created.

Farm Payments

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve the administration of payments to farmers in Wales. [35065]

Mr. Ron Davies: Staff in the Welsh Office are working extremely hard to make payments to farmers, within the constraints of the current administrative arrangements. I am very conscious, however, that those arrangements need to be improved. As part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review process, the Welsh Office is, therefore, inviting consultants to tender for a study to assess the options for securing an improved service. I am writing to all hon. Members for Welsh constituencies with more information on the study, sending a copy of my letter to the right hon. Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) for information, and placing a copy in the Library of the House.

Rights of Entry

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) powers of entry or (b) rights he has created or is currently creating in legislation since 1 May 1997. [34588]

Mr. Ron Davies: There are none.

Welsh Health Common Services Authority

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what cost-sharing arrangements apply with respect to the void office areas in the leasing arrangements between his Department and the Welsh Health Common Services authority. [34767]

Mr. Ron Davies: All of the lease costs of Crickhowell House are paid direct by WHCSA to the landlord, Grovenor Waterside; no payments are made to the Department. The costs of vacant space have been covered from WHCSA reserves whilst the lease of Crickhowell House has been put on the market by WHCSA to obtain alternative tenants.

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the remaining units of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority which have (a) been successfully market-tested and (b) remain in Crickhowell House; and if he will list the square footage occupied, and the rental or equivalent paid to his Department as head-lessees per square foot per annum. [34766]

Mr. Ron Davies: The units of WHCSA which have been market tested and retained within the Authority and remain in Crickhowell House are:

Prescription Pricing Service

Health Solutions Wales

Welsh Health Supplies.

These three units occupy 27,945 sq ft of space. Other units of WHCSA occupy a further 71,051 sq ft of space.

All rental costs of Crickhowell House are paid directly by WHCSA to the landlord Grovenor Waterside. No payments are made to the Department.

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the rental and service charge arrangements currently applying as between (a) Associated British Ports and his Department and (b) his Department and the Welsh Health Common Services Authority. [34768]

Mr. Ron Davies: The details of arrangements with the landlord, Grovenor Waterside, are commercially confidential, under Sections 7 and 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. All moneys due to Grovenor Waterside are paid through WHCSA from the resources available to them.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Central Services Agency

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation there was with health boards and trusts about the required post-qualification experience of applicants for the post of Chief Legal Adviser in the Central Services Agency prior to the most recent advertising of the post. [33588]

Mr. Worthington: It is most unusual for Health and Social Services bodies to consult with each other on the contents of Personnel Specifications for such posts. There was no consultation in 1995 or for the current vacancy.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many years post-qualification experience was required when the post of Director of Legal Services and Chief Legal Adviser in the Central Services Agency was advertised in (a) 1973, (b) 1984, (c) 1987 and (d) 1995. [33586]

Mr. Worthington: 10 years post-qualification experience was required in 1987 and 1995. The job files relating to 1978 and 1984 have been destroyed and thus the information is not available for these years.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how long the current Chief Executive of the Central Services Agency has been in post; and how many directorates appointed during this period have been filled by (a) Roman Catholics, (b) Protestants and (c) others. [33590]

Mr. Worthington: The current Chief Executive was appointed to the position in April 1997. Since then, no Director posts have been filled.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what salary was offered for the post of Chief Legal Adviser to the Central Services Agency when the post was advertised most recently; and how many other legal posts in the public sector in Northern Ireland offer a comparable salary with the same requirement of post-qualification experience. [33589]

Mr. Worthington: The salary offered was £44,616-£53,539 per annum, inclusive of performance related pay up to a maximum of 20%.

No proper comparisons can be made across the full range of legal posts existing within the public sector in Northern Ireland as the experience and qualifications are matters for each employing authority and will depend on the particular needs and requirements of the post in question. For example, the Department of Finance and Personnel has 8 legal posts which offer a comparable salary, all of which require post-qualification experience of at least 3 years. There are also 3 legal grades in the Department of the Environment which would offer some comparable, or at least an overlapping salary to that offered to the Director of Legal Services in the Agency. These grades are:

Grade	Salary range
Senior Legal Assistant	£26,743–47,248
Deputy Registrar—Land Registers NI	£39,711–50,360
Chief Executive and Registrar of Title	£39,050–61,340

In these 3 legal grades, post qualification experience is part of the promotion requirement.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the post of Chief Legal Adviser in the Central Services Agency was last advertised; and how many years post-qualification experience was then required of applicants; and what were the reasons for changes in this requirement since the previous occasion. [33587]

Mr. Worthington: The title "Chief Legal Adviser" was replaced by "Director of Legal Services" in 1990/91. It is assumed that the reference to Chief Legal Adviser includes Director of Legal Services.

The position of Director of Legal Services (DLS) was last advertised on 13 February 1998. Five years post-qualification experience was required of applicants. The DLS provides not only a professional legal service, but is responsible for the management of the Directorate of Legal Services and for making a management contribution to the corporate and strategic management of the CSA.

The Specification was amended following the normal procedure when a post becomes vacant. It is now considered that the requirement for 10 years experience as a solicitor may preclude competent individuals from applying. Given the importance of this post, the Agency would wish to have as large a pool of applicants as possible. Selection will be on the basis of merit as measured against the professional and managerial competencies required for the post.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who is the Acting Chief Legal Adviser to the Central Services Agency; what is his salary; and how many years he has of post-qualification experience. [33591]

Mr. Worthington: The Acting Director of Legal Services is Mr. Alphonsus Maginness. Mr. Maginness's salary is £44,146 and he has 6.5 years of post-qualification experience.

Irish Medium Education

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to give (a) recognition and (b) legal status to Gaeloiliuint. [33594]

Mr. Worthington: The Department recognises Gaeloiliuint as an organisation which represents Irish-medium education interests. There are no plans to give legal status to Gaeloiliuint.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the extent to which Gaeloiliuint represents all Irish-medium schools in Northern Ireland. [33595]

Mr. Worthington: No formal assessment has been made of the extent to which Gaeloiliuint represents all Irish-medium schools in Northern Ireland.

Police Overtime

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list for each month for each of the last three years and the current year to the latest available date, the sums expended on overtime payments to the RUC and the RUCR. [34003]

Mr. Ingram: The table gives the information requested. It should be noted that overtime is paid in the month after it is actually worked.

Industrial Investment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the (a) level of financial investment by and (b) number of jobs created by the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland within Northern Ireland for the years 1987 to 1997. [34237]

Mr. Ingram: A list of the jobs promoted and safeguarded by the Industrial Development Board together with assistance offered and total project costs is set out in the table.

Jobs promoted and jobs safeguarded by the Industrial Development Board together with assistance offered and total investment

Year	Jobs promoted	Jobs safeguarded	Assistance offered (£ million)	Total investment (£ million)
1987–88	5,283	5,073	97	302
1988–89	5,653	2,430	107	400
1989–90	5,131	4,184	93	440
1990–91	4,402	4,054	82	315
1991–92	2,341	2,689	64	240
1992–93	4,104	1,877	95	344
1993–94	5,554	3,590	127	505
1994–95	4,994	3,802	102	394
1995–96	5,678	2,484	151	507
1996–97	6,005	5,577	158	638

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Tourism

14. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals he has to encourage domestic tourism; and if he will make a statement. [32911]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Domestic tourism is indeed, of such importance that one of the Forum Working Groups helping with the development of the Government's tourism strategy is specifically looking at issues which affect it.

28. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he next intends to meet the chairman of the English Tourist Board to discuss projections for the future growth in tourism. [32924]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My right. hon Friend the Secretary of State will next meet the Chairman of the English Tourist Board on 19 March.

World Cup 2006

15. Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the prospects for England hosting the 2006 soccer World Cup. [32912]

Mr. Banks: I believe that the FA's bid to stage the 2006 World Cup is an excellent one and stands a very good chance of success.

22. Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support he plans to give to the campaign to host the 2006 World Cup. [32919]

23. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support he plans to give to the campaign to host the 2006 World Cup. [32920]

Mr. Banks: The Government are providing the fullest diplomatic and promotional support for the bid. I hold regular meetings with the FA Campaign Team. I have personally discussed the bid with several members of the FIFA Executive Committee, either here in London or in their home countries. I will continue to accompany FA delegations to promote the bid, as Parliamentary business allows.

Tourism (Yorkshire)

16. Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on how the New Deal can help the tourist industry in Yorkshire. [32913]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The New Deal will help the tourism industry in Yorkshire, and in the UK as a whole, by providing recruits who can become the well trained workforce which the industry needs to meet its full competitive potential.

Music

17. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the contribution of music to the UK economy. [32914]

Mr. Chris Smith: Music makes an enormous contribution to the UK economy: the value added is over £2.5 billion, the surplus on overseas trade is over £500 million, and there are over 115,000 people employed full-time in the music business.

Tourism (South-East)

18. Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in what ways the new tourism forum will assist the tourist industry in the south-east outside London. [32915]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I am working closely with the Tourism Forum and its Working Groups to develop an effective, comprehensive strategy for tourism which will benefit all regions, including the South-East outside London, into the next century.

Public Libraries (IT)

19. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress he has made in encouraging the use of information technology in public libraries. [32917]

Mr. Chris Smith: I am currently considering a report from my Library and Information Commission which recommends the development of information technology applications by public libraries. We will be responding to the report's recommendations shortly.

Art Market (London)

20. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received concerning London's art market. [32918]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have received representations from the British Art Market Federation and from individuals. I am aware of the concerns about any measures which may have an effect on the operation of the UK art trade.

The art trade makes an important contribution to the economy of this country; and the Government wish to ensure that the UK art market maintains its pre-eminent international position.

London Film Commission

21. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the future of the London Film Commission. [32939]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The London Film Commission (LFC) carries out very valuable work. We are currently considering with the LFC and others how to ensure that this work has a secure future.

European Convention on Human Rights

24. Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the impact that incorporation of the European convention on human rights would have on press regulation and privacy. [32921]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Human Rights Bill will require the Courts to take account of Strasbourg caselaw in determining conflicts between Convention rights, including privacy and freedom of expression. In practice, the Convention has been used in Strasbourg to uphold the freedom of the press. So, in requiring the Courts to take account of Strasbourg caselaw in determining conflicts between Convention rights, the Bill can be expected to strengthen press freedoms. The need for effective press self-regulation, under the Press Complaints Commission, will be as great as it is now.

Cornish Language

25. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals he has to support the Cornish language. [32894]

Mr. Banks: Cornish is of Celtic origin and has not been spoken as a living language since the 18th century and we have no current plans to promote it. However, I recognise my hon. Friend's close interest in such matters and trust he will use his customary zeal and imagination to draw wider attention to the plight of Cornish.

Theatre

26. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he will next review Her Majesty's Government's policy for funding theatres and theatre companies in England; and if he will make a statement. [32922]

Mr. Chris Smith: It is for the Arts Council of England and the regional arts boards, in conjunction with local authorities and other funding partners, to formulate policy for theatres within the overall levels of funding available.

Social Exclusion

27. Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the role of his Department in contributing to the Government's policies to combat social exclusion. [32923]

Mr. Chris Smith: All the sectors represented by my Department—including sport, the arts and broadcasting—offer opportunities to tackle the problems of social exclusion. We are working with the Social Exclusion Unit to ensure that we fully exploit those opportunities.

Local Authority Services

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to assist local authorities in applying the principles of best value to the provision of cultural and leisure services. [32903]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department will work closely with local government to determine how the principles of best value can best be applied to cultural and leisure services. We shall encourage local authorities to produce cultural strategies which will lead them to challenge the purpose of services, compare their performance with others, consult their communities, and introduce competition where appropriate.

PE (National Curriculum)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assurances he has sought from the Secretary of State for Education and Employment concerning the role of the PE profession in developing sport for young people through National Curriculum PE following recent decisions affecting the National Curriculum. [30440]

Mr. Banks: I have regular discussions with colleagues in the Department for Education and Employment to discuss a whole range of matters of mutual interest. We are well aware of the important role the PE profession plays in developing sport for young people and will continue to work with them to ensure that the PE and sporting opportunities children get are of the highest standard possible, whether they are delivered through the curriculum or by out-of-school activities.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Right to Roam

42. Mr. Bayley: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make a statement about the Church Commissioners' policy towards the right to roam on land which they own. [32938]

Mr. Stuart Bell: The Commissioners are committed to protecting public rights of way over their land. Where it would not adversely affect their tenants, they are also in favour of the creation of voluntary access opportunities.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Site Decontamination

30. Mr. Cash: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what representations he has received on decontamination of the Millennium Dome site. [32927]

Mr. Mandelson: The decontamination of this site is the responsibility of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and its agency, English Partnerships. The remediation works for the Millennium Experience site have been completed within the agreed timetable and within the original budget.

Cost

31. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what is his Department's latest estimate of the cost of the Millennium Experience at Greenwich. [32928]

Mr. Mandelson: The budget for the Millennium Experience comprises a grant of £399 million from the Millennium Commission and income totalling £395 million from private sector sponsorship and commercial revenue. The project remains within this budget.

Spirit Zone

33. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on progress in attracting sponsorship for the Spirit Level zone in the Millennium Dome. [32930]

Mr. Mandelson: In addition to the sponsorship commitments announced on 24 February, the New Millennium Experience Company is currently in negotiation with 40 potential sponsor companies for zones in the Dome. I understand that efforts are being made through the Second Church Estates Commissioner to establish a fund-raising committee, and I warmly welcome this.

Millennium Dome Content

34. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what plans he has to include material of significant historical interest in the Millennium Dome. [32931]

Mr. Mandelson: In looking forward to how we can all make a difference in the Third Millennium, we shall try to ensure that the Dome's content will reflect many aspects of our rich heritage.

Additionally the associated national programme of projects and activities will include an oral history programme which will provide an extraordinary archive of memories recorded by individuals; and a Millennium Treasures project which will identify and celebrate the nation's favourite sites and objects.

Regional Benefits

35. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what plans he has to ensure that all parts of the United Kingdom benefit from the Millennium Experience at Greenwich. [32932]

Mr. Mandelson: Everyone in the UK will get a chance to take an active part in the Millennium Experience through the associated national programme of events and activities around the country. The programme's aim is to inspire and engage people under the theme Time to make a Difference. It will bring people and communities together in projects which will reflect and contribute to the themes of the Dome. The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is also working with the Millennium Commission and the other National Lottery distributors to deliver a Millennium Festival. This programme was launched on 27 February in Bristol and a £100 million fund has been created from which it will support millennial celebrations throughout the UK in the year 2000.

Christian Content

36. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how he intends to emphasise the Christian character of the millennium celebrations at Greenwich. [32933]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is working closely with the Lambeth Consultation Group to ensure that the contents of the Millennium Experience reflects the significance of the Millennium as a Christian anniversary whilst remaining accessible and relevant to those of other faiths and beliefs. The Archbishops' Officer for the Millennium, a member of the Lambeth group, is working with the Company on a part-time basis to advise on how best this can be achieved.

Visitors

37. Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will estimate the number of people from the north-west who will visit the Dome. [32934]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) estimate that 12 million visits will be made to the Millennium Experience. About eight million of those will be from the UK, and I hope that many of those will come from the North West. I also hope that as many people as possible from the North West and across the country participate in the associated Challenge and the Millennium Festival programmes.

Millennium Experience

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what consultations he has had with (a) the Women's Institutes and (b) the Mothers' Union about his plans for the Millennium Experience. [33809]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company has not held formal consultations with either body. The company is, however, working with a number of expert panels and groups—including the Advisory Group on accessibility, the Lambeth Group, and the Creative Review Group—to ensure that as broad a range of interests as possible are reflected in developing the content of the Experience, both at the Dome and in the national Challenge programme.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Treaty of Amsterdam (Tapes)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the General Secretariat have informed the Government as President of the Council of Ministers that the tapes of the Treaty of Amsterdam negotiations contain material on opt-in procedures by opt-out Schengen states. [34083]

Mr. Doug Henderson: No.

Immigration

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his policy that entry clearance officers should refuse entry to the United Kingdom because an applicant has legally extended a previous visit beyond six months; and if he will make a statement. [34162]

Mr. Fatchett: Entry Clearance Officers are required by the Immigration Rules to be satisfied that an applicant qualifies for admission in the capacity sought.

The fact that a person has legally extended a previous visit to the UK beyond six months is not, of itself, a reason for refusal. But an applicant's record of adherence to undertakings made in connection with previous entry clearance applications is a relevant factor when considering future applications.

Nepal

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action (a) the United Kingdom and (b) its EU partners are taking to resolve the problem of the Bhutanese refugees currently living in camps in Nepal. [34512]

Mr. Fatchett: We shall continue to use every opportunity to encourage the governments of Nepal and Bhutan in their dialogue on this issue. The EU raised the refugee problem in its statement to the Third Committee at the UN General Assembly in November 1997. As Presidency, we are working with EU partners to ensure that our concerns are raised during the forthcoming UN Commission on Human Rights.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy towards an internationally monitored verification process to determine which of the refugee population in Nepal have a right to return to Bhutan. [34513]

Mr. Fatchett: We shall continue our support for UNHCR, who have made it clear that they stand ready to help with any repatriation project agreed between the governments of Bhutan and Nepal.

GCHQ

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the procedure and timescale he will follow in making a decision on the future location of GCHQ in Cheltenham, indicating progress to date. [34511]

Mr. Robin Cook: Tenders for GCHQ's New Accommodation PFI were returned as scheduled on 16 February by all four private sector consortia. GCHQ and its professional advisers are now engaged in the post-tender process. An announcement on the future location of GCHQ is expected during the second half of the year.

Arms Exports (Iraq)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the quantity of arms exported to Iraq since the Gulf War originating (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) elsewhere. [34344]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The UK has complied with the UN arms embargo since it was imposed on Iraq in 1990 under United Nations Security Council Resolution 661. While we would expect other countries to abide by the embargo, we cannot comment on any supplies that may have reached Iraq from elsewhere.

Arms Trade

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking during their presidency of the EU to facilitate the development and implementation of an EU code of conduct on the arms trade. [34241]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Westbury (Mr. Faber) on 2 February 1998, Official Report, columns 542–43. Since 2 February, we have had one round of discussions with our EU partners and a revised draft will be circulated to them shortly.

Geneva Conference on Disarmament

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to ensure that the Geneva Conference on Disarmament includes multilateral disarmament on its agenda. [34514]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Conference on Disarmament adopted an agenda for the 1998 session on 20 January. This includes a number of items relevant to multilateral disarmament. We are pressing for the establishment of Ad Hoc Committees to work on a ban on anti-personnel landmines and on a Fissile Material Cut-off Treaty.

Chemical and Biological Weapons

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries are currently the subject of international inspections of their chemical and biological weapon capability. [34345]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: One hundred and seven (107) countries are Parties to the Chemical Weapons Convention, and hence subject to the inspections provided for under that Treaty. The Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention does not currently have an inspection regime; but the UK is pressing for the early conclusion of the negotiations on a Protocol which will fill this serious gap. Separate arrangements apply to Iraq, under the relevant UN Security Council resolutions.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution in (a) cash terms and (b) as a percentage of the total the UK will make to the running costs of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons over the next five years. [33940]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The UK's assessed contribution for the 1998 budget (calendar) year is:

UK Dfl 6,755,779 5.32%

(Dfl 3.376 = £1 on 12/3/98)

The UK's percentage contribution will decrease slightly as more signatories accede to the Convention over the next few years, for which assessed contributions have yet to be determined.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of recent allegations by Ken Alibekov that Russia has continued to develop biological weapons in contravention of the 1972 Biological Weapons Convention; and if he will make a statement. [33942]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: In 1992, the Russian government admitted that the Soviet Union had conducted an offensive biological weapons programme, in violation of the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention, and President Yeltsin issued a decree requiring that any non-compliant activity be terminated. Mr. Alibekov's allegations refer to the earlier programme. We continue to urge the Russian Federation to provide assurance of its full compliance with the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the (a) chemical and biological weapons research programmes being undertaken and (b) stocks of such weapons held by (i) Iran, (ii) Syria, (iii) Libya, (iv) China, (v) North Korea and (vi) Sudan; and if he will make a statement. [33944]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Assessments of this type are based on intelligence material on which it has been the practice of successive governments not to comment.

In the case of Iraq, the information we have supplied about chemical and biological weapons is based on material published by UNSCOM. Nothing comparable exists for these other countries.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to encourage Egypt to sign and ratify the Chemical Weapons Convention. [33946]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are committed to making the Chemical Weapons Convention universal. We particularly regret that a number of countries in the Middle East—including Egypt—have not become parties to the Convention. We shall take every suitable opportunity to urge them to do so. As Presidency, we also plan to make EU demarches to that end.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries in arrears in their payments to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons; and what is the amount of arrears concerned. [33938]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Most of the 107 State Parties to the Chemical Weapons Convention are currently in arrears with their payments, although the amounts involved are in many cases quite small in either percentage or absolute terms. It may therefore be easier to name those countries which were fully paid up for the 1998 budget year by the eighth session of the OPCW Executive Council from 27–30 January 1998:

Australia

Bahrain

Canada

Netherlands

New Zealand

Slovak Republic

Sweden

United Kingdom.

At that point, some 85.3 per cent. of the 1997 budget contributions and 96.1 per cent. of the 1993–97 Preparatory Commission contributions had been paid. The total arrears until that point amounted to Dfl 16.937,000.

(Dfl 3.376 = £1 on 12/3/98)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of the total (i) France, (ii) Germany, (iii) the USA and (iv) Japan will be making to the running costs of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons over the next five years. [33939]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The assessed contributions for these countries for the 1998 budget (calendar) year are:

Country	Dfl	Percentage
France	8,152,650	6.5
Germany	11,505,141	9.06
USA	30,611,125	25.00
Japan	19,873,671	15.65

Note:
Dfl 3.376 = £1 on 12 March 1998

These percentage contributions will decrease slightly as more signatories accede to the Convention over the next few years, for which assessed contributions have yet to be determined.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost of disposing of Russian chemical weapons stocks; and how much of that cost in (a) cash terms and (b) as a percentage of the total will be covered by (i) the UK, (ii) France, (iii) Germany, (iv) the USA and (v) Japan. [33941]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Chemical Weapons Convention makes clear that the responsibility for chemical weapons destruction rests with the possessor state. Without prejudice to this principle, the EU has pledged up to 15 million ECU of TACIS (Technical Assistance to the Commonwealth of Independent States) funding for projects in chemical weapon destruction-related areas. A number of countries have also offered bilateral assistance, including the United States, Germany, the Netherlands, Finland and Sweden. We do not have precise or detailed figures for those countries' offers of assistance, but the total amount of foreign (non-Russian) assistance so far represents only a small proportion of the overall costs—estimated by Russia at more than US$4 billion.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Director-General of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons; and if he will make a statement. [33943]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Neither my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary nor I have met the Director-General of the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW), Dr. Bustani. But we maintain regular contact with him and his staff through our Embassy in The Hague.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on negotiations on a compliance and verification regime for the Biological Weapons Convention. [33945]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The most recent session of the Ad Hoc Group of States Parties, which is negotiating verification and compliance Protocol to strengthen the Biological Weapons Convention, took place in Geneva from 9–13 March. The UK is playing a leading role in these negotiations. At our initiative, the European Union agreed on 5 March a Common Position which makes clear our determination to promote decisive progress in the negotiations in the course of this year. We believe—not least in the light of the revelations of Iraq's extensive biological weapons programme—that strengthening the Biological Weapons Convention is both urgent and achievable.

Policy Formulation

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the methods by which policy formulation is conducted within his Department. [33934]

Mr. Fatchett: Ministers take policy decisions on the basis of advice from officials. Such advice draws on many sources of information including diplomatic posts, other Governments, and organisations and individuals outside government.

Foreign Policy Centre

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department will make any financial contribution to the Foreign Policy Centre. [33935]

Mr. Fatchett: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements he has established for liaison between his Department and the Foreign Policy Centre. [33937]

Mr. Fatchett: The Foreign Policy Centre will present papers to Ministers and FCO officials on its own initiative and invite Ministers and officials to its seminars.

Antarctic Environmental Protocol

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what expenditure is undertaken by the British Government or agencies on its behalf of the monitoring of tourism and fishing within the area covered by the Antarctic Environmental Protocol. [34304]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Details of tourist and fishing vessels within the Antarctic Treaty Area are recorded by the British Antarctic Survey and the Royal Navy, as appropriate whilst undertaking their other tasks. No separately identifiable expenditure relates to this activity.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evaluation of reports by the British Antarctic Survey is undertaken by his Department; and how these reports are made available to signatory countries to the Antarctic Environmental Protocol. [34305]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Comprehensive reports on the operations of the British Antarctic Survey (BAS) are submitted and evaluated as required by the permitting provisions of the Antarctic Act 1994. In addition, the annual Report of BAS and the UK's annual Exchange of Information required by the Antarctic Treaty are provided to all Antarctic Treaty Consultative Parties, and made publicly available.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the Secretariat proposed in the Antarctic Environmental Protocol to be established; and where it will be sited. [34303]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 26 November 1997, Official Report, column 547, and on 21 January 1998, Official Report, column 541. There have been no new developments.

Although not formally on the agenda, it is likely that the Secretariat will be discussed in the margins of the forthcoming Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meeting in Tromso, Norway, in May.

UN Security Council Resolution 425

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 425. [34726]

Mr. Fatchett: We have consistently supported UNSCR 425 and the territorial integrity of Lebanon. We welcome Israel's willingness to address this issue. UNSCR 425 does not however provide for any conditions to be set. We believe progress on all tracks of the peace process would help create the conditions for successful implementation of SCR 425.

Export Initiative

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he proposes to implement his Department's new export initiative based on the recommendations of the Export Forum. [34720]

Mr. Fatchett: This Department and the Department of Trade and Industry will shortly make an announcement of a new package of measures to help smaller exporters.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he plans to ensure that there is an improved service for potential exporters from his Department. [34721]

Mr. Fatchett: Meeting the needs of potential exporters effectively is key to our commercial work. Together with the Department of Trade and Industry, we are introducing a new Sales Lead Service, to better match sales leads gathered by posts with potential British suppliers. We are also improving and increasing the training of both UK-based and locally engaged staff at all levels. Nearly 40 Foreign Office staff are now studying for the Professionalism in Trade qualification, run in conjunction with the Institute of Export.

Algeria

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Algeria. [34725]

Mr. Fatchett: The Algerian Foreign Minister has accepted in principle an invitation to visit London to continue the EU/Algeria political dialogue. No date has been set. Timing will depend on respective diary commitments.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his meeting of 11 March with Wei Jingsheng. [34723]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary had a full and friendly meeting with Mr. Wei Jingsheng on 11 March. My right hon. Friend expressed Britain's continuing concerns on human rights in China and briefed Mr. Wei on the EU's agreed position. Mr. Wei recognised that the UK had spoken out strongly about human rights in China.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what time his meeting with Wei Jingsheng on 11 March terminated. [34694]

Mr. Robin Cook: Both I and the Foreign Office Press Office expected Wei Jingsheng to arrive at 12 noon. A photocall had been arranged for that time. I regret that, as a result of an error, Wei Jingsheng was invited for 11 am. As soon as I heard that Wei Jingsheng had arrived, I interrupted the meeting I was in so that I could see him. My meeting with Wei Jingsheng started at 11.15 am and finished shortly before midday. I then resumed the meeting I had earlier interrupted.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will made a statement on the Minister of State's visit to Tirana and Skopje on 11 March. [34728]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I met Foreign Minister Milo and the Minister of State at the Prime Ministry, Islami, in Tirana. I emphasised that Contact Group's support for the Albanian Government's responsible and constructive stand on Kosovo. The Albanians reiterated the Government's commitment to a peaceful solution on Kosovo. In Skopje, I met President Gligorov, Prime Minster Crvenkovski and Foreign Minister Handziski who expressed full support for the Contact Group's position. They warmly welcomed the Contact Group's commitment to maintaining an international military presence on the border of Macedonia.

Departmental Commerciality

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress he has made since 1 May 1997 in making his Department more commercial. [34730]

Mr. Fatchett: We are committed to making this Department more business-like. We have introduced a new scheme of short-term attachments of business people to posts. One has already been completed, ten are underway, and two are due to start shortly. Thirty five of our most senior business leaders have agreed to act as Ambassadors for British business, working with our posts when they are overseas.

Human Rights (China)

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had concerning this year's UNCHR resolution to draw attention to China's record on human rights with the UN Human Rights Commissioner; and if he will publish a minute of the meeting. [34724]

Mr. Fatchett: The Minister for State, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) discussed the European Union decision not to support a resolution on China at the UNCHR when he met the UN High Commission on Human Rights on 9 March 1998. We have no plans to publish a minute of that meeting.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations were made to him by Wei Jingsheng during their meeting of 11 March concerning his decision not to support this year's UNCHR resolution drawing attention to China's record on human rights. [34722]

Mr. Fatchett: At their meeting on 11 March, Mr. Wei said that the EU dialogue with China had not produced positive results and spoke in favour of a CHR resolution. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary assured him that the UK and its EU partners remained totally committed to pressing for improvements in China's human rights record. We believed the dialogue-based approach offered the best prospects.

Human Rights

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what practice is adopted in British embassies for the monitoring of human rights matters. [34308]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: As part of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's commitment to put human rights at the centre of foreign policy, Foreign Office departments have now begun to formulate country human rights strategies to focus policies and project work in respect of countries where human rights concerns exist. The on-going monitoring by posts and departments of respect for human rights, through contacts with both government and civil society, will contribute to this process.

The first annual human rights report will provide an additional opportunity for the public to comment on the government's human rights activities and to assist us in identifying the way forward.

Internet

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what time on 11 March his Department's website was updated to include the FCO Daily Bulletin for that day. [34729]

Mr. Fatchett: The Daily Bulletin was posted on the FCO Website at 13.38 on Tuesday 11 March 1998.

HEALTH

Childhood Cancer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the trends over the last 20 years, in cancer incidence in children, with particular reference to cancers of the CNS and leukaemia (a) nationally and (b) in the area covered by the East Anglian Regional Health Authority. [33385]

Mr. Boateng: Tables showing the numbers of newly diagnosed cases, and crude and directly age standardised rates per 100,000 population for all leukaemias (ICD8 204–207, ICD9 204–208) and cancers of the central nervous system (ICD 8 and 9, 191–192), for children (aged under 15) in a) England and Wales, and (b) East Anglian Regional Health Authority, in the years 1971–1992, have been placed in the Library.

The trends were examined by fitting regressions to each time series. The results were:

Leukaemias

England and Wales

The directly age standardised rates in males showed a rise of 10 per cent. over the 21 year period; the trend was at borderline significance—p = 0.1.

The directly age standardised rates in females showed a 19 per cent. rise between 1971 and 1992; the trend was significant at the 5 per cent. level—p = 0.01

East Anglian RHA

There was a downward trend in the rates for males, not quite reaching significance at the 5 per cent. level, but visual inspection shows a step at the end of the 1970s (higher in the 1970s and lower in the 1980s) with no obvious trend over the last 14 years.

There was no trend in the rates for females.

Cancers of the central nervous system

There were no significant trends at all in either England and Wales or the East Anglian RHA.

It is difficult to separate true increases in incidence from improvements in case ascertainment by regional cancer registers. The number of cases in England and Wales for leukaemia and cancers of the central nervous system are not large compared with all ages and other cancers, and the numbers for the East Anglian RHA are very small, hence the apparent large fluctuations in numbers and rates from year to year.

The Childhood Cancer Research Group (CCRG), which receives core and project funding from the Department and the Scottish Office, has examined trends in incidence of childhood cancers. They have found little evidence of any increase in incidence of cancers of the central nervous system. There appears to be a small increase in childhood leukaemias but it is not possible to draw any conclusions at this stage about the possible causes of this. The CCRG will continue to investigate trends in incidence and the possible causes of any increase, or decrease, in the incidence of these malignancies.

Renal Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of renal services by the South Lancashire NHS Trust. [33953]

Mr. Milburn: It is for the health authority to decide the appropriate services for the local population. The health authority's strategy envisages development of a 'hub and spoke' model of care with the Royal Preston Hospital acting as the 'hub' for most areas of Lancashire and South Cumbria, the exception being the West Lancashire part of the District where it is envisaged that the Royal Liverpool Hospital would continue to act as the 'hub'.

Although implementation of many of the recommendations of the strategy are subject to available resources and competing priorities, the clinical needs of patients will be given priority.

NHS Productivity

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to measure changes in the productivity of the National Health Service. [34027]

Mr. Milburn: We are committed to a revised approach to measuring National Health Service performance. We are currently consulting on a new national framework for assessing performance, which will be used to demonstrate the progress of the NHS in making best use of its resources to ensure that the quality of local health services and the health of local people are getting better every year. The new approach will include demanding targets on unit costs and productivity throughout the NHS, with NHS trusts required to publish and benchmark their costs on a consistent basis.

Organ Donations

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has evaluated into the advantages of introducing a requirement for individuals to indicate their preferences in regard to organ donation. [34015]

Mr. Boateng: The Department is not aware of any research into this possibility. We are currently considering policy options for increasing organ donation. Organ donation is a very sensitive issue and any action taken must command public confidence.

Kidney Transplants

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many kidney transplants were performed in each year since 1990; [34011]

(2) how many patients were on waiting lists for kidney transplants in each year since 1990. [34010]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not collected centrally. However, I understand from the United Kingdom Transplant Support Services Authority that the figures are:

Cadaveric kidney transplants performed in the United Kingdom

Year	Number
1991	1,621
1992	1,641
1993	1,571
1994	1,610
1995	1,645
1996	1,545
1997	1,535

Patients on waiting lists for kidney transplants

Year	Number
1990	3,185
1992	3,768
1993	3,949
1994	3,957
1995	4,068
1997	4,460

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated survival time for a recipient of a kidney transplant. [34012]

Mr. Boateng: The United Kingdom Transplant Support Services Authority survival estimates for patients who have received a first cadaveric kidney transplant in the United Kingdom or Republic of Ireland are as follows:

Survival

1 Year—92 per cent.

3 Years—86 per cent.

5 Years—80 per cent.

10 Years—63 per cent.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the current estimated costs of (a) a kidney transplant and (b) one year's kidney dialysis. [34013]

Mr. Boateng: In 1996 (the latest year available) the cost of a renal transplant operation varied between £10,000 and £15,000 with follow-up treatment costing around £3,000 per year.

In 1996 (the latest year available), the cost of hospital haemodialysis varied between £145 to £170 per session averaging £25,000 per patient per year. The cost of minimal care haemodialysis was in the region of £20,000 per year. The cost of home haemodialysis was about £1,200 per patient per month (about £15,000 per year) and the cost of continuous ambulatory peritoneal dialysis was about £1,675 per month (about £20,000 per year).

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish further material on the study into the impact of the national minimum wage on NHS staff costs referred to in Government evidence to the Low Pay Commission. [34300]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Maples) on 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 486.

Continence Products

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 65, concerning the reasons for a fall in the number of items purchased by the NHS National Supply Trust, if he will list those other factors that contributed to the drop in value and volume. [34500]

Mr. Boateng: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave on 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 65.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 65, concerning the selling of continence products, if he will ask the Chief Executive of the NHS Management Executive to write again to NHS Trust Chief Executives. [34499]

Mr. Boateng: As this guidance is extant, there are currently no plans to re-issue it.

Whittington Hospital

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement in the respect of future expansion of the Whittington Hospital of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 844, when he expects funding to be available. [34311]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive has asked the Whittington Hospital NHS Trust to bring forward proposals to improve the building fabric of the hospital. This needs to be handled through the capital planning process under which issues of funding will be addressed. The first stage of this process is the production of a strategic context document which summarises the trust's plans for developing its services and puts this in the context of the health authorities' plans for the local provision of health care. Following this, the trust can start to develop its business case for the redevelopment of the site leading, in due course, to the creation of a suitable environment for the delivery of modern health care in this part of north London. We acknowledge the Turnberg Report's emphasis on the need for swift action, but it will take some time to work through the necessary planning process.

Clinical Returns

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of progress made in providing statutory clinical returns to ICD-10 specifications using Read Codes Version 3; and if he will make a statement. [34765]

Mr. Milburn: Read Codes Version 3 contains cross-references to the International Classification of Diseases version 10 (ICD-10). This allows users to produce data required for central statistical returns in ICD-10 format.

Pembrokeshire and Derwen National Health Service Trust is using Read Codes Version 3 to produce such data for central statistical returns and has evaluated the cross-references to ICD-10. It concluded in a report that

"Read 3 now adequately supports the business and clinical information requirements of the trust with respect to diagnoses and procedures".

Copies of this report have been placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to discuss with the American authorities their intention to redefine organic food, enabling greater use of genetically modified organisms. [34098]

Mr. Rooker: The United States Department of Agriculture has published proposed rules for organic food production and has invited comments. These proposals contain several controversial features and the Government are responding both via the European Community and in the context of the Codex Committee on Food Labelling. We are making plain that we will accept only organic imports to the European Community that are produced and certified under standards equivalent to our own.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total expenditure by his Department on (i) building maintenance and (ii) office running costs, in the last year for which figures are available (a) in total and (b) broken down by offices and buildings in (1) London and (2) Scotland. [34227]

Mr. Morley: The latest complete financial year for which figures are available is 1996/97. In that year, a total of £26,725,000 was spent by the Department on building maintenance; this figure includes maintenance work, repairs and work carried out under facilities management contracts. Of the total, £3,658,000 related to offices and buildings in London while the total for Scotland was £215,000. It should be noted that the Department had only four properties in Scotland in that year.

The total expenditure by the Department in 1996/97 on office running costs (defined here as spending on utilities) was £3,483,000. Of this, a total of £411,000 related to buildings and offices in London and a total of £39,000 to property in Scotland.

Greenland Fishing Waters

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what payments are made by the EU for access to Greenland fishing waters. [34299]

Mr. Morley: Under its fisheries agreement with Greenland, the EU pays 37,700,000 ECU annually for catch quotas in Greenland waters.

Quota Hopping

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which section of his Department prepared the December 1996 supplementary memorandum for the inter-governmental conference on quota hopping. [33668]

Mr. Morley: The supplementary memorandum on quota hopping was tabled at the inter-governmental conference in December 1996 on behalf of the previous UK Government.

Farm Subsidies

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state his projections for the average level of subsidy per farm holding to be paid to (a) hill farmers, (b) dairy farmers and (c) cereal farmers for 1997–98. [33293]

Mr. Morley: The projections of average level of subsidy per full-time in England in 1997–98 are as follows:

(a) Hill farms £25,000;

(b) dairy farms £4,800 and

(c) cereals farms £39,700.

These amounts include the livestock aid package of £85m which was announced on 3 February.

Consultants

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on external consultants in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year; and if he will also estimate the cost savings resulting from the employment of such consultants for each of the above years. [26586]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The sums spent by the Department, and by its Agencies and non-Departmental Public Bodies, on external consultants for the years specified by the hon. Member are as given in the table.

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98 April-December	1997–98 Total
Core MAFF	12,266,550	10,400,134	4,938,835	10,102,677
Agencies	1,513,975	1,611,678	687,330	1,047,442
NDPBS	183,350	766,253	1,221,165	1,532,431
Total	13,963,875	12,778,065	6,847,330	12,682,550

The expenditure has resulted in the development of new and enhanced systems and working methods and from the transfer of the consultants' expertise and skills in certain fields to permanent staff.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Student Maintenance Grants

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the additional cost of maintaining existing levels of maintenance grants to students and not allowing the means testing of tuition fees in the next three years. [33462]

Dr. Howells: A policy of maintaining means-tested maintenance grants at current levels and continuing to meet tuition fees in full for home and EU full-time undergraduates and students of initial teacher training would not impose any costs in 1998–99. It would lead to forgone savings estimated at £100 million in 1999–2000 and £150 million in 2000–01, rising to £1.1 billion by 2015–16. These figures are for the United Kingdom and at 1995–96 prices. They do not reflect our decision to pay out loans on a termly basis, which released money in 1998–99.

Further Education (Funding)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the total number of applications (a) received and (b) approved by the Further Education Funding Council restructuring fund for (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1995–96 within the categories (1) teaching staff, (2) support staff and (3) management staff. [33605]

Dr. Howells: The number of applications received and approved by the Further Education Funding Council Restructuring Fund is set out in the table.

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Applications received by the FEFC	1,563	3,042	5,588
Applications approved by the FEFC	1,430	2,841	4,850

Neither colleges nor FEFC have distinguished between teaching, support or management staff in making or processing these applications.

Undergraduate Students (Fees and Grants)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the average cost of tuition fees for undergraduate students; and what is the current maximum maintenance grant available to such students. [33799]

Dr. Howells: The average fee paid on behalf of mandatory award holders by local education authorities in England and Wales in the academic year 1997–98 is estimated to be £1,250.

The current maximum maintenance grant available in 1997–98 (exclusive of any additional allowances to which the student may be entitled) is £2,160.

Sixth Form College Lecturers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department has issued to sixth form college lecturers on contractual changes since 1994. [33918]

Dr. Howells: The Department has issued no guidance to sixth form college lecturers on contractual changes since 1994.

Brewing Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take measures to safeguard jobs in the brewing industry. [33914]

Mr. Andrew Smith: We shall continue with policies of economic growth and employability, geared to the creation of employment opportunities for all, in the brewing industry as elsewhere.

New Deal (Women)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking through the New Deal to encourage young women to enter a more diverse range of occupations. [34184]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The New Deal for young people aged 18–24 is designed to help improve the job prospects of all young people who have been out of work and claiming Jobseeker's Allowance for six months, or more. It will achieve this by offering a wide range of provision, including specialist careers guidance where necessary, tailored to meet the needs, aptitudes and interest of each young person who joins the initiative, and encouraging them to consider as wide a range of appropriate opportunities as possible.

Bullying

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what data he has collated on the level of bullying in (a) state-financed and (b) privately funded educational institutions. [34186]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not collected centrally. However, research undertaken for the Department by Sheffield University between 1991 and 1993 showed that 10 per cent. of primary and 4 per cent. of secondary age pupils in maintained schools were bullied at least once a week; and a further 27 per cent. of primary and 10 per cent. of secondary pupils were bullied at least sometimes.

Tuition Fees

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what period of time he will use to assess the economic circumstances of parents' contribution to tuition fees for students in higher education. [34119]

Dr. Howells: Under the Mandatory Awards Regulations, Local Education Authorities calculate the parents' contribution on the basis of their gross income for income tax purposes in the financial year preceding the academic year for which the student's award is being calculated.

EU Social and Education Council

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the informal EU Social and Education Council of Ministers meeting on 12 and 13 March. [33403]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Secretary of State chaired a successful joint meeting of EU Education and Social Affairs Ministers in London on 12–13 March on the theme of employability. The meeting was an innovative mix of audio-visual presentations, Ministerial discussion groups and plenary discussion. Ministers from all Member States attended the meeting and were joined by Commissioners Cresson and Flynn and representatives of the European Parliament and of social partner organisations from Europe and the UK.

The Ministerial discussion focused on the future of the European Social Fund after the year 2000 and the new generation of education, training and youth programmes. A short report of the conclusions of the meeting will be prepared by the UK Presidency.

The Ministerial discussion groups provided an interesting exchange of views and good practice, centred around approaches to employability across the EU in four main areas: the transition from school to work; lifelong learning; combating long-term unemployment and social exclusion; and combining labour market adaptability with fair and decent standards at work.

Presentations were given by a range of people with differing perspectives on the theme: a leading business man on the role of the employer; the headteacher of a comprehensive school in south east London on preparing schoolchildren for the world of work and combating social exclusion; and participants on the New Deal and the Modern Apprenticeship Scheme and from the Prince's Trust. In addition to the business at the meeting, the Informal Council also successfully involved a range of young people, including young musicians and apprentice chefs.

Physical Education (Teacher Training)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessment he has made of the OFSTED audit of initial teacher training in physical education; [34202]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to assess the sports coaching skills of in-service teachers; [34203]

(3) what steps he has taken since 1 May 1997 to encourage teachers to obtain recognised sports coaching qualifications; [34204]

(4) what plans the Government have to introduce coaching weeks for teachers; [34205]

(5) what is the sport content of the Initial Teacher Training requirement. [34222]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government have not yet received OFSTED's report of its audit into the coverage of physical education in primary initial teacher training. However, it is for individual providers of initial teacher training to decide the extent to which physical education is covered in their courses. Our new requirements for initial teacher training, which I announced last June, will allow trainees to specialise across the 7 to 11 age range. From this September, for the first time primary teachers will be able to specialise in physical education as part of their course.

The Government continue to attach importance to ensuring that good teaching raises pupils' standards in all subjects, including physical education. The Teacher Training Agency is supporting relevant developments in in-service training for classroom teachers and those with leadership responsibility for physical education in our schools. Officers from the Agency are advising the subject associations, the British Association of Advisers and Lecturers in Physical Education, and the Physical Education Association of the United Kingdom as they develop subject-specific exemplifications of the National Professional Standards.

School Sports

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken since 1 May 1997 to encourage the inclusion of information on sporting aims, provision and achievements in school annual reports and prospectuses. [34209]

Ms Estelle Morris: The recent position is that all maintained schools must publish in their prospectus a statement of the governing body's aims in respect of sport at their school and the provision made for sport. Their annual report must indicate the extent to which these aims were met and give details of any notable sporting achievements. We shall, however, consult soon on the balance between requiring schools to include specific information in prospectuses and annual reports and leaving them greater discretion.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken since 1 May 1997 to encourage schools' sports associations' involvement in competitions at district, regional and national levels. [34206]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department recognises that schools' sports associations have a valuable role to play in extending sporting opportunities for young people and it is important for pupils' development that they have every opportunity to broaden their horizons through participation in sport and other activities. However, decisions about extra-curricular sporting activities are best left to schools themselves.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken since 1 May 1997 to encourage competitive team sport in schools. [34208]

Ms Estelle Morris: The National Curriculum for physical education already requires schools to teach competitive team games.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of schools have achieved the Sportsmark target for sport provision outside school hours. [34221]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department does not collect this information. The Sportsmark scheme is operated by the English Sports Council.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the amount of sport provided by schools inside and outside school hours has increased since 1 May 1997. [34229]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not collected by the Department.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidelines he has issued to local education authorities and school governors on pupils' access to (i) grassed playing fields and (ii) other sports facilities. [34201]

Mr. Byers: The Education (School Premises) Regulations 1996 prescribe minimum areas of playing fields to which pupils must have access. Access to other sports facilities is not prescribed but to help local education authorities and school governors in planning their sporting provision, guidance is contained in two Departmental Building Bulletins, Area Guidelines for Schools and School Grounds: A Guide to Good Practice.

Physical Education

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken to ensure that schools provide two hours or more per week of time-tabled National Curriculum physical education for their pupils. [34210]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is for schools to decide how much time to allocate to individual subjects.

Sports Facilities

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken to ensure that further education institutions publish details of the sports facilities and opportunities they offer. [34224]

Dr. Howells: The Charter for Further Education advises colleges to publish information about their sporting opportunities and facilities.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action has been taken to encourage best practice in the provision of sports facilities in further education institutions following the Further Education Funding Council audit of existing sports provision. [34200]

Dr. Howells: The Further Education Funding Council Inspectorate's Good Practice Report "Sport in Colleges", published in June 1996, was widely disseminated.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Defence Exports

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to impose a more rigorous system of control over armaments exports from the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [30423]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29 the criteria to be used in considering individual applications for licences to export goods entered in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order (the so-called "Military List"), or dual-use goods where there are grounds for believing that the end-user will be the armed forces or the internal security forces of the recipient country.

In addition, the Government's Strategic Export Controls Review is likely to include proposals to extend controls in certain areas. Options currently being considered include controls on the transfer of technology by intangible means and on the trafficking and brokering of certain goods. We expect these proposals to be set out, probably in the form of a White Paper, before the end of the year.

Iraq

Mr. Bruce George: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the export licences granted to Iraq by Britain since 2 August 1990, separately identifying those for the export of growth medium broken down by (i) size and (ii) value of shipment and by stated end use; what are the current rules controlling the export of growth medium to Iraq; and what changes have been made to them since 2 August 1990. [30919]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 23 February 1998]: The export to Iraq of any goods, unless under authority of an export licence, is prohibited by the Export of Goods (Control)(Iraq and Kuwait Sanctions) Order 1990 [SI 1990/1640], which came into force on 9 August 1990.

The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and a total of 2,973 licences were issued for the export of goods to Iraq between 9 August 1990 and 31 January 1998. Full details of these licences could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Licences issued for the export of goods to Iraq between 9 August 1990 and 31 January 1998

Year	Number
9 August 1990 to 31 December 1990	5
1991	154
1992	418
1993	334
1994	635
1995	467
1996	349
1 January 1998 to 31 January 1998	47

Between 1 January 1994 and 31 January 1998, 48 Open Individual Export Licences (OIELs) were issued authorising the export of protective clothing mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists. This information should be considered in light of my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) of 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71. It would entail disproportionate costs to determine whether or not any such OIELs were issued between 9 August 1990 and 31 December 1993.

In addition, there are five Open General Export Licences (OGELs) under which specified goods may be exported to Iraq subject to the conditions of the licence: OGEL (Ships' stores: Aircraft stores); OGEL (Personal effects); OGEL (Documents); OGEL (Specified medical goods to the Red Cross); OGEL (Human remains). Copies of all of these licences are in the Library of the House. Formulated complex growth medium is not covered by OGEL (Specified medical goods to the Red Cross).

Of the licences issued between 9 August 1990 and 30 September 1996, 30 have been identified covering formulated complex growth media, and readily available details of these are as follows:

Date of issue	Quantity	Approx. value of shipment £	Stated end-use
31.05.91	102kg	4,000	World Health Organisation (WHO) cholera control project
31.10.91	130kg	4,600	WHO cholera control project

However, as details of all of the goods covered by individual applications are not recorded on the relevant database, it is possible that other licences covering formulated complex growth media might have been issued during this period. Any such other licences could be identified only by examination of the paper records of all licences issued since 9 August 1990, which would entail disproportionate cost.

Since 1 October 1996, the UK has issued nine licences covering the export of formulated complex growth media to Iraq, which is covered by the Import and Export (IMPEX) Mechanism established under UN Security Council resolution 1051, which came into force in October 1996. In each case, in accordance with our obligations under UN Security Council resolution 661, the Government confirmed that the applications were to export supplies strictly for medical purposes. The UN Sanctions Committee was notified, as was the UNSCOM-IAEA Joint Unit. The IMPEX Mechanism covers specified goods with the potential for use in the development and production of weapons of mass destruction and provides for monitoring of their use in Iraq by the UN Special Commission (UNSCOM).

For six of the nine licences referred to in the paragraph above the consignees were UN agencies. For the three other licences, the exports were specifically authorised by the UN Sanctions Committee under the "Oil for Food" programme based on UN Security Council resolution 986 and successor resolutions. The date of each licence, the quantity of formulated complex growth medium covered and the stated end-use are in the table.

Retail Petrol Industry

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many retail petrol stations closed in (a) 1996 and (b) 1997 in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland; and what data she has collated about forecast closures in 1998. [31699]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 2 March 1998]: The figures are as follows:

Year	England	Scotland	Wales	Northern Ireland
1996	1,222	151	60	87
1997	434	105	88	128

It is too soon to say what closures there may be in 1998.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many retail petrol stations there were in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland in (i) 1990, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [31698]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 2 March 1998]: The data are not available for 1990. The figures for 1995 and 1996 are as follows:

Year	England	Scotland	Wales	Northern Ireland
1995	12,772	1,544	891	769
1996	11,550	1,393	921	682

Car Parking

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has (a) to reduce the number of car parking spaces available for use by staff and (b) to introduce charges for staff using workplace car parking spaces. [32466]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 3 March 1998]: In line with the Guide to Green Transport Plans circulated last September by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my Department is actively considering this issue in preparing Green Transport Plans for its key buildings.

Self-employment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to tighten the definition of self-employed to avoid workers being unfairly described as working for themselves. [32123]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 4 March 1998]: My Department has been reviewing its policy on employment status issues as they affect the coverage of the employment rights legislation and I will be giving this matter further consideration.

Public Appointments

Mrs. Lait: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many of the appointments to public bodies which she has made since 1 May 1997 have been from the Public Appointments Unit list. [33251]

Mrs. Beckett: My Department consults a wide range of sources in considering candidates for appointments to public bodies, including the PAU Database. Of the appointments made since 1 May 1997, 11 were identified from the PAU list.

Oil and Gas Industry

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has for statutory regulation of the offshore oil and gas industry's discharges. [32650]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 March 1998]: Operational discharges of oil are currently regulated under the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971.

The United Kingdom has agreed to implement, in conjunction with other contracting parties to the Oslo and Paris Conventions, a harmonised Mandatory Control System for the use and reduction of the discharge of offshore chemicals. The system is currently in a trial period and will be reviewed and, if necessary, revised in 1999.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the current voluntary Offshore Chemicals Notification Scheme. [32389]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 March 1998]: The current voluntary Offshore Chemical Notification Scheme has been very successful. Over 2,600 products are categorised and listed. The rating system used in the scheme is easily understood and has promoted the use of lower hazard chemicals by the offshore industry.

Utilities

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if she will make a statement on the implications for Norweb customers of the Utility Regulator's review; [33969]

(2) if she will make a statement on the new powers that will be given to regulators as a result of the Utility Regulator's Review; [33971]

(3) if she will make a statement on whether the Utility Regulator's Review will benefit electricity consumers who experience power failure for prolonged periods of time. [33970]

Mrs. Beckett: The review of utility regulation has not yet been completed. Until that time, it would be wrong of me to speculate on issues which fall under its remit. I would, however, encourage my hon. Friend to participate fully in the consultation process which will follow publication of the review's findings.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will introduce legislation to regulate redundancy payments in the utilities. [33967]

Mrs. Beckett: The utilities are subject to the provisions of the Employment Rights Act 1996 with regard to redundancy payments. I laid an Order on 18 February to increase the weekly earnings limit. I have no other plans to amend this legislation.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the powers of the utility regulators to intervene in the closure of maintenance facilities. [33966]

Mrs. Beckett: The electricity and gas regulators have duties to exercise their statutory functions in a manner best calculated to protect the interests of consumers in respect of continuity of supply. Where appropriate, electricity and gas licences contain conditions relating to continuity of supply. If the regulators consider that these conditions are not being satisfied, they have the necessary powers to enforce them.

Electricity Interconnector

Dr. Moonie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she will announce her decision on the public inquiry into the electricity interconnector from Scotland to England. [33643]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 10 March 1998]: There is no outstanding public inquiry on the Anglo-Scottish interconnector. The only overhead line public inquiry reports that my Department is currently considering are the 1992 and 1995 public inquiries into reinforcement of the English transmission system in Cleveland and North Yorkshire and a 1997 public inquiry into an overhead line at Mardy, Abergavenny. The situation on the 1992 and 1995 public inquiries is as recorded in my right hon. Friend's reply to the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) on 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 510.

Adlington Employment Scheme

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if a Minister from her Department will visit the Adlington employment scheme in Lancashire. [34116]

Mrs. Beckett: I have no immediate plans to visit the North West. I was, however, pleased to hear that the Adlington Employment Centre has been offered £1 million grant from the European Programme.

Coal Industry

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the impact of a 30 million tonnes a year coal industry on (a) sulphur and (b) carbon dioxide reduction targets. [34091]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 12 March 1998]: The future role for coal in electricity generation is being studied in the review of Energy Sources for Power Generation. Environmental impacts are among the factors being taken into consideration.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the advantages of gas-fired power stations; and if she will make a statement. [34351]

Mr. Battle: This is a matter which is being considered in my Department's Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation.

Tobacco

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when representatives from the Police, HM Customs & Excise and the National Weights and Measures Laboratory and Ministers from her Department last met to discuss the issue of tobacco imported from Belgium and illegally resold in the United Kingdom. [34703]

Mrs. Beckett: There have been no such meetings.

These are policy matters on which my right hon. Friend the Chancellor leads.

Bus Companies

Mr. Canavan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to announce her decision about the Office of Fair Trading report on Strathclyde Buses and Midland Bluebird. [34590]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall) on 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 460.

Trade Union Recognition

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the advantages and disadvantages of excluding firms with under 50 workers from union recognition legislation. [34297]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have received many representations about trade union recognition, including arguments for and against excluding small firms from the procedure. We are currently considering the options and will set out a balanced package of proposals for consultation in a White Paper in the first part of this year.

Small Firms

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response her Department has made to the Bank of England's January 1998 report on finance for small firms. [33405]

Mrs. Roche: The Department has welcomed the Bank of England's fifth annual report on Finance for Small Firms. As with previous reports, it is a valuable contribution to knowledge of small business finance.

The Department will continue to work with the Bank of England and others to ensure that small firms have access to appropriate funding for their needs.

Electricity Companies

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Electricity Regulator has the power to specify that electricity companies should consult with other organisations regarding their joint response to an emergency or a potential emergency; and if she will make a statement. [34177]

Mr. Battle: The Electricity Regulator has no such power but has a duty to exercise his functions in a way which protects the interests of consumers in respect of the continuity of supply. The electricity companies do consult the emergency services and other relevant organisations, such as the media and telephone companies, regarding their joint response in an emergency.

Gas Companies

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Office of Gas Supply Regulation has the power to specify that gas supply companies should consult with other organisations regarding their joint response to an emergency or a potential emergency; and if she will make a statement. [34175]

Mr. Battle: Matters of safety regulation are for the Health and Safety Executive rather than Ofgas. HSE's Gas Safety (Management) Regulations require gas supply companies to co-operate with the Network Emergency Co-ordinator (Transco) and any person conveying gas in the Network such as public gas transporters to ensure the safety of the Network. Ofgas has no specific power to specify that gas supply companies should consult with other organisations regarding their joint response to an emergency, but the Director General of Gas Supply has a duty to consider safety in exercising her statutory functions.

Art Market

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received concerning the impact of EU regulations on the London art market; and if she will make a statement. [32916]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have received representations from the British Art Market Federation and from members of the art trade, and am aware of concerns about the effects of EU legislation on the London art market, in particular the Commission's proposal for an artist's re-sale rights directive, and the operation of import VAT.

The art trade makes a significant contribution to the United Kingdom economy. It is a highly successful industry. The Government are determined to see that its achievements are not undermined. Ministers have met art trade representatives on several occasions. We understand their concerns, and maintain a regular dialogue with them.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

EU Better Government Conference

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who took the decision to hold the EU Conference on Better Government in Manchester; when the decision was taken; and for what reason Manchester was chosen in preference to Newcastle upon Tyne. [34688]

Dr. David Clark: On assuming office in May 1997, proposals were made to me for the UK Presidency Conference which was sponsored by my Department and took place on 8–10 March.

The conference venue had not been determined at that stage. Various possible venues were contemplated and I added Newcastle upon Tyne to that list. The list was narrowed down to Manchester and Newcastle upon Tyne, and the former selected on 12 August 1997.

The two main reasons for this were that the only hotel capable of accommodating a conference of over 300 ministers and top civil servants from throughout the EU, the Gosforth Park, was unavailable on the required dates, and that Newcastle airport had practically no incoming international flights at the weekend.

Civil Servants

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the number and percentage of civil servants employed at each grade in (i) Scotland, (ii) London and (iii) the South East of England. [34225]

Dr. David Clark: Because there are many different systems in the civil service since the delegation of pay and grading, estimates are provided in the table on the basis of responsibility levels corresponding to the former service-wide grades.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) for what reasons records on the regional effects of the Benefit Integrity Project are not maintained; and if she will ensure that such effects are measured before proceeding to any changes in benefits covered by the Project; [24353]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 13 January 1998, Official Report, column 251, for what reasons regional figures about the effects of the Benefit Integrity Project are not available; and on what geographical basis they are available. [24729]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible. Also, that we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. We have, therefore, acted to introduce an extra safeguard to improve the quality of, and confidence in, benefit decisions made by the Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 13 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking for the reasons records on the regional effects of the Benefits Integrity Project (BIP) are not maintained/available. As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

Disability Living Allowance is a national benefit awarded as a result of mobility and care needs arising from disability. The BIP has been introduced to ensure that the correct benefit is in payment on the basis of an up to date statement of those mobility and/or care needs. It is not expected therefore, that there would be significant variations based on geographical location.

The database of casework has not been designed to extract information geographically during the project. To do so would necessitate high cost and disruption to the processing of ongoing casework. However, once the casework has been completed a full evaluation of the data is planned to provide a geographical analysis.

A brief monthly statistical report is produced and a copy of the report for December 1997 and subsequent months can be found in the House of Commons Library.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many individuals have been subject to

(a) a reduction and (b) an increase in benefit as a result of investigation due to the Benefit Integrity Project; [26949]

(2) how many individual reviews have been carried out to date under the Benefit Integrity Project; [26950]

(3) how many of the reviews carried out to date as part of the Benefit Integrity Project have (a) identified errors and (b) identified cases of fraud. [26948]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible. Also, that we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. We have, therefore, acted to introduce an extra safeguard to improve the quality of, and confidence in, benefit decisions made by the Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Mark Oaten, dated 13 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP). As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

The statistical information is given as at 31 January 1998.

The number of awards reduced as part of the BIP is 6,884, the number disallowed is 3,926 and the number increased is 1,299.

The BIP has examined 54,839 cases of which 7,276 have been reviewed. A further 10,811 cases due for renewal have been dealt with under normal Disability Living Allowance (DLA) renewal action by the BIP team. These are cases that meet the criteria for BIP action.

Information on the number of identified errors is not available in the format requested. A total of 12,109 cases, including renewal cases, have had their award changed as a result of the BIP.

The BIP aims to ensure that those people in receipt of Disability Living Allowance are entitled to it and are receiving the correct amount. While the Project has, broadly, sustained the estimated level of incorrectness, it has not sustained the level of fraud estimated by the Benefit Review.

The BIP has identified 157 cases in which fraud was suspected, of which 49 have been referred to the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service for further investigation, which have not yet been completed. In the remaining 108 cases, fraud staff in the Disability Benefits Directorate decided that there was no realistic prospect of determining whether fraud had occurred and the files were closed without further action.

From 9 February, no case likely to result in the reduction or removal of benefit will be passed to an Adjudication Officer (AO) for review without further evidence in addition to that supplied by the customer on the BIP questionnaire. This extra safeguard is to improve confidence in the decisions made by the BIP and to help safeguard the position of severely disabled people.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many fraudulent disability living allowance claims have been uncovered by the Benefit Integrity Project to date. [27664]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible. Also, that we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. We have, therefore, acted to introduce an extra safeguard to improve the quality of, and confidence in, benefit decisions made by the Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will wright to my hon. Friend with further details.

Letter from David Riggs to Ms Joan Walley, dated 13 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many fraudulent Disability Living Allowance claims have been uncovered by the Benefits Integrity Project (BIP) to date. As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

The BIP aims to ensure that those people in receipt of Disability Living Allowance are entitled to it and are receiving the correct amount. While the Project has, broadly, sustained the estimated level of incorrectness, it has not sustained the level of fraud estimated by the Benefit Review.

As at 31 January 1998, the BIP had identified 157 cases in which fraud was suspected, of which 49 have been referred to the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service for further investigation. These investigations are still ongoing. In the remaining 108 cases, fraud staff in the Disability Benefits Directorate decided that there was no realistic prospect of determining whether fraud had occurred and the files were closed without further action.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assumptions her Department has made concerning the level of disability living allowance fraud in devising the Benefit Integrity Project (a) in cash terms and (b) in terms of the number of claimants committing fraud. [30223]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 18 February 1998]: The Benefit Integrity Project is designed to help ensure the correctness of payments of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) to people receiving the higher rate of the (DLA) mobility component along with either the middle or highest rate of the DLA care component, by collecting up-to-date information about their care and mobility needs through a programme of visits and postal inquiries. It is not a fraud drive. The focus of the activity was dictated by the findings of the DLA Benefit Review. There is no suggestion that people contacted as part of the Project are thought to be claiming DLA fraudulently.

The Benefit Review was initiated by the last Government as a research mechanism to measure the extent of error, including fraud, across all major benefits. The DLA Benefit Review was undertaken in 1996 and published in February 1997; it represents a snap-shot of the benefit at a point in time. Findings are based on a statistically valid sample of cases selected at random.

The DLA Benefit Review, in common with Reviews that preceded it, presented an analysis of what was going on in the benefit by categorising each sample case. Based on that methodology, the DLA Benefit Review reported that nearly 73 per cent. of people receiving DLA were receiving it at the correct rate at the time they were visited. Therefore, some 27 per cent. of people receiving DLA were doing so at an incorrect rate. Reasons for incorrectness ranged from Departmental error (1.1 per cent. of cases) or customer error (9.6 per cent. of cases) through to confirmed fraud (1.5 per cent. of cases) and involved under as well as over payments.

The DLA Benefit Review reported a headline figure for fraud in DLA of 12.2 per cent.: the sum of cases categorised as strong suspicion of fraud (10.7 per cent. of cases) and those categorised as confirmed fraud. These sample findings were extrapolated to provide an estimated annual expenditure loss from overpayments due to fraud of around £499 million.

This Government are not convinced that the analysis of the Benefit Review results enables us properly to identify the reason behind wrongly made benefit payments; these can often be a mixture of misunderstanding and weakness in the benefit design. while the Benefit Integrity Project has, broadly, sustained the estimated level of incorrectness, it has not sustained the level of fraud estimated by the Benefit Review. In view of this, officials have been asked to undertake further work on the methodology and analysis of all current Reviews.

Child Support Agency

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what measures she is taking to ensure that the Child Support Agency provides an effective system to deal with complaints and queries in the Teesside area; [29946]

(2) if he will increase the number of staff employed by the Child Support Agency in the Teesside area. [29933]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide a consistent, fair and efficient service to all its clients. The Agency is committed to reducing the number of complaints about its handling of cases and improvements in customer service are a high priority.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Dr. Ashok Kumar, dated 13 March 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency staffing levels and complaints and queries in the Teesside area.

We recently reviewed the organisation of our operations to examine how we could improve the cost effectiveness and efficiency of the Agency. We have concluded that while we need to maintain a geographical presence to provide a direct interface with our public and to present appeals and court cases, the processing desk work which does not involve face to face contact with customers can be done much more efficiently and cost effectively in our large centres, thus releasing resources to deal with backlogs and rising workloads.

There are broad proposals only at this stage—a lot of the detail has yet to be fixed—but the main thrust of the strategy is to focus all available resources on improved service delivery. Although we are still engaged in a detailed analysis, it is clear that the size of the field network will reduce significantly over the next three to four years as we transfer the processing work to the centres. The remaining field resources will then be focused specifically on improved face to face contact with customers, often in conjunction with other Agencies. We expect the availability and amount of local face to face contact to increase as a result. This is originally the area on which field staff were intended to concentrate at the start of the Agency; processing work was undertaken as a short-term measure to help the Agency deal with the number of applications it received in the first two years. Currently, there are no plans to increase staff in Teesside.

The Agency recognises the need to deal effectively with complaints and queries from all parts of Great Britain. The Teesside area is dealt with by the Scotland and North East Business Unit. In November 1997, the Agency introduced into its 6 Business Units, new procedures, guidance, training and new IT system for dealing with complaints. The Agency has also identified the main reasons for complaint and is taking action to improve these areas.

Also the Agency's Business Units adopt a case study approach with cases referred to the Independent Case Examiner whereby the Business Unit Manager and staff involved with the case identify lessons learnt, introduce improvements and good working practices and regularly liaise with the office of the Independent Case Examiner.

In line with the Citizen's Charter Unit standards, the Agency aims to acknowledge all complaints within 2 working days of receipt and to issue a full reply within 10 working days of receipt. The Agency is achieving these standards in 84 per cent. of acknowledgments and 55 per cent. of replies. The Agency is currently in the process of producing quality standards that will be applied to all correspondence by Summer 1998.

In order to improve the telephone enquiry service, the Agency has increased the staffing levels and extended opening hours of its National Enquiry Line and the Client Help Lines in each of its Business Units to 8.30–6.00 p.m. The help lines deal with over 90 per cent. of calls and the balance are referred to the appropriate business sections for more specialist advice and information.

Staff on business sections are also being actively encouraged to deal with customers by telephone in order to deal with more customer business more quickly and effectively and to prevent avoidable enquiries and complaints. By the introduction of more flexible working patterns, the Agency aims to offer its customers a 7 day, 7.00 a.m.-10.00 p.m. service within the next 4 years.

Queries and complaints can also be dealt with by personal interview service at our local Field offices. In practice, very few customers use this service. The average number of interviews held per member of field staff in the whole of 1996/7 was approximately 36. By moving processing work to our centres, staff will be able to increase this average and extend our face to face contact with customers.

I am very conscious that there are still far too many justified complaints about the standards of basic customer contact and the service we provide, and we recognise that doing things right first time is the key to preventing complaints. We are aware that as we further tackle our backlog of cases from the Agency's first two years, there is potential for the volume of complaints to rise in the short term.

In the coming years, I am committed to responding to the needs of our customers by bringing high quality levels of performance to every part of our operation as a matter of routine, thereby reducing the number of complaints received and enhancing the public perception of the Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Nursery Places (Keighley)

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the likely impact on nursery place availability and funding in the Keighley constituency of her Department's measures to get lone parents on benefit into work. [32586]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 4 March 1998]: The Government are committed to the delivery of a National Childcare Strategy that will provide a range of good quality, affordable and accessible childcare in every neighbourhood, meeting the needs of children and offering choice to parents. This will include help to lone parents who choose to take up work. To meet that commitment, we are investing £300 million over the next five years to expand out of school provision, providing additional places for up to 1 million children. In addition, to ensure that work pays for families with children, we propose a working families tax credit, backed up by affordable childcare.

The Government will be working closely with local government and childcare providers in the voluntary, public and private sectors in order to build effective partnerships across the country and to ensure that local provision is matched to local need.

We do not have details of the extent to which existing provision for childcare will meet the additional demand created by the New Deal for Lone Parents in individual areas.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the people whose entitlement to disability living allowance has been adjusted in the last year have had their entitlement adjusted (a) upwards and (b) downwards. [33387]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Peter Viggers, dated 13 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning how many of the people whose entitlement to Disability Living Allowance (DLA) has been adjusted in the last year have had their entitlement adjusted (a) upwards and (b) downwards. As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

As at 30 November 1997, 196,000 DLA claims had been adjusted upwards and 28,000 DLA claims had been adjusted downwards.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Council Tax

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list, by London borough, her estimate of the number of recipients of council tax benefit who live in property valued above band E; and what is the average extra payment required from them due to the limiting of council tax benefit. [34306]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested due to sample size constraints.

The estimated total number of Council Tax Benefit recipients above band E in Greater London is 25,000. The estimated average extra payment required due to limiting Council Tax Benefit for this group is £3.80 a week.

Pensioners (Income Support)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the number of pensioners entitled to income support but not claiming income support has been measured. [34708]

Mr. Denham: The estimate is based on an analysis of the Family Resources Survey (FRS), an annual survey of approximately 26,000 households (in 1995–96) in Great Britain.

The FRS asks detailed questions about people's incomes and living circumstances. The information collected makes it possible to estimate people's entitlement to Income Support by simulating the benefit assessment. This indicates which people appear to be entitled to Income Support and, since the FRS shows who is actually receiving the benefit, it is possible to estimate the numbers who are apparently entitled to, but not receiving it.

The FRS is a sample survey, so it is necessary to re-weight the results to get an estimate which is representative of the population as a whole. More information on the methods used to estimate income related benefit take-up can be found in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-up in 1995–96", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will provide a breakdown of the £15 million pilot scheme for encouraging pensioner take-up of income support by area; and if each area will be applying the same pilot methodology. [34692]

Mr. Denham: The £15 million allocated to these projects includes expenditure on the programme, administration and evaluation. The programme and evaluation expenditure will be controlled centrally, while the allocation of the administrative budget has not yet been finalised. The pilots will have two main objectives: they will test the best ways of finding potential Income Support claimants by matching records held centrally and locally. They will then test the best ways of reaching potential claimants by visiting them at home, ringing them or writing to them. A variety of methodologies will be used in each of the pilot areas.

Pensioners (Home-ownership)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioners are home-owners. [34709]

Mr. Denham: 60 per cent. of pensioners own or are buying the property in which they live.

Notes:

1. An individual is defined to be a home-owner when he or she lives in a property which is either owned outright or being purchased, and has their name on the relevant deeds.
2. Figures are based on information from the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey. The 1995–96 survey is the latest for which data are available.
3. The estimates are based on sample counts which have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which control for region, Council Tax Band and a number of demographic variables. Estimates are subject to sampling error and to variability in non-response.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average lump sum payment received by pensioners with (a) occupational pensions and (b) personal pensions retiring in 1995. [34706]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available.

Motability

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make it her policy to ensure that bridging funding is made available to disabled people who have (a) sought a review of a BIP adjudication and (b) appealed against the Adjudication Officer's decision to ensure that they do not lose their Motability vehicle pending the outcome of the review or appeal, respectively. [34486]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible. Also, that we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. We have, therefore, acted to introduce an extra safeguard to improve the quality of, and confidence in, benefit decisions made by the Project.

Eligibility for the Motability Scheme is dependent on a claimant being entitled to the higher rate of the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) for a period of three years or more.

Officials are currently liaising with Motability to see what can be done to protect Motability customers who are dissatisfied with a decision made, as part of the Benefit Integrity Project, to reduce or remove their entitlement to the mobility component of DLA. There is no provision in legislation for bridging funding to be made available in these or any other circumstances. If an adjudication officer decides, whether as a result of the information gathered as part of the Benefit Integrity Project or not, that a person is no longer entitled to the higher rate of the DLA mobility component, there is no legal basis for leaving benefit payments unchanged.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate her Department has made of the number of DLA claimants who will lose their Motability vehicle as a result of decisions taken as part of the Benefit Integrity Project. [34488]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible. Also, that we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. We have, therefore, acted to introduce an extra safeguard to improve the quality of, and confidence in, benefit decisions made by the Project.

Eligibility for the Motability Scheme is dependent on a claimant being entitled to the higher rate of the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) for a period of three years or more.

Up to the end of February 1998, nearly 1,100 people with Motability agreements, involved in the Benefit Integrity Project, have had their award of the higher rate mobility component reduced or removed. It is not possible to gauge how many individuals will lose their Motability vehicle as a result of this exercise. Claimants have the right to a review of, and appeal against, an Adjudication Officer's decision to disallow or reduce either or both components of DLA, and assumptions cannot be made as to outcomes. Officials are currently liaising with Motability to see what can be done to protect Motability customers who are dissatisfied with a decision made, as part of the Benefit Integrity Project, to reduce or remove their entitlement to the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA).

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many DLA claimants who have been subject to BIP to date have had their Motability vehicle repossessed. [34487]

Mr. Denham: Motability is an independent charity and, as such, it is not informed of the reasons why an individual has had their benefit entitlement changed. Motability does, however, record reasons for early terminations of lease hire agreements. The Director of Motability has advised me that, on average, 1,300 people a month seek early termination. This is broken down as follows:

80 per cent. due to death/increasing disability/lack of driver;

15 per cent. due to a different car being required due to worsening disability or a change in the family situation;

5 per cent. due to a reduction in mobility allowance or other financial reason.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration Control

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the role of the embarkation control in the immigration control process. [35037]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have undertaken a detailed study of the residual embarkation control over persons leaving the United Kingdom. I have concluded, in the light of this, that the present arrangements are an inefficient use of resources and that they contribute little to the integrity of the immigration control. They will be replaced by a targeted, intelligence-led approach creating a more efficient and effective control.

The revised and improved arrangements will be brought into operation as soon as practicable. We will employ appropriate technology and will build upon the existing co-operation between the border agencies, port operators and carriers.

We conducted this study against the background of the decision, in 1994, by the previous administration to scrap the embarkation checks for passengers travelling from ferry ports and small ports to destinations within the European Union; so, for four years, 40 per cent. of departing passengers have not been seen by an immigration officer.

In common with most comparable countries, the United Kingdom has never had a comprehensive check-out system because experience has shown that the use of intelligence and denunciatory information is the most effective tool against illegal immigration. This approach will continue and will be developed.

Although it does not contribute to the overall effectiveness of the immigration control, the residual embarkation control is resource intensive. In 1997, 7 per cent. of the Immigration Service's operational duties were deployed on the embarkation control, compared with 11 per cent. on asylum-related work. Estimated staffing costs were over £3 million.

We inherited an embarkation control which serves little purpose in the tracking down of immigration offenders. Enhanced technology, such as closed circuit television, combined with close liaison between the border agencies, port operators and airlines, will create a stronger deterrent than the current immigration departure checks. We will also ensure that systems will be in place to mount comprehensive embarkation checks when required in the interests of national security. We are committed to the continued operation of the All Ports Warning System for child abduction cases.

Finally, by better use of technology and liaison, we will release Immigration Service resources to be re-deployed on more effective elements of the control. We will keep the revised arrangements under review.

European Elections

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) on what date he required NOP's research on Attitudes to Euro Elections and Electoral Reform to be completed; [34142]

(2) what was the cost of the NOP research on Attitudes to Euro Elections and Electoral Reform; [34144]

(3) if he approved the methodology employed by NOP in their research on Attitudes to Euro Elections and Electoral Reform; [34146]

(4) how many members of the public were involved in (a) focus group discussions and (b) in other ways in the NOP research on Attitudes to Euro Elections and Electoral Reform; [34145]

(5) on what date he commissioned NOP to carry out the research entitled Attitudes to Euro Elections and Electoral Reform. [34143]

Mr. George Howarth: The decision to commission a study into voters' attitudes was taken in December 1997. A number of potential individuals and organisations who might have been interested in carrying out the task were contacted. National Opinion Poll (NOP) were formally commissioned to undertake the study on 13 February. They were asked to report by 27 February.

Their methodology was approved by Home Office officials acting on behalf of my right hon. Friend.

NOP's study involved six groups, each of between six and eight people. A total of 40 members of the public were involved.

The cost of the study was £9,800 plus Value Added Tax.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors underlay his decision to select the Belgium electoral system for examination rather than the Danish electoral system. [34141]

Mr. George Howarth: Representations were made to my right hon. Friend by Charter 88 and the Liberal Democrats inviting him to consider the Belgian electoral system.

The Danish electoral system is considerably more complicated than the Belgian one, involving a two-tier seat allocation process and the use of three different divisors.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received since 25 November 1997 in favour of (a) an open list system and (b) a closed list system for electing MEPS. [34140]

Mr. George Howarth: Since 25 November 1997, the Home Office has received several hundred letters covering all aspects of electoral reform. It would not be possible, except at disproportionate cost, to identify separately those which expressed a view specifically on open and closed list systems for electing Members of the European Parliament.

Schengen Agreement

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 June 1997, Official Report, column 179, if he will place the documents which his Department has examined relating to the Schengen Agreement in the Library. [33926]

Ms Quin: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to him on 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 446, to the effect that we have received and examined the 1985 Schengen Agreement, the 1990 Schengen Convention and the Accession Protocols. These documents are already in the Library.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been provided from his Department to London local authorities for the development and installation of CCTV facilities in their boroughs in each of the last three years. [34741]

Mr. Michael: The number of closed circuit television (CCTV) schemes in London boroughs which were successful in the CCTV Challenge competitions run in 1996–97 and 1997–98 and the total amount awarded is shown in the tables.

By-elections

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the calling of local authority by-elections following the death of the sitting member with particular reference to the sensibilities of those bereaved; and if he will make a statement. [33998]

Mr. George Howarth: None. If the death of a councillor occurs not less than six months before the office concerned would normally have become vacant, a by-election must be held within 35 days of the receipt by the proper officer of the council of a notice of vacancy in writing signed by two electors.

Identity Cards

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding a national young person's identity card; and if he will make a statement. [34493]

Mr. George Howarth: Hon. Members, members of the public and other interest groups make regular representations to me for and against national identity cards, and with various purposes in mind including reducing under-age sales. However, the issues go wider than that. We are considering the options, but have no current plans to introduce a national identity card scheme.

Millennium Compliance

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of whether (a) the Fire Service College, (b) the Forensic Science Service, (c) the UK Passport Agency and (d) HM Prison Service will be fully millennium compliant by 1 January 1999; [32303]

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of (a) the Fire Service College, (b) the Forensic Science Service, (c) the UK Passport Agency and (d) HM Prison Service achieving millennium compliance; [32301]

(3) when (a) the Fire Service College, (b) the Forensic Science Service, (c) the UK Passport Agency and (d) HM Prison Service will each complete their examination of the options available for achieving millennium compliance. [32300]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 3 March 1998]: I refer the right hon. Member to the oral statement given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 27 November 1997, Official Report, columns 1104–05, and to his answer to a question from the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 3 March 1998, Official Report, column 622.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he or his Ministers last met the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to discuss his Department's progress towards millennium compliance. [32313]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 3 March 1998]: The Home Office has submitted outline plans to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and reported to him on them. These plans have been placed in the Library and on the Internet. So far, no meeting has been necessary.

Prisons (Foreign Nationals)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which external bodies received funds from his Department to offer services to foreign nationals in prison in England and Wales in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [33681]

(2) what services his Department funds in respect of foreign nationals in prisons in England and Wales; and what funding they received in the last year for which figures are available. [33670]

Ms Quin: The Home Office does not provide general funding to external bodies for services to foreign nationals in prisons. However, there are a number of services purchased from external bodies by the Prison Service on behalf of foreign nationals. These include translation, interpretation and educational services, the costs of which are not kept centrally.

Additionally, the Prison Service itself provides services to meet the needs of foreign nationals. These include provision to meet religious and dietary requirements, the issue of the foreign national information pack and prisoners' information book in different languages. The Prison Service also ensures access to telephones so that prisoners can maintain contact with family members abroad. The cost of this provision, which is part of the general provision for prisoners, is met from establishment budgets and cannot be identified centrally.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals received a term of imprisonment for drug importation in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [33669]

Ms Quin: The information requested is given in the table.

Receptions of foreign nationals under sentence into prisons in England and Wales for unlawful import/export of drugs 1993–1997

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals are currently being held in gaols in England and Wales by nationality. [33679]

Ms Quin: Information on the population of foreign nationals in prisons in England and Wales on 31 December 1997 is given in the table.

[1] Provisional figures.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals received a prison sentence in England and Wales in the last year for which figures are available; and how many of those receiving a prison sentence had a pre-sentence report relating to their circumstances. [33667]

Ms Quin: Provisional information for 1997 shows that 4,550 foreign nationals were received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales under sentence. Information regarding the number of foreign nationals who had a pre-sentence report is not collected centrally.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase resources for the treatment of sex offenders after they leave prison. [34039]

Ms Quin: The resources needed for the supervision of sex offenders in the community following release from prison will be determined after the comprehensive spending reviews have been completed. I cannot anticipate the outcome, although it is relevant that the provisions in the Crime and Disorder Bill for the extended supervision of sexual and violent offenders following release are estimated to generate long run net additional costs of £20 million a year.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the advantages of disclosing information about sex offenders who have been released. [34038]

Mr. Michael: When we implemented the Sex Offenders Act 1997, serious consideration was given to how information on sex offenders should be disclosed and in what circumstances. The general presumption that personal information should not be disclosed may be over-ridden, for the protection of children and vulnerable adults. We concluded that this should be judged on a case by case basis based on the risk posed by any individual. Guidance on the Sex Offenders Act issued last summer made clear that a risk assessment should be undertaken by the police, probation service and other child protection agencies. More detailed inter-agency guidance will be issued in due course in the light of experience since we implemented the Act.

Anti-drugs Campaigns

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the research undertaken for his Department by Teesside University Criminology Department on the results of anti-drugs campaigns. [34719]

Mr. George Howarth: In 1994/95, Teesside University Criminology Department undertook some work for the then Newcastle Drugs Prevention Team and others, including the Northern Regional Health Authority, as part of the development of local drugs prevention activities. The work included confidential interviews with young people about their attitudes to, and knowledge of, drugs misuse. It was never intended that this work should be published, and we have no plans to do so.

Child Pornography

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reports of child pornography made by the Internet Watch Foundation since it was established have led to prosecutions in the UK or abroad. [33333]

Mr. Michael: During the first year of operation, the Internet Watch Foundation has processed 781 reports referring to 4,300 items, of which only 6 per cent. apparently originated in the United Kingdom. 2,000 items were referred to Internet Service Providers as potentially illegal, and to the police via the National Criminal Intelligence Service. Of the small number of notifications relating to material known to have originated in the United Kingdom, I understand that investigations have led to an arrest in one case and in three others information has been helpful to the police. Information about articles originating abroad has facilitated two prosecutions, in Germany and Switzerland, and has been of assistance generally for intelligence purposes.

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what action he is taking to increase the proportion of illegal child pornography present on UK Internet service providers' news servers which is identified and then removed; [33332]

(2) what estimate he has made of the proportion of illegal child pornography present within the newsgroups over the last year which has been voluntarily removed by UK Internet service providers from their news servers following advice from the Internet Watch Foundation or the Metropolitan Police. [33331]

Mr. Michael: All child pornography is illegal and the laws relating to it apply equally on the Internet as elsewhere. United Kingdom Internet Service Providers are responsible in law for their own conscious acts and omissions. When they are notified of potentially illegal material on their news servers, they have a responsibility to remove it, and have been diligent in doing so.

The Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) published its first annual report on 3 March, which covered the year December 1996—December 1997. Figures are not available for the total number of items of child pornography that might exist in news groups but, during the period of the report, the IWF notified United Kingdom Internet Service Providers of 2,000 potentially illegal items, reported via the hotline, almost all relating to child pornography. I understand that all the items notified to Internet Service Providers were voluntarily removed by them.

The IWF announced on 3 March that further action was being taken to increase the effectiveness of its work. This includes: introducing new procedures to enable it to undertake pro-active scanning of problem areas and take prompt action to have potentially illegal material removed, without having first received a report via the hotline; increasing public awareness of the new hotline number, and establishing links with other hotlines which are being set up within the European Union and elsewhere.

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has received from the Metropolitan Police about the number of internet newsgroups, and the number of articles within such newsgroups, which have contained illegal child pornography over the last year. [33330]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner tells me that the Metropolitan Police's Organised Crime Group Paedophilia Unit does not monitor the Internet as a matter of course. The Paedophilia Unit does investigate allegations reported to them. This unit works closely with the Metropolitan Police's Clubs and Vice Unit, and the National Criminal Intelligence Service, who are the focal point for incidents reported by the Internet Watch Foundation. The recently published Internet Watch Foundation Annual Report stated that 781 reports were received referring to over 4,300 items. 85 per cent. of actioned reports were about child pornography. Only a small proportion of reported items originated from the United Kingdom (6 per cent.); most were from the United States of America (63 per cent.) and Japan (19 per cent.).

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements exist within his Department to monitor the effectiveness of current arrangements for identifying and removing child pornography which is accessible via the Internet to UK residents and businesses. [33328]

Mr. Michael: On 3 March, the Government announced their intention to review the work of the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF), and to report the results in the Autumn. The review will focus on the effectiveness of the arrangements for dealing with reports of potentially illegal material, the structure and composition of the IWF, extension of its priorities for action and promoting awareness of its work.

More generally, Home Office officials are in regular contact with the IWF on the progress being made in identifying and removing child pornography from the Internet. The statistics produced by the IWF, for its management and policy boards, on reports received and action taken are forwarded to the Home Office and to the Department of Trade and Industry.

Internet Watch Foundation

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the internet service providers offering internet access to UK residents and businesses which (a) are a party to the agreement which established the Internet Watch Foundation and (b) are not party to this agreement. [33329]

Mr. Michael: Most Internet Service Providers are members of the industry's trade associations—the Internet Service Providers Association (ISPA) and the London Internet Exchange (LINX)—which supported the establishment of the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) (details of their membership may be obtained from the relevant association). The issue of non-affiliated service providers will be looked at in the context of the Review of the work of the IWF which the Government announced on 3 March.

Immigration Advisers

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral answers of 2 February 1998, Official Report, columns 703–04, on immigration advisers, how his Department assesses the quality of representation in immigration and asylum cases provided by those organisations funded under section 23 of the 1991 Immigration Act. [34581]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The work of the Refugee Legal Centre and Immigration Advisory Service, the two organisations funded under section 23 of the Immigration Act 1971, is regulated through the framework laid down in the respective Conditions of Grant-in-Aid, under which they are required to agree performance targets and measures with the Home Office and to provide regular reports on the levels of performance achieved.

World Cup

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) football organisations, (b) the emergency services, (c) the organisers of the World Cup and (d) the French authorities concerning the prevention of known football hooligans from (i) travelling to France during the World Cup and (ii) obtaining tickets for the World Cup. [34197]

Mr. Michael: These issues have been discussed regularly during the preparations for the World Cup, most recently during the European Union (EU) Presidency seminar at Blackburn on the policing of football. The seminar was successful on a number of counts, not least the attendance of a range of groups and organisations from within the EU and the associated states. These included police, football associations, supporters groups and the French Organising Committee (CFO). The seminar allowed frank and informed discussions at an international level on the measures considered necessary to minimise the ability of football hooligans travelling to matches in other countries at club and international level and the adoption of ticketing policies to maximise effective ground configuration. The seminar provided a number of initiatives which will be taken forward under the aegis of the EU Police Co-operation Working Group.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that those guilty of football offences in France during the World Cup are brought to trial in France. [34190]

Mr. Michael: The French authorities have indicated that they will prosecute those suspected of having committed offences. A State Magistrate will be appointed for each World Cup venue and offenders will be brought before a court within 48 hours.

The prosecution of offenders in France is a matter for the French authorities. It has been made clear in discussion with the French Organising Committee (CFO) and the Ministry of the Interior that the United Kingdom Government strongly support the intention of the French authorities to prosecute offenders and support the firm application of the law to those who choose to break it.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to prevent the large-scale deportation of football fans from France during the World Cup; and what representation he has made to the French authorities on this matter. [34191]

Mr. Michael: The decision on how to deal with those who cause trouble in France during the World Cup is a matter for the French authorities. My right hon. Friend is satisfied that the French authorities will apply the law firmly but fairly. They have indicated that they will look to prosecute those suspected of having committed offences and there is no reason to believe that deportation will be used as an alternative to prosecution.

Football-related Offences

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in the UK have been convicted of a football-related offence in the last (a) year, (b) two years and (c) five years; and how many are currently the subject of restriction orders. [34199]

Mr. Michael: There are currently some 30 restriction orders in place, an increase of 20 orders since my right hon. Friend's initiative at Christmas 1997 to encourage police, the courts and prosecutors to seek restriction orders for football-related offences. The figures requested are as follows:

Year	Number of convictions for football-related offences[1]
1992–93	4,588
1993–94	4,227
1994–95	3,840
1995–96	3,437
1996–97	3,577

[1] The offences concerned are those set out in Schedule 1 of the Football Spectators Act 1989.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government have taken to reach bilateral agreements with other Governments so that domestic courts can impose restriction orders on those convicted of football offences abroad. [34194]

Mr. Michael: Bilateral agreements are presently in place with Italy, Norway, Republic of Ireland, Scotland and Sweden. We are presently in consultation with the French and Danish Governments on reaching such an agreement.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to encourage additional countries to ratify and to implement the European Convention on Spectator Violence. [34193]

Mr. Michael: This is a matter for the Council of Europe, which places great store in the contribution the United Kingdom makes to the work of the Standing Committee that oversees the Convention. Forty-seven countries have ratified already. The United Kingdom participates fully in the work of the Standing Committee which oversees implementation of the Convention and, through the Standing Committee, encourages the wide adoption and implementation of the Convention.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British football fans were arrested during the football World Cup finals held in Italy in 1990. [34198]

Mr. Michael: The information available—which is not comprehensive—indicates that there were 240 arrests of England supporters during Italia '90. Of these, 225 were deported and the remaining 15 convicted of offences and given a term of imprisonment of four months, suspended for two years.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to promote the use of restriction orders for those convicted of football-related offences. [34196]

Mr. Michael: Home Office officials wrote to all chief police officers in the run-up to the Christmas 1997 football programme reminding them of the powers available under the Football Spectators Act 1989 and encouraging the use of these powers where applicable. The Lord Chancellor's Department and the Crown Prosecution Service wrote in similar terms to courts and prosecutors respectively.

I am pleased to report that, since that initiative, the number of restriction orders in force has increased from 10 to 30 and we anticipate that this number will increase.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to deny access to football stadiums to those in possession of racist or offensive banners and to prevent their display in stadiums. [34192]

Mr. Michael: Section 23 of the Public Order Act 1986 provides that a person is guilty of an offence if he intends racial hatred to be stirred up or racial hatred is likely to be stirred up by displaying, publishing, distributing or broadcasting written material which is threatening, abusive or insulting. The enforcement of these provisions is an operational matter for the police and the decision to deny access to grounds is a matter for the individual stadium owners and the police.

The Football Task Force is looking into racism in football as a priority and is expected to report shortly.

Restriction Orders

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government have taken to increase the penalty for failing to comply with the terms of a restriction order. [34195]

Mr. Michael: My right hon. Friend has asked officials to review the existing legislation on football-related offences including provisions relating to the issue and enforcement of restriction orders.

Surplus Property and Land

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the properties and land owned by his Department which he has identified as surplus to requirements, giving in each case their estimated value. [30316]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 23 February 1998]: The requested information on non-residential surplus properties and land owned by my Department is in the table.

Records of the residential properties owned by the Home Office are not centralised and a list of those that are surplus could be made only at disproportionate cost. Progress in reducing the number of these is reported annually. The latest was on 20 November 1997, Official Report, column 303.

Priority	Location	Estimated value £
Branston Store (part surplus)	Burton-on-Trent, Derbyshire	350,000
Steventon Store	Steventon, Oxfordshire	3,250,000
Gringley	Gringley-on-the-Hill, Nottinghamshire	345,000
Poltimore	Broadclyst, Devon	150,000
Day's Lane	Bedford, Bedfordshire	350,000
Crown Buildings	Hope Cove, Devon	35,000

Prostitution

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many under-18s were (a) cautioned, (b) charged and (c) convicted following involvement in prostitution for each year since 1992. [34360]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 13 March 1998]: Detailed data on the number of people charged are not collected centrally.

Information available on the number of young people cautioned, prosecuted and convicted for prostitution related offences is given in the tables.

Written Answers to Questions

PRIME MINISTER

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will raise the need for computer systems to be millennium compliant at the forthcoming summits of (a) the G8, (b) the EU and (c) the EU and USA; and if he will make a statement. [33865]

The Prime Minister: The century date change will be raised within the G8 either at the Summit or at the meeting of Foreign and Finance Ministers. In addition to raising the issue at the Telecommunications Council we are also exploring with the European Commission at what other events it should be discussed.

World Cup 2006

Dr. Fox: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on representations he made on the siting of matches in Scotland in the event of England hosting the 2006 World Cup finals, to the President of FIFA, when he met him on 11 March. [34799]

The Prime Minister: This is a matter for the Football Association and FIFA. Details about siting of matches in Scotland were not discussed at the meeting.

Written Answers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he is taking to reduce the number of holding answers issued by his Department in response to written questions. [35028]

The Prime Minister: I seek to meet the deadlines set by Members in every case but it is not always possible to do so.

I am receiving approximately 40% more written Parliamentary Questions, a proportion of which are for named day answer, than was the case under the previous administration.

News International

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met Mr. Rupert Murdoch; where the meeting took place; and what was discussed. [35063]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 5 March 1998, Official Report, column 702.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social Security Appeals

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the average waiting time for a social security appeal to be heard, from the date the appeal is lodged with the ITS. [34598]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Independent Tribunal Service reports that the current average waiting time for an appeal to be heard by a Social Security Appeal Tribunal is approximately 28 weeks.

However, we are determined to reduce the current delays and complexity in the appeals system. The Social Security Bill, which paves the way for modernising the delivery of Social Security, including the handling of appeals, had its second reading in the House of Lords on 15 January. The Secretary of State will assume responsibility for the administration of the appeals system. She will set and publish demanding targets for the administration of appeals and report on the results.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) she has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) she has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34826]

Mr. Field: No non-departmental public bodies have been abolished or established since 1 May 1997.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the main disabling conditions of people who have been assessed by the Benefit Integrity Project and have had their disability living allowance (a) maintained, (b) reduced, (c) increased and (d) withdrawn. [34100]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible. Also, that we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. We have, therefore, acted to introduce an extra safeguard to improve the quality of, and confidence in, benefit decisions made by the Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 16 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about listing the main disabling conditions of people who have been assessed by the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) and have had their Disability Living Allowance (DLA) (a) maintained, (b) reduced, (c) increased and (d) withdrawn. As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

The information is not available in the format requested. Of the 54,839 people whose cases have been assessed by the BIP, 20,027 are recorded as having two main disabling conditions. The figures provided relate only to those cases where one main disabling condition applies.

At the time an award of DLA is made, the Adjudication Officer records the main disabling condition on the DLA computer system. However the system allows for different conditions to be recorded in respect of the care and the mobility components. This usually arises when they are awarded at different times. The number of cases for which there are two conditions recorded is identified separately. The BIP database does not allow such cases to be analysed further.

The information available is set out in the table.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people who have been assessed by the Benefit Integrity Project had their initial claim decided (a) on the basis of the claim pack alone, (b) with a general practitioner's factual report and (c) by medical examination; and how many of those people in each case have had their disability living allowance (i) maintained, (ii) reduced, (iii) increased and (iv) withdrawn; [34102]

(2) how many people who have been assessed by the Benefit Integrity Project have had their disability living allowance reduced or withdrawn (a) as a result of a lessening of the need or b) where the need was unchanged but equipment was or could be used to meet that need. [34103]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 16 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning the Benefits Integrity Project (BIP). As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

The information requested is not available. The BIP is looking again at some existing awards of DLA. Recipients of the higher rate mobility component combined with the highest or middle rate of the care component are being contacted by post or at a visit to obtain an up to date picture of their circumstances. Cases are selected by a random monthly scan of the DLA computer system.

The DLA computer system does not record the evidence on which the initial award was made. Neither has the BIP extracted this information from clerical records.

Any changes made to a person's benefit reflect the decision of an Adjudication Officer (AO) that the needs arising from that person's disability have changed.

The reasons underlying the change in a person's needs may include an improvement in their condition or their adaptation to the effects of their disability, for example through the use of aids and equipment or through changes to their living accommodation. In some other cases, the award may be changed because the AO has decided that the initial award was incorrect, that is there was a mistake concerning some material fact when the AO made the decision. The BIP database does not maintain a level of detail that enables me to identify cases where the award was changed because of the availability of equipment which was or could be used to meet that need.

Sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who have been assessed by the Benefit Integrity Project had made their first claim before 1992; and how many of those people have had their disability living allowance (a) maintained, (b) reduced, (c) increased and (d) withdrawn. [34101]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible and also that we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning how many people who have been assessed by the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) has made their first claim before 1992; and how many of those people have had their Disability Living Allowance (DLA) (a) maintained, (b) reduced, (c) increased and (d) withdrawn. As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

The number of cases looked at by the BIP who made their first claim before 6 April 1992, the date of commencement of the DLA, is 24,415. Of these, 21,140 have had their award maintained, 2,079 have had their awards reduced, 575 have had their award increased and 621 have had their award withdrawn.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her Department's current estimate of funds needed to run the Benefit Integrity Project over the next financial year; what has been the cost of the project since 1 May 1997; how many staff are allocated to the project; and if she will make a statement on the current running costs of the project. [34593]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. Letter from David Riggs to Mrs. Theresa May, dated 16 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the estimate of funding and staffing for the Benefits Integrity Project (BIP). As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

It is estimated that the BIP will cost £11.954m for the financial year 1998/9. However this is currently under review following the changes announced on 9 February 1998. On that date the Secretary of State announced that no case likely to result in the reduction or removal of benefit will be passed to an Adjudication Officer for review without further evidence being obtained in addition to that supplied by the customer on the BIP questionnaire.

The forecast cost of BIP for the year 1997/8 is £8.189m.

The total number of staff involved in the BIP is 441. This is made up of 280 staff based in Blackpool and 161 Visiting Officers around the country, based in 11 Disability Benefit Centres.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 3 March 1998, Official Report, columns 609–10, concerning the adequacy of publicity for the right of disability living allowance claimants to request copies of previous DLA forms, if she will require (a) BIP questionnaires and (b) letters notifying DLA claimants of a BIP interview to include a clear statement about the right to see previous claim forms. [33355]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 March 1998]: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 16 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question, pursuant to her Answer of 3rd March, concerning the adequacy of publicity for the rights of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) claimants to request copies of previous DLA forms, if she will require (a) Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) questionnaires and (b) letters notifying DLA claimants of a BIP interview to include a clear statement about the rights to see previous claim forms. As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

It is normal practice to give customers, on request, copies of previously completed DLA claim packs. This has always been the case and is not specific to the BIP.

A review of all forms including questionnaires and notifications relating, not only to BIP but DLA/Attendance Allowance as a whole, is currently being undertaken and this will form part of that review.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 3 March 1998, Official Report, column 610, relating to disability living allowance claimants, if she will supply the equivalent information for claimants who have had their DLA reduced as set out in the letter from Peter Mathison dated 18 February (Ref.31888). [33348]

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Smoking Room

Mr. Syms: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what is the estimated cost of proposed changes to the Members' Smoking Room. [34410]

Mr. Dennis Turner: At present there are no firm proposals for any changes in, or to, the Smoking Room. However, the Committee will be seeking the views of all hon. Members shortly.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Unpasteurised Milk

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many responses he has received in respect of his consultation over the future status of unpasteurised milk; how many were (a) in favour and (b) against a possible ban on (i) unpasteurised milk and (ii) milk products; and if he will make a statement. [31713]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 4 March 1998]: We have received about 5,000 representations about the consultation, which was solely about a proposal to ban sales of raw cows' drinking milk in England and Wales. This number includes letters from Members of Parliament, representative organisations, individuals and signatories to petitions. Views range between certain producers and consumers who want sales to continue, to most public health professionals who favour a ban.

A ban on sales of raw cows' drinking milk was introduced in Scotland in 1983.

Fisheries

Mr. Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which was the ruling by the European Court of Justice that overruled the Court's earlier judgment in the Jaderow Case C-246/89 recognising that the fishing quota system, as a system of national quota, was a derogation from the principle of non-discrimination laid down in Article 40(3) of the Treaty. [34569]

Mr. Morley: The Jaderow judgment did not say that the system of national quotas was a derogation from the principle of non-discrimination.

Mr. Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) of 5 March 1998, Official Report, column 728, whether, if Portugal, Spain, Finland and Sweden do not obtain new derogations for the period after 2002, the principle of equal access will then apply to their fishing grounds. [34570]

Mr. Morley: Unless the Council decides otherwise, access to fishing grounds after 2002 will continue to be limited by the principle of relative stability and the national quota system. There will also continue to be restrictions on access within 6 and 12 mile limits if the Council decides to renew the present derogation, as I expect it will.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will meet (a) the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and (b) the Scottish Fishermen's Federation before the next Council of Ministers meetings. [34862]

Mr. Morley: Yes.

Mackerel Handline Fishery

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what extra provision he has made for the Cornish handline mackerel fishery; and if he will make a statement on its future. [34944]

Mr. Morley: It is proposed to amend the underpinning arrangements for the mackerel handline fishery so that it receives a minimum allocation of 1,750 tonnes or 0.33 per cent. of the UK quota, whichever is the greater. As a result, the handline fishery may expect to receive an initial allocation of some 1,750 tonnes for 1998 compared to 1,450 tonnes with the previous arrangements. Additionally, we have, through quota swaps, secured an extra 300 tonnes of mackerel which will be used to offset the overfishing of the 1997 allocation and the repayment of quota swaps to other groups.

"Agriculture in the United Kingdom"

Ms Drown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the latest volume of "Agriculture in the United Kingdom" to be published. [35201]

Dr. John Cunningham: "Agriculture in the United Kingdom" 1997 was published today and copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34831]

Mr. Morley: In a News Release on 28 May 1997, my right hon. Friend announced the disbanding of the Department's nine advisory Regional Panels.

The Potato Industry Development Council (known as the British Potato Council) was established on 1 July 1997. The body, which is funded by a levy on the industry, has planned annual running costs of £1.334 million for the year ending 30 June 1998.

Mink Farming

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what statutory changes would be required to effect a ban on mink farming. [35025]

Mr. Morley: The Government's position on fur farming is that they remain committed to implementing their pre-election pledge to end fur farming as soon as practicable. Last year, we reviewed the various options available to prohibit the keeping of mink and other species for fur and a public consultation letter seeking comments on the way we proposed to proceed was issued on 5 August 1997. The public consultation period has now ended and we are currently considering how the intention to prohibit fur farming can best be implemented. An announcement will be made once we have decided how to proceed. There would be public consultation on any proposals for legislation to ban fur farming.

DEFENCE

Biological and Chemical Weapons

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those biological and chemical warfare agents evaluated by DERA to which there is no known antidote. [30554]

Mr. Spellar: The Chemical and Biological Defence Sector at Porton Down carries out research which is directed towards providing the UK Armed Forces with safe and effective protection against the threat posed by biological and chemical warfare agents.

It would not be in the interests of national security to reveal any known biological or chemical warfare agents to which there is no available medical countermeasure, as to do this would provide information to a potential aggressor against the UK.

Under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information I will not, therefore, disclose whether or not such agents exist.

Army Training

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure that the quality of training available to army personnel equips them both for their duties in the armed forces and for civilian employment on the completion of service. [34150]

Dr. Reid: The Army training system is primarily designed to ensure that each individual serviceman and woman is equipped effectively to carry out their military duties. It is, however, certainly the case that the specialist, leadership, initiative, communication and team skills which are developed throughout a military career are all transferable to a civilian environment, so that our Army is one of the best work forces in Britain.

In line with the Department's commitment to Investors in People, a great many opportunities exist, and are being developed, for Army personnel to acquire vocational and other civilian qualifications through their military training and experience. This training is quality assured through a combination of partnerships with lead and awarding bodies, and through individual access to accredited schemes. The attainment of recognisable civilian qualifications is a particular benefit to the Service leaver when he or she enters the civilian job market. The Army will be looking to see what more can be done in this area both to reflect our commitment to our Service personnel, in the context of the Strategic Defence Review, and in line with this Government's Life Long Learning initiative.

In their final year of service, eligible Service leavers are encouraged to take advantage of a broad range of sponsored resettlement training. This training, which is predominantly job-focused, is monitored and quality assured by the Tri-Service Resettlement Organisation, and adheres to Industry approved standards where appropriate. Service leavers are also encouraged to attend civilian courses which lead to a nationally recognised qualification.

Departmental Art Collection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to recover missing items of his Department's art collection; and if he will make a statement. [34763]

Mr. Spellar: We continue to make every effort to recover missing works of art. On two occasions, in December 1994 and September 1996, memorandums have been issued to all staff, listing the missing works of art and asking staff to assist in their recovery. In addition, photographs of missing works of art have been published in my Department's staff newspaper. My Department's works of art staff are continuing to seek missing works of art by examination of records, searches of our buildings and inquiries made throughout my Department. The Ministry of Defence Police assist in this task when required and are at present investigating a case which could lead to the recovery of a painting. Since the issue of the first memorandum, seventeen missing works of art have been found and twenty-one works of art have been otherwise accounted for.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34829]

Mr. Spellar: No non-departmental public bodies have been abolished or established since 1 May 1997.

Aer Lingus Viscount Crash, 1968

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost to the defence budget of operations undertaken by the UK in searching for remains of the Aer Lingus Viscount which crashed on 24 March 1968 in the Irish Sea; and how much of this cost was passed on to the Irish Government. [34811]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the right hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Countryside Management Schemes

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the total cost to public funds of countryside management schemes (a) nationally and (b) in Shropshire for each year since 1979. [34257]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the form requested. Information on grants provided by Countryside Commission for its countryside management schemes from 1982–83 to date is provided below:

New Housing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1998, Official Report, columns 95–96, what (a) research he has commissioned and (b) evidence he has evaluated concerning trends in the size of rooms in newly-built houses and flats. [34520]

Ms Armstrong: The Department does not collect information on the size of rooms in newly built houses and flats, and no research has been commissioned on this. Information is collected on the total useable floor area of houses and flats, and trends in the size of common types are set out below.

Average useable floor area of common dwelling types (sq m), by date of construction

Date of construction	1 bed flat	2 bed flat	2 bed house	3 bed house	4 bed house	All dwellings
1991–1996	45.5	55.5	55.9	81.2	112.5	71.6
1986–1991	42.3	59.0	54.4	71.6	125.6	73.1
1981–1986	44.7	52.2	55.0	78.9	110.7	71.7
1976–1981	44.7	60.7	60.2	76.7	118.3	74.9
All dwellings[1]	46.9	63.3	64.2	80.9	125.7	78.2

[1] This is for the whole stock and includes older dwellings which tend to be larger than those built today. All dwellings that have subsequently been extended from their original form have been excluded.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that large-scale developments of new housing have enough space set aside to provide for the leisure and recreational needs of prospective residents. [34338]

Mr. Caborn: Our Planning Policy Guidance note 17: "Sports and Recreation", advises local planning authorities to assess their needs for public open space and recreation provision, in order to identify deficiencies and draw up their own standards of provision. It also advises that local planning authorities may seek to enter into a planning obligation, under section 106 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 to secure provision of open space, playing fields and other facilities. We will be considering whether to revise this guidance in the light of recent research which we will be publishing in the near future.

Our Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing", advises that new housing developments should include adequate provision of suitable areas for children's play, including formal play space. We have recently announced our intention to revise this guidance. All aspects of this guidance will be reviewed.

Waste

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what statistics his Department collates on the trans-national movement of waste; what form the information takes; and what public access there is to this information; [34457]

(2) if he will list the types and quantities of toxic waste imported into the United Kingdom in each year since 1992 for (a) recycling and (b) other processing. [34456]

Angela Eagle: Information relating to transnational shipments of waste into and out of England and Wales is collected on behalf of my Department and the Welsh Office by the Environment Agency. The Scottish Environmental Protection Agency and the Environment and Heritage Agency of Northern Ireland collect similar information for Scotland and Northern Ireland respectively. Information on each shipment of waste is derived from the consignment notes that must accompany all international movements of waste and includes: date of entry/departure, type of waste, hazardous characteristics of shipment, amount imported/exported, country of origin or destination, the type of disposal or recovery operation to be used.

My Department publishes information on the types and quantities of waste imported into England and Wales for recycling and other processing in the "Digest of Environmental Statistics", which is available from the Stationery Office. The Digest also contain less detailed information on the quantities of waste imported into Scotland and Northern Ireland. A facsimile of the Digest is also placed on the Internet at http:\\www.detr.gov.uk\doe\envir\epsim. The tables show the information requested. Figures for 1994 cover only the period 6 May 1994 to 31 December 1994. Figures for 1995 are provisional. Figures for 1994 onwards are not strictly comparable with those for the earlier years, as replacement of the Transfrontier Shipment of Waste Regulations 1988, with Council Regulation (EEC) No 259/93 on 6 May 1994 led to changes in the operation of the system from which data are derived and to the definitions used.

Bedford Borough Council

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that the interim District Auditors report into financial irregularities in respect of Bedford Borough Council is released immediately. [34341]

Ms Armstrong: My right hon. Friend has no power to instruct an auditor to make a public interest report or to issue any instructions with regard to the publication of such a report. It is a matter for the auditor to consider whether he should use his powers under section 15(3) of the Local Government Finance Act 1982 to make a report to the body concerned. Where an auditor decides to make an immediate report the body concerned must make the report available for inspection and provide copies on request.

Green Ministers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Worsley (Mr. Lewis) of 31 July 1997, Official Report, column 542, if he will list the occasions since 30 July when Green Ministers have met, indicating what decisions were taken on each occasion. [34991]

Mr. Meacher: Since 30 July 1997 Green Ministers have met once, on 18 December. They endorsed policy guidance on environmental appraisal which has since been formally cleared by the Cabinet Environment Committee and will be issued shortly. They also shared information and best practice on various topics including: the outcome of the Kyoto Conference on climate change; the developing integrated transport policy; systems for policy appraisal; and the greening Departments' operations.

Since October 1997, I have also met individual Green Ministers in a series of 17 bilaterals designed to address matters of particular relevance to their Departments. Only one of these Departmental bilaterals remains to be held.

Allotments

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the area of allotment land for each London borough (a) for each of the past three years and (b) for 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [34307]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 March 1998]: This information is not held by the Department.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) she has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) she has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34823]

Mr. Foulkes: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development has neither abolished nor established any non-departmental public bodies since 1 May 1997.

WALES

NHS Trusts

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the projected end of year financial position of each NHS trust in Wales; [33294]

(2) what is the current financial position of each NHS trust in Wales. [33295]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The table sets out the projected end of year and current position as reported by trusts for the financial quarter December 1997:

Greenfield Sites

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hectares of green field land not classified as Green Belt and available for building there were in Wales on 1 May. [33481]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Information on the amount of Greenfield land available for building on is not available. However, it is up to local planning authorities to ensure that an adequate and continuous supply of suitable land is available for development in a way which is consistent with the principle of sustainable development.

After-school Clubs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to expand (a) after school homework clubs and (b) literacy and numeracy clubs in Wales. [33539]

Mr. Hain: Funding for out of school activities will be provided by the New Opportunities Fund, which will be established by the National Lottery Bill (Royal Assent is expected July 1998). A great many schools in Wales already offer high-quality out of school learning provision across the country. Lottery funding will therefore be very important not only in allowing schools to initiate projects to support children's learning but to expand and/or enhance existing work.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what draft concordats he is currently preparing to regulate the participation of Members of the National Assembly for Wales in meetings of the European Council of Ministers; and if he will make copies of such draft concordats available in the Library. [33891]

Mr. Ron Davies: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 10 March 1998, Official Report, column 156. All relevant concordats will where appropriate cover European matters.

Tourism

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the percentage of (a) domestic holiday makers and (b) overseas visitors to the United Kingdom who spend their holiday in Wales. [33816]

Mr. Hain: In 1996, the latest year for which figures are available, 11.1 per cent. of domestic and 3.8 per cent. of overseas holidaymakers visited Wales.

Music Tuition

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent by each unitary authority on (a) music tuition, (b) youth choirs, (c) orchestras and (d) brass bands in each of the last five years. [34349]

Mr. Ron Davies: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps to increase expenditure on music tuition in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [34354]

Mr. Ron Davies: The provision of music services is a matter for local authorities and it is the responsibility of individual authorities to determine how the resources made available to them are allocated between services, taking into account their statutory responsibilities and perceptions of local needs and priorities.

Historic Properties

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what grants are available to help historic properties retain their traditional features; and if he will make a statement. [34353]

Mr. Hain: Grants to assist in the repair or restoration of buildings of outstanding historic or architectural interest and towards works to buildings which will significantly enhance or preserve a conservation area are available from the Welsh Office. I have sent the hon. Member a copy of Cadw's booklet "Historic Buildings Grants and Conservation Area Grants".

In addition, many local authorities work with Cadw in jointly funding Town Schemes which provide assistance for external repairs to properties.

Sports Grants

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the total grant-in-aid made available by the Sports Council of Wales to governing bodies of sport for each of the financial years 1992 to 1998; and what it is projected to be for the next three financial years; [34250]

(2) if he will list, by individual governing body, the grant-in-aid projected to be made available by the Sports Council for Wales to governing bodies of sport for the next three financial years; [34252]

(3) if he will list, by individual governing body, the grant-in-aid made available by the Sports Council for Wales to governing bodies of sport for each of the financial years 1992 to 1998. [34249]

Mr. Ron Davies: These are operational matters for the Sports Council for Wales and I will ask the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend with the information he has requested. A copy of his letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34824]

Mr. Ron Davies: Since 1 May 1997 the following non-departmental public bodies have been abolished: Agricultural Advisory Panel for Wales; Staff Commission for Wales; and the Welsh Council for Post Graduate Medical and Dental Education. In addition the following non-departmental public bodies have also been identified for abolition: Cardiff Bay Development Corporation; the Development Board for Rural Wales; the Land Authority for Wales; the Residuary Body for Wales; and Tai Cymru. I have not established any new non-departmental public bodies since 1 May 1997.

Tram Scheme, Llandudno

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) when Conwy County Borough Council submitted a bid for Government funding for its proposed tram scheme in Llandudno; [34808]

(2) what is the completion date of Conwy County Borough Council's proposed tram scheme for Llandudno; [34885]

(3) if Conwy County Borough Council had planning consent for its proposed tram scheme in Llandudno before it submitted a bid for Government funding; [34888]

(4) what steps he has taken to secure the refund of the Government grant to Conwy County Borough Council for the purpose of a tram scheme in Llandudno, if the tram scheme does not proceed. [34884]

Mr. Hain: Conwy County Borough Council's application for Welsh Capital Challenge funding for the proposed tramway at Llandudno was submitted under cover of a letter from the Chief Executive on 10 October 1996. This application was made in advance of planning consent being sought.

The then Secretary of State approved funding of £1.1 million over 3 years in the 1997–98 Challenge round towards a £2.6 million project cost with the difference being met by a number of private companies. Completion of the project was planned for 1999–2000.

The proposed tramway project is part of a wider planning application currently before the Council. In the event of significant slippage against the project's original timetable and expenditure profile, as with all Welsh Capital Challenge approvals where such slippage occurs, the Secretary of State will want to consider in due course whether it is appropriate to withdraw the offer of funding, or to make funds available for completion of the project in future years.

Walton Hospital, Liverpool

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make an assessment of the impact on the health of patients needing to see a neurosurgeon of long journeys to Walton Hospital, Liverpool. [34820]

Mr. Win Griffiths: No. It is for clinicians to make such an assessment, based on the likely benefit to each patient of investigation and treatment from the specialist neuro-surgical service at Walton Hospital.

Companies' Costs

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the change in costs for companies in Wales as a result of changes in taxation since 1 May 1997. [33625]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

All taxpaying companies will benefit from the 2 per cent. cut in corporation tax rates announced in the last Budget. Details of other tax measures are shown in table 2.2 of the July 1997 Financial Statement and Budget Report. No separate figures are available for companies in Wales.

Company Pension Schemes

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the impact of the additional taxation on pension schemes on companies in Wales. [33621]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

An estimate of the effect of the July 1997 tax credit changes on the pension schemes of companies in Wales is not available.

Export Credits Guarantees

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the working of the export credits guarantee system as it affects the industries of Wales. [33537]

Mrs. Roche: I have been asked to reply.

Export credit cover for United Kingdom companies is made available by the Export Credits Guarantee Department (primarily for capital goods and project exports) and a number of private sector insurers such as NCM, Trade Indemnity and Coface LBF (for other goods). All of these organisations will be able to offer the full range of their facilities to the industries of Wales.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Summit

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the estimated total cost to his Department of holding the European Summit meeting in Cardiff in June 1998. [34495]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The current estimated forecast total cost to this Department of the European Council in Cardiff is £6.5 million (excl. VAT).

Iraq

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many inspections have been carried out by UNSCOM in Iraq since 1 March; and at what locations. [34613]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Since 1 March 1998, the Special Commission's resident Monitoring Groups have conducted regular monitoring inspections throughout Iraq. In addition they have provided support to visiting short-term teams. UNSCOM have not released the precise numbers of inspections and names of sites into the public domain.

Harare Declaration

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to amend the Harare Declaration. [34621]

Mr. Doug Henderson: None. The commitments contained in the Harare Commonwealth Declaration are as valid today as they were in 1991 when they were agreed by Commonwealth Heads of Government. At the most recent Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting, which took place in Edinburgh in October 1997, Heads of Government reaffirmed their commitment to the fundamental values of the Commonwealth, as set out in the Harare Declaration. They agreed that compliance with those values would be one of the conditions for countries applying to join the Commonwealth. And they agreed a wider remit for the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group, which is tasked to address serious and persistent violations of the Harare principles.

BBC World Service

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future of the BBC World Service. [34611]

Mr. Fatchett: The BBC World Service is an important national asset and makes a vital contribution to the promotion of Britain abroad. We are committed to the maintenance of its outstanding reputation for objective news and comment and continued pre-eminence among international broadcasters.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list his meetings with the Chinese Government where the jamming of BBC World Service short wave transmissions to China was on the formal agenda; [34610]

(2) what representations he has made to the Chinese Government concerning the jamming of the BBC World Services short wave transmissions to China. [34612]

Mr. Fatchett: The BBC have not asked us to take up this matter with the Chinese authorities. We raised the issue of media freedom in our dialogues with the Chinese on human rights. We are also pressing for Chinese signature of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which includes the right to receive and impart information and ideas, of all kinds, regardless of frontiers.

South Africa

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the projects supported by his Department to promote multi-party democracy in South Africa. [34578]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Many of the activities of our High Commission in South Africa are intended to help create the context in which multi-party democracy can flourish. This has included specific projects such as assistance to the Institute for Democracy in South Africa (IDASA) and the Helen Suzman Foundation, as well as support for independent journalism. The Department for International Development also promotes multi-party democracy, for example through its programme of Parliamentary visits, and its contribution to workshops for legislators in the region organised by the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

The Westminster Foundation for Democracy, to which this department contributes financially, has approved the following projects in South Africa in Financial Year 1997–98:

Conference on the Role of Political Parties

ANC Follow-up Fundraising Workshop

Support for Parliamentary Monitoring Office

Workshop to Build Policy Skills in National, Provincial and Local Government

Training for Local Government Councillors

Conservative Party visit to South Africa, Namibia and Botswana

Support for KwaZulu Natal Monitoring Publication

Support for IDASA Political Analysis and Monitoring Publication.

EU Directives

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those EU directives of which it is his Department's policy to seek a repeal, and about which he has approached other EU member states. [34624]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We are committed to simpler and better EU legislation which conforms with the principle of subsidiarity.

This can often be achieved by simplifying existing legislation and ensuring that new legislation does not impose disproportionate burdens rather than by repeal.

We are pursuing during the UK Presidency a number of means to achieve this, for example, through the Simpler Legislation for the Internal Market (SLIM) initiative, which aims to reduce the burden of certain internal market regulations.

Turkey

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives are being pursued to improve relations between Turkey and the EU. [34575]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Luxembourg European Council in December 1997 agreed to draw up a European Strategy for Turkey, designed to prepare Turkey for accession by bringing it closer to the European Union in every field. This should consist of development of the possibilities afforded by the Ankara Agreement; intensification of the Customs Union; implementation of financial cooperation; approximation of laws and adoption of the Union acquis; and participation, on a case by case basis, in certain EU programmes and agencies.

The Commission tabled its initial proposals for this strategy on 4 March. We will be taking these forward as Presidency of the EU.

Belarus

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) the strength of democratic institutions and (b) the human rights record of the Government in Belarus. [34622]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Democratic institutions in Belarus are weak. We fully support the work of the recently established OSCE Advisory and Monitoring Group (AMG) in Minsk, which aims to assist the Belarussian authorities in promoting democratic institutions and in complying with other OSCE commitments.

Belarus's human rights record is poor. We have particular concerns about freedom of speech and association and media freedom, which we have frequently raised with the Belarussian authorities. In February 1998, the UK Presidency on behalf of the EU protested against heavy sentences imposed on two youths for painting anti-government slogans on public buildings and statues.

Latvia

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent disturbances in Latvia between native Latvians and the ethnic Russian population. [34577]

Mr. Doug Henderson: On 3 March a crowd, mainly from the Russian-speaking community, and mostly pensioners, gathered outside Riga town hall to protest about increased heating charges. As numbers grew, police moved in to force the crowd back on to the pavement. An initial investigation by the Latvian authorities into claims that the police used unnecessary force has concluded that no police officers were guilty of misconduct. There have been no reports of serious injuries. We are encouraging both the Russian and the Latvian governments to ensure that their reactions to the incident are proportionate to the events themselves.

Esperanto

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will assess the advantages of promoting (a) Esperanto and (b) another language as the common official language of the European Union following the accession of the candidate member states; and if he will make a statement. [34745]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We do not consider it realistic to expect Member States of an enlarged European Union to agree on a common official language.

Yemen and Oman

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit (a) Yemen and (b) Oman. [34556]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no current plans to visit either Yemen or Oman.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings have taken place since 1 May involving representatives from his Department at which (a) Oman and (b) Yemen were discussed; and how many meetings he and his ministers have had with representatives of the (i) Oman and (ii) Yemeni Governments. [34557]

Mr. Fatchett: There have been numerous meetings between officials and members of the Yemeni and Omani Embassies since May 1997.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met the Yemeni Foreign Minister in London in June last year and called on the President of Yemen during his visit to the UK last November. The Yemeni Foreign Minister also called on me in January.

My right hon. Friend met the Omani Minister responsible for Foreign Affairs last July. I have visited Oman twice since May 1997. During my visits I met representatives of the Omani Government, including His Majesty Sultan Qaboos. Two Omani ministers have called on me during the same period.

EU Common Foreign and Security Policy

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the Common Foreign and Security Policy working groups established by the EU; and if he will make a statement. [33948]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Common Foreign and Security Policy working groups established by the EU are:

Administrative Affairs Africa
Armaments Policy
Asia
Central Europe
Communications
Consular Affairs
Conventional Arms Exports Drugs
Eastern Europe and Central Asia
Euro-Mediterranean
Global Disarmament
Human Rights
Latin America
Law of the Sea
Mashreq/Maghreb
Middle East/Gulf
Middle East Peace Process
Nuclear
Non-proliferation
OSCE
Planners
Protocol
Public International Law
Security
South-East Europe
Terrorism
United Nations
Western Balkans Region.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many Common Foreign and Security Policy working groups established by the EU the United Kingdom is represented; and by whom. [33947]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The United Kingdom is represented on all 28 Common Foreign and Security Policy working groups by officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the terms of reference of the Common Foreign and Security Policy working groups established by the EU; when they were established; and how often they meet. [33949]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Since the entry into force of the Maastricht Treaty in November 1993, 28 Common Foreign and Security Policy working groups have been created. The groups meet regularly to discuss topical issues and areas of cooperation within their respective remits as follows: Administrative Affairs, Africa, Armaments Policy, Asia, Central Europe, Communications, Consular Affairs, Conventional Arms Exports, Drugs, Eastern Europe and Central Asia, Euro-Mediterranean, Global Disarmament, Human Rights, Latin America, Law of the Sea, Mashreq/Maghreb, Middle East/Gulf, Middle East Peace Process, Nuclear Non-proliferation, OSCE, Planners, Protocol, Public International Law, Security, South-East Europe, Terrorism, United Nations, Western Balkans Region.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34836]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has neither abolished nor established any non-departmental public bodies since 1 May 1997.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what subjects were discussed when the UK High Commissioner to Sierra Leone met representatives of Sandline in 1997; and who was present; [34315]

(2) if the UK High Commissioner to Sierra Leone was authorised by Ministers to meet representatives of Sandline in 1997. [34316]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the statement my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) made covering this point in the Adjournment Debate of 12 March 1998, Official Report, columns 844–45.

Peter Penfold, the British High Commissioner to Sierra Leone, has confirmed that on no occasion did he attend any meetings at which Sandline and President Kabbah were present together. In the course of his duties Mr. Penfold met a wide range of people including representatives of Sandline Services and affiliates. These contacts did not require prior ministerial approval. Mr. Penfold, who moved to Conakry following the May 1997 military coup in Freetown, used them to help obtain information about Sierra Leone, particularly the security situation in relation to British nationals and interests.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police (Firearms)

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been authorised to carry firearms; for how many operations firearms have been issued; and how many operations involving armed response vehicles there have been in each of the last three years for which information is available. [35188]

Mr. Michael: The information is as follows:

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many operations firearms were issued to police officers in England and Wales in each of the last 10 years for which information is available; in how many operations shots were fired by police officers in each year; how many police officers were qualified to carry firearms; and if he will make a statement. [35189]

Mr. Michael: This information is as follows:

Year	Number of authorised firearms officers	Number of operations	Number of operations in which shots fired by the police
1987	7,349	2,185	7
1988	7,194	2,227	2
1989	7,311	2,583	4
1990	7,411	2,874	3
1991	7,717	3,722	5
1992	6,850	4,479	12
1993	6,769	5,625	6
1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995	6,837	5,824	5
1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996	6,554	8,476	5
1 April 1996 to 31 March 1997	6,738	12,379	5

Reasons for the increases in number of policy firearms operations will vary between forces, and they are best placed to answer specific inquiries. Although the number of authorised firearms officers has dropped over the years, police forces are now much better equipped to deal with armed crime, thanks to armed response vehicles and updated practices. Police firearms have only been fired in five operations in each of the last three years. This very low number confirms that police firearms officers generally carry out their duties with professionalism and restraint.

Curfews

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend to all courts the power to make curfew orders enforced by electronic monitoring. [35238]

Ms Quin: Curfew orders under section 12 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991, enforced by electronic monitoring, are at present available to the courts as a penalty only in restricted pilot areas. It is our intention that these orders should in due course be made available to all courts in England and Wales.

There is a competitive tender for the provision of electronic monitoring services underway throughout England and Wales. The primary purpose of this service, which will be provided, as at present, by the private sector, is to provide electronic monitoring for prisoners under the home detention curfew scheme, under which selected short term prisoners may spend up to the last two months of their sentence under an electronically monitored curfew. I anticipate that the home detention curfew scheme will be operational in early 1999. However, contractors will also be required to provide electronic monitoring for other purposes, including curfew orders, should they be required. Roll out of curfew orders will follow the establishment of the home detention curfew scheme, according to a timetable to be discussed with those concerned and as resources allow.

European Elections

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many other members of the European Union require voters to vote for a closed list at the regional level in European elections. [34139]

Mr. George Howarth: France, Germany, Greece, Spain and Portugal use closed list systems to elect their Members to the European Parliament. France, Greece, Spain and Portugal use national lists while Germany employs a combination of federal and Land lists.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34834]

Mr. Straw: (a) No Home Office Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) have been abolished since 1 May 1997. However, the future of six NDPBs will be affected by current developments and I hope to be able to announce in due course that several will be abolished, merged or 'sunsetted'.

(b) No new Home Office NDPBs have been created since 1 May 1997. However, under the provisions of Part IV of the Police Act 1997, the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO), which is currently part of the Department, will be established as an executive NDPB with effect from 1 April 1998. The Organisation's forward plan for 1997–98, published in April 1997, gave a figure of £50,960k for its total gross expenditure for this year. I am unable to provide a figure for 1998–99. This is because I cannot anticipate the presentation of the Home Office Departmental Report and the main Supply Estimates to Parliament. This will happen shortly after the Budget. I will then write to the hon. Member with the information for the coming financial year.

The Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] contains proposals to establish a National Board for Youth Justice as an NDPB.

Mrs. Poole

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the factors underlying the delay in establishing a date for a hearing appeal by Mr. and Mrs. Poole against the decision to grant an entry visa for Mrs. Poole's children to the United Kingdom; [34950]

(2) when the hon. Member for West Chelmsford can expect answers to his correspondence with his Department from 6 January onwards, relating to when Mr. and Mrs. Poole's appeal, reference UK16593, on behalf of Mrs. Poole's children to be granted an entry visa to the United Kingdom, will be heard. [34949]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The case is currently with the Immigration Appellate Authority, which is responsible for hearing immigration appeals. My officials are looking into the matters raised and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Correspondence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 3 February from the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam concerning the extradition of a constituent. [34963]

Mr. Michael: The hon. Member's letter was given full consideration on receipt as a representation by a Member of Parliament on behalf of a constituent. I replied to the hon. Member on Monday 16 March following a decision on the case on Friday 13 March.

Firearms (Compensation)

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects claim ref. HER 12176 to be settled under the Firearms Compensation Scheme. [34325]

Mr. Michael: Claim No. HER 12176 was received in the Firearms Compensation Section on 29 September 1997, and the Option A and B elements of that claim are likely to be processed in around four weeks' time. The Option C elements, which will require individual consideration of the evidence of value provided, will be dealt with at a later date.

Drugs and Criminal Justice Conference

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the outcome of the Drugs and Criminal Justice Conference held on 28 to 30 January; and if he will place in the Library a summary record of the proceedings; [34687]

(2) if he will list the participants, and their organisational affiliations, who attended the Drugs and Criminal Justice Conference on 28 to 30 January. [34685]

Mr. Michael: The conference was a consultation exercise to inform the development of the Government's new anti-drugs strategy. A copy of the conference report, which includes details of participants, has been placed in the Library.

Convicted Police Officers (Pensions)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to reduce the pension entitlement of convicted police officers. [34340]

Mr. Michael: Police Pensions Regulations provide for police authorities to forfeit the pensions of police officers convicted of treason or of offences under the Official Secrets Act. There is also provision for forfeiture of a pension where an officer has been convicted of an offence committed in connection with his service as a member of a police force which has been certified by the Secretary of State to have been either gravely injurious to the interests of the State or liable to lead to serious loss of confidence in the public service. It is the responsibility of police authorities to identify cases which might merit forfeiture and to apply to the Secretary of State for the issue of a certificate. In the Metropolitan Police Service, the Commissioner identifies such cases to the Secretary of State. While such cases are few, it is wrong to provide public money for the pensions of those officers who have abused their position of trust and forfeiture should be a serious consideration in all such cases.

Millennium Compliance

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost to his Department of (a) consultants and (b) contractors engaged by his Department to address millennium computer compliance problems; and if he will list the consultants and contractors. [32299]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 3 March 1998]: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 3 March 1998, Official Report, column 622. Non pay running costs noted in that answer is the estimated cost to my Department of consultants and contractors. The consultants and contractors engaged to address millennium compliance problems are Bull Information Systems Ltd; CCTA; Grosvenor Consulting Ltd; Mentis; Oracle; Praxis; Sema Group; and Software AG.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when all testing on Year 2000 compliance will be completed in his Department. [32312]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 3 March 1998]: Year 2000 compliance testing will be completed on all business critical systems within my Department by January 1999. Testing of some non-critical systems will continue after this date, to be completed by mid 1999.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contingency plans have been made for (a) the Fire Service College, (b) the Forensic Science Service, (c) the UK Passport Agency and (d) HM Prison Service in the event of a failure due to Year 2000 computer problems. [32302]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 3 March 1998]: (a) The Fire Service College have recently installed a redeveloped Year 2000 compliant system. Contingency plans are included within their Year 2000 strategy. (b) The Forensic Science Service contingency plans will be completed by the end of March 1998. (c) The United Kingdom Passport Agency will have a redeveloped Year 2000 compliant computer system in place before the Year 2000. Their current system is being tested for Year 2000 compliance as a contingency measure. (d) Her Majesty's Prison Service have plans in place to cover failure of strategic computer systems. These will be reviewed to ensure they cater for failure due to Year 2000 computer problems.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department from which budgetary sub-head the costs of millennium compliance will be met by his Department. [32298]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 3 March 1998]: Millennium compliance costs will be met from existing Capital and Non Pay Running Costs budgetary sub-heads.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for the latest available date the total number of Czech and Slovak Roma asylum seekers who (a) are in detention awaiting determination of their cases, (b) have been released on bail, (c) are awaiting deportation following refusal of their application and (d) have been granted asylum or leave to remain in the United Kingdom. [34310]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Czech and Slovak Roma are not separately identifiable in the statistics; the available information relates to all asylum applications lodged in the United Kingdom by nationals of Slovakia and the Czech Republic.

For information regarding initial decisions made during 1996 and 1997 on asylum applications lodged in the United Kingdom by nationals of Slovakia and the Czech Republic, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to him on 29 January 1998, Official Report, columns 336–37. Equivalent information for years prior to 1996 is not available. For additional information, may I also refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Gerrard) on 11 February 1998, Official Report, columns 207–08, which provided statistical data regarding those asylum applications lodged at the port of Dover by Czech and Slovak nationals.

One Slovakian and one Czech family (husband, wife and son—each asylum seekers in their own right), have had their appeals allowed and have been granted asylum.

As at 27 February 1998, a total of four nationals of Slovakia and the Czech Republic, who had sought asylum at some stage, were recorded as detained solely under Immigration Act powers. Of these, one person was awaiting an initial decision on their application while the remainder were awaiting the outcome of appeals.

I regret that comprehensive information on the number of Czech and Slovak asylum seekers who have been released on bail, or on the number of those who have currently reached a stage where they could be removed from the United Kingdom (either through the deportation process, removal as an illegal entrant or removal under port procedures), is not available.

Immigration Advisers

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) pursuant to his oral answers of 2 February 1998, Official Report, columns 703–04, on immigration advisers, how many complaints his Department has made to (a) the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors and (b) the Legal Aid Board in respect of the firms of solicitors whose conduct in immigration cases is of concern to his Department; [34580]

(2) how many complaints his Department has made to (a) the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors and (b) the Legal Aid Board about the conduct of solicitors acting in immigration cases in the past (i) month, (ii) six months and (iii) year; [34534]

(3) how many occasions in the past 12 months his Department has asked the Legal Services Ombudsman to examine the way in which the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors dealt with a complaint by his Department about the conduct of a solicitor acting in an immigration case; [34533]

(4) pursuant to his oral answer of 2 February 1998, Official Report, columns 703–04, on immigration advisers, what information his Department has passed to the Law Society about the identity and practices of those particular firms of solicitors whose conduct in immigration cases is of concern to his Department; and on what dates. [34579]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The Department contacts the Law Society or the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors from time to time when there is evidence that an immigration adviser who is a solicitor has acted in an unprofessional manner, or to check on credentials. Most recently, on 11 March, the Immigration Service wrote to the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors with a list of approximately 50 advisers who are of interest to them, who either are solicitors or have improperly represented themselves as solicitors. The information provided will vary from case to case and no central record has been kept of all such references. It would be inappropriate to publish any details of companies and individuals who may be the subject of current or future investigation.

We contact the Legal Aid Board for clarification or to provide information where there appears to have been an abuse of the Legal Aid scheme.

There is no central record of formal complaints which have been made by or on behalf of the Department to either the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors or the Legal Aid Board, although it appears the number of such referrals is small. I regret that the specific information requested would only be available at disproportionate cost.

I understand there have been no references to the Legal Services Ombudsman in the past 12 months.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

39. Mr. Gibb: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been spent by his Department since 1 May 1997 on the employment of consultants to advise on the proposed reforms of the legal aid system. [33193]

44. Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been spent by his Department since 1 May 1997 on the employment of consultants to advise on the proposed reforms of the legal aid system. [33198]

Mr. Hoon: To answer the hon. Member's question strictly nothing has been paid to consultants since 1 May 1997. We have asked KPMG, who are both accountants and management consultants, to establish whether lawyers can take cases using conditional fees for clients who cannot meet up-front costs and make a profit. The results of their work will be published shortly and the merging conclusions are that lawyers will be able profitably to take cases without needing funding from the client. No payment has been made to KPMG yet.

Conditional Fees

40. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he plans to meet representatives of the Bar to discuss his statement to the House regarding conditional fee arrangements and legal aid. [33194]

45. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he plans to meet the chairman of the Bar to discuss conditional fee arrangements and legal aid. [33199]

Mr. Hoon: Both my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor and I, and our officials, have had a number of meetings with representatives of the Bar Council to discuss conditional fees. I last met the Chairman of the Bar last Tuesday to discuss the Government's consultation paper on conditional fees and legal aid.

Courts (West Cumbria)

41. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has for the future of courts in West Cumbria. [33195]

Mr. Hoon: I have no current plans for any changes affecting the courts in west Cumbria.

Civil Justice Review

42. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the civil justice review. [33196]

Mr. Hoon: The Government plan to introduce fundamental reform to the civil justice system, making it quicker, cheaper and more certain. The reforms will benefit everyone. Procedures and rules will be simplified, and judicial case management will provide tailored procedures and minimise delay. Pre-action provisions will enable many claims to be settled faster.

We have already announced that implementation will take place in April 1999, and work is progressing as planned.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he intends to publish the research on legal aid and civil justice reforms carried out by KPMG and the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies. [33963]

Mr. Hoon: The KPMG analysis of the business case for a solicitors firm undertaking litigation using conditional fees will be published in the next few weeks. It will indicate that conditional fees offer profitable business to lawyers even where they, rather than their clients, meet the up-front costs of insurance and running the case. I anticipate publishing the research, carried out by the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies in due course once we have completed consideration of costs regimes in the fast track.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he intends to publish his proposals on civil justice reform, with particular reference to the costs regime in the fast track. [33964]

Mr. Hoon: I would expect to make an announcement about a costs regime in the fast track after Easter.

Immigration Adjudicators

43. Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to increase the (a) training and (b) numbers of immigration adjudicators. [33197]

Mr. Hoon: In respect of training, in addition to the usual training, all adjudicators will be trained on the impact of the Human Rights Bill in the next 18 months. In respect of numbers, I can report that 43 new part time adjudicators were recruited in 1997 and we expect to recruit about 30 more this year.

Public Trust Office

Jacqui Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether a review of the Public Trust Office's Framework Document has been carried out. [35139]

Mr. Hoon: The Public Trust Office's Framework Document has now been reviewed. As the interval between agency reviews has been extended from three to five years since the Public Trust Office attained agency status, the new Document is designed to cover the interim period until the Public Trust Office's first Quinquennial Review, to be completed by the end of 1999. Copies of the revised Framework Document have been placed in the Library of both Houses of Parliament.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34835]

Mr. Hoon: No non-departmental public bodies have yet been abolished but two have been established since 1 May. These are the Civil Procedure Rule Committee, which is preparing the new code of civil procedure rules, and the Civil Justice Council, which will monitor the civil justice system to ensure that progress to modernise it continues. Both were created by the Civil Procedure Act 1997. We have budgeted for annual expenditure of £10,000 on the Rule Committee and £80,000 for the Council.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Parliament (European Union)

12. Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on relations between the proposed Scottish Parliament and EU institutions. [33166]

Mr. Dewar: The Government's intentions on links between the Scottish Parliament and the institutions of the European Communities are as set out in Chapter 5 of the White Paper, "Scotland's Parliament".

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what draft concordats he is currently preparing to regulate the participation of Ministers of the Scottish Executive in meetings of the European Council of Ministers; and if he will make a copy of the draft concordats available in the Library. [33890]

Mr. Dewar: Discussions are in train, at Ministerial and official level, about the non-statutory arrangements which will be needed for policy co-ordination of EU issues after devolution. Work on the draft of an agreement, which cannot be finalised until the Scottish Executive is established, is at an early stage. I shall make copies of the draft agreement available when this work is sufficiently advanced.

"Designed to Care"

13. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what meetings he has held with representatives of health boards and NHS trusts to discuss the White Paper, "Designed to Care". [33167]

Mr. Galbraith: Implementation of the White Paper "Designed to Care" is a constant theme in my discussions with Health Boards and NHS Trusts.

Private Finance Initiatives

14. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Private Finance Initiative projects are under consideration by the Scottish Office. [33168]

Mr. Dewar: Tenders have been invited or advertised for 29 Private Finance Initiative projects and a further 24 projects are being investigated.

Police Funding

15. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the Scottish Police forces regarding funding levels in 1998–99. [33169]

Mr. McLeish: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State received representations on funding levels from, and held meetings with, chief constables and police authorities and the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities before the local government finance settlement was announced in December.

Education Provision (Highlands)

16. Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on education provision in the Scottish Highlands. [33170]

Mr. Wilson: School education provision in the Scottish Highlands is primarily a matter for the local authorities concerned.

Examination League Tables

17. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what decisions he has made on the use of league tables for examination results in Scottish schools. [33171]

Mr. Wilson: I wish to improve and extend the information published on school performance and will seek the advice of the Ministerial Action Group on Standards on how that is achieved.

Farm Incomes

18. Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish National Farmers Union to discuss farm incomes. [33172]

Mr. Macdonald: Government Ministers meet the National Farmers Union of Scotland on a regular basis. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State last met Union leaders on 9 February when farm incomes were amongst the topics discussed. My noble Friend Lord Sewel last met the Union on 19 February and addressed their AGM on 6 March.

New Deal Pathfinder Areas

19. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the New Deal Pathfinder Areas. [33173]

Mr. Wilson: I am very pleased with the excellent start made by the New Deal programme in Tayside.

Voluntary Organisations

20. Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from voluntary organisations on the impact of reductions in (i) Government and (ii) council budgets. [33174]

Mr. McLeish: The few representations which have been received from voluntary organisations have mainly been about individual grant decisions, rather than about government and council budgets.

Social Exclusion Network

21. Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had regarding the establishment of the social exclusion network. [33175]

Mr. Macdonald: The Social Exclusion Network consists of senior representatives of the Scottish Office, the Employment Service and the Benefits Agency, to take forward the social exclusion agenda in Scotland. A consultation paper inviting views on the way forward was issued in early February. Responses have been requested by the end of March.

Scottish Parliament (Concordats)

22. Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the legal status of concordats to be agreed between the Scottish Parliament and Government Departments. [33176]

Mr. McLeish: Concordats are to be agreed between the UK Government and the Scottish Executive, rather than with the Scottish Parliament. The guidance note which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State placed in the libraries of both Houses of Parliament on 27 February made clear that the purpose of the proposed concordats would not be to create legal obligations on either party, or to constrain the discretion of the Scottish Executive or that of the UK Government.

Children's Hospital, Aberdeen

23. Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the new children's hospital in Aberdeen. [33177]

Mr. Galbraith: My right hon. Friend announced on 6 January that as a result of co-operation between the Health Board and Trusts in Grampian a new Children's Hospital would be built and operational in Aberdeen by 2003. This will be part of a £22 million development of hospital services in Grampian made possible by the disposal of redundant estate.

Residential Care Homes

24. Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the recommendations contained in the report of the Working Group on Residential Care Home Registration Procedures which (a) have been implemented and (b) have yet to be adopted by his Department. [33178]

Mr. Galbraith: Guidance to local authorities on 16 of the Report's recommendations is due to be issued in final form later this month. Copies will be placed in the House Library. The recommendations to create a national consultative group and to compile a list of persons refused registration are under active consideration. The remaining recommendations require legislative action when a suitable opportunity presents.

Beef Producers

25. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from Scottish beef producers on imports from overseas. [33179]

Mr. Macdonald: Importing beef from overseas has been discussed at the various meetings which my right hon. Friend and my noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries have had recently with representatives of the Scottish beef industry to discuss the difficulties affecting this important sector of Scottish agriculture.

Council Tax Arrears

26. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Commissioner for Public Accounts in Scotland to discuss arrears of council tax. [33180]

Mr. Macdonald: I last met Mr. Robert Black, the Controller of Audit at the Accounts Commission for Scotland, on Thursday 29 January when a wide range of issues, including Value for Money studies, were discussed.

Land Reform

27. Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many responses he has received to the Land Reform Policy Group's consultative paper on land. [33181]

Mr. Macdonald: Since this consultation paper was published only on 20 February no written responses have so far been received. However, the considerable interest the paper is generating and the welcome it has had from a range of commentators encourage us to anticipate a significant number of responses by the end of the consultation period on 30 April.

Young People

28. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements exist to evaluate the short and long-term success of the New Deal for young people. [33182]

Mr. Wilson: The Government accept that monitoring and evaluation of the New Deal will be crucial to its success, and a number of systems are in place to collect and analyse the relevant data on an ongoing basis. In addition, bids have been invited to undertake independent evaluation of the extent to which the aims and objectives of the programme are met.

Infrastructure Priority Programme (Lothian)

29. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to publish the infrastructure priority programme for Lothian. [33183]

Mr. McLeish: I do not publish such a programme. I understand that my hon. Friend is interested in two particular projects, the A68 Dalkeith Northern Bypass and the Esk Valley Sewer.

The A68 Dalkeith Northern Bypass in common with other major roads projects is subject to the ongoing review of the Scottish trunk road programme. Until the review is concluded in mid Summer and its implications considered in the light of the available resources, it will not be possible to specify what priority the scheme will have in any future programme.

The construction of the upgraded Esk Valley Sewer is the responsibility of the East of Scotland Water Authority. The Authority is procuring the contract through the Private Finance Initiative and the current intention is that the contract will be let in October 1998. Construction on site will commence in early 1999. The aim is to have the work completed by the end of the year 2000 in order to comply with the requirements of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Regulations.

Scottish Parliament

30. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the subject of equal representation of men and women in the Scottish Parliament. [33184]

Mr. McLeish: The Scottish Office has received six letters making representations about equal representation in the Scottish Parliament. The subject has also been raised with me orally on many occasions by different bodies and individuals.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the cost of upgrading (a) Calton Hill, Edinburgh, (b) the Mound, Edinburgh, and (c) the proposed Glasgow sites to the required standard for the Scottish parliament. [33881]

Mr. Dewar: In preparing assessments of options for interim accommodation for the Scottish Parliament, my officials have made outline estimates of the comparative capital and running costs of solutions based on the Church of Scotland Assembly Hall on the Mound, Edinburgh; the Old Royal High School Building, Edinburgh; and the former Strathclyde Region chambers at Charing Cross, Glasgow. These estimates include capital costs of upgrading the buildings, and rent and rates over a 2-year period. The costs cover office accommodation required by the Parliament.

The overall estimates are:

The Assembly Hall, Edinburgh: £4m

Old Royal High School, Edinburgh: £5m

Charing Cross, Glasgow: £3m.

The Edinburgh options do not take account of space currently occupied by the City of Edinburgh Council.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the buildings and their total available floor space under consideration as temporary accommodation for the Scottish Parliament at (a) Calton Hill, Edinburgh, (b) the Mound, Edinburgh, and (c) Glasgow. [33883]

Mr. Dewar: The buildings and their total available floor space currently under consideration as interim accommodation for the Scottish Parliament are as follows:

	sq. ft.
Old Royal High School	22,000
Office accommodation	76,000
Assembly Hall	13,800
Office accommodation	79,500
Glasgow complex	134,000

The figures for office accommodation in Edinburgh are based on known availability of commercial premises. Office accommodation currently occupied by the City of Edinburgh Council has not yet been included in the assessment.

Public Buildings

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the buildings in public ownership between Old St. Andrew's House and the junction of Princes Street and the North Bridge. [33899]

Mr. Dewar: The Scottish Office owns the Governor's House and the property at 16/22 Waterloo Place. The Scottish Record Office owns HM General Register House at 2 Princes Street.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the maintenance costs for each Scottish Office building in Edinburgh. [34447]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 13 March 1998]: The maintenance costs for each Scottish Office building in Edinburgh for the most recent financial year are given in the table.

Building	£ 1996–97
16 Waterloo Place	26,220
Greenside Lane	29,090
Pentland House	88,630
Saughton House	189,790
St. Andrew's House	153,860
Bute House	38,260
Unit 4A, Bonnington	7,020
Unit 4B, Bonnington	6,850
Victoria Quay	414,500
Governor's House	25,850
17 Waterloo Place	2,950
James Craig Walk	40,140
Bankhead Avenue	23,620
16–22 Picardy Place	4,140
Leith Walk	12,030
Tower Street	2,680

Maintenance costs include all programmed, routine, emergency and one-off internal and external property works. Major refurbishment is not included as a maintenance item.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the publicly owned buildings in central Edinburgh which are (a) currently empty and (b) subject to a temporary lease, indicating the floor space available at each site. [34446]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 13 March 1998]: My Department does not own any buildings in this category. My Department does not hold information about buildings owned by other public bodies.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a breakdown of refurbishment costs for each public building in Edinburgh for each year since 1993. [34448]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 13 March 1998]: My Department does not hold such information about buildings other than those which it owns or occupies. I shall reply as soon as possible about buildings owned or occupied by my Department.

St. Andrew's House

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is (a) the total amount of office floor space currently unused in and (b) the forecast running costs for 1997–98 for (i) Old St. Andrew's House and (ii) New St. Andrew's House. [33898]

Mr. Dewar: In St. Andrew's House, 38,396 sq ft of office floor space is currently unused as staff have been decanted elsewhere to allow the building to be refurbished. The total forecast running costs for 1997–98 are £2,952,000. My Department is not responsible for New St. Andrew's House. I have asked the Chief Executive of the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate to write to the hon. Member with the information sought.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to allow the Forestry Commission to roll over its trading surplus from one financial year to the next. [33885]

Mr. Macdonald: We are considering this as part of the Forestry Commission's Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes to staff numbers there have been within the Forestry Commission since 1 May 1997. [33886]

Mr. Macdonald: The Forestry Commission employed 3,532 staff on 1 May 1997. It currently employs 3,471 staff. These figures include part-time employees.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce new measures to improve safety standards in houses in multiple occupation. [34018]

Mr. Macdonald: We are considering possible ways of introducing mandatory licensing of houses in multiple occupation, to provide greater protection for tenants.

Sports Funding

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the total grant in aid made available by the Scottish Sports Council to governing bodies of sport for each of the financial years 1992 to 1998; and what it is projected to be for the next three financial years; [34261]

(2) if he will list, by individual governing body, the grant in aid projected to be made available by the Scottish Sports Council to governing bodies of sport for the next three financial years; [34262]

(3) if he will list, by individual governing body, the grant in aid made available by the Scottish Sports Council to governing bodies of sport for each of the financial years 1992 to 1998. [34263]

Mr. Galbraith: The information is set out in the table. The projected total grant in aid, and the grant in aid to be made available to individual governing bodies of sport, for the next three financial years has not yet been agreed by the Scottish Sports Council.

Grants offered to Governing Bodies of Sport from 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993

Note:
Because of timing of applications some governing bodies have had two offers, covering two financial years, within one financial year of the Scottish Sports Council.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to attend a meeting of the Council of Ministers of the European Union in relation to fishing. [34279]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 13 March 1998]: My noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture, the Environment and Fisheries expects to attend the next meeting of the Fisheries Council on 24 March.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34830]

Mr. Dewar: The Scottish Seed Potato Development Council was formally wound up on 22 August 1997. I have established no new NDPBs since 1 May 1997.

Victoria Hospital, Kirkcaldy

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the present and proposed future numbers of obstetric beds at the Victoria Hospital, Kirkcaldy. [34365]

Mr. Galbraith: Currently 68 obstetric beds are provided at Forth Park Hospital, Kirkcaldy. Fife Health Board's draft Integrated Health Care Strategy, which has been issued for public consultation, includes a proposal to integrate obstetric, gynaecology and paediatrics on the Victoria Hospital site to improve the quality of clinical care. No final decision has been taken on the future acute service configuration and detailed bed numbers for obstetrics are not yet available.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) refurbishing and (b) adapting areas of the Victoria Hospital, Kirkcaldy, to accommodate the transfer of (i) paediatric services from the Queen Margaret Hospital and (ii) gynaecological services from Dunfermline; [34367]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 18 February 1998, Official Report, column 709, when the figures for the cost of transferring the maternity facilities to Victoria Hospital and adapting Victoria Hospital will be available. [34368]

Mr. Galbraith: Fife Health Board is currently publicly consulting on acute service configuration proposals in its draft Integrated Health Care Strategy. The Board has indicated that estimates of the costs of transferring services into Victoria Hospital can be undertaken only once acute service configuration and future bed numbers have been considered in more detail. It is likely that such detailed financial information will not be available until the end of 1998/99. The Board has no plans currently to transfer gynaecology services from the Queen Margaret Hospital, Dunfermline.

Nursing Homes

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will require health boards to publish their inspection reports on nursing homes. [34366]

Mr. Galbraith: There is no statutory or other restriction regarding the publication of nursing home inspection reports in Scotland. Health Boards or home owners themselves can make copies of reports or extracts available at their discretion.

Cairngorms Partnership

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) under what powers the Cairngorms Partnership is able to stipulate to local authorities which member of the authority is to be appointed to the Advisory Board of the Partnership; [34814]

(2) what discussions he has undertaken regarding the appointment of members to the Advisory Board of the Cairngorms Partnership. [34816]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend invited Mr. Gus Macdonald to chair the Cairngorms Partnership from 1 November 1997. Following consultation with my noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture, the Environment and Fisheries in Scotland Mr. Macdonald appointed an Advisory Board to assist him in taking forward implementation of the Partnership's Management Strategy. I understand that he has invited the Convenors of the relevant local authorities to serve on the Board, and I hope that the local authorities will respond positively to the invitation.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the remit and responsibilities of the Chairman of the Cairngorm Partnership. [34815]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend revised the remit of the Cairngorms Partnership following the appointment of Mr. Gus Macdonald as Chairman. I am arranging for a copy of the revised remit to be placed in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

School Sports

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what awards have been made (a) by the Sportsmatch Panel and (b) by the Sportsmatch Panel to schools-related projects since 1 May 1997. [34214]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The Sportsmatch Panel has made 329 awards worth a total of £2,096,445 since 1 May 1997, of which 206 awards worth a total of £1,379,676 have been to schools related projects. I have placed copies of the detailed list of the awards made by the Sportsmatch Awards Panel in the Library of the House.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he has taken to encourage business sponsorship in the field of youth and school sports. [34213]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Sportsmatch, the Government funded business incentive scheme for sport, offers pound for pound matching funding for sponsorships of grass roots sport. £1 million out of the annual Sportsmatch budget of £3.2 million is reserved for schools and schools related activities. I announced last year that the minimum award for schools has been reduced to £500 to increase the opportunities for securing private sector sponsorship. In addition, the English Sports Council's Lottery Sports Fund School Community Sports Initiative (SCSI) is designed to help schools and colleges find matching funding, including private sector investment, by providing up to 80% of the total project costs. To date, 181 education establishments have been awarded £84.2 million under the SCSI.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he has taken to ensure that sport governing bodies have plans to develop school sports projects as a condition for receiving Sports Council grants. [34215]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The development of sports opportunities for young people is one of the English Sports Council's key objectives.

The English Sports Council's National Junior Sport Programme provides the framework which currently guides national governing bodies of sport (among others) on their role of providing sporting opportunities for young people. When assessing the development plans of sports governing bodies, the ESC will give detailed consideration to whether a sport can attract young people and offer a sustainable junior development programme. Support offered by governing bodies to the education sector, through good quality links with schools, particularly between clubs, is critical to evaluating the quality and success of governing body youth development programmes.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he has taken to encourage the Sports Council to promote links between schools and sports clubs. [34216]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: I met the Council on 2 March. Among many other matters we discussed the National Junior Sport Programme. I met the team who develop the programme and gave them my personal backing. Under the Sportsmark scheme, schools must demonstrate effective links with clubs. The ESC's Challenge Funding scheme invites schools to apply for up to £1,000 to strengthen existing links and to encourage the development of new links. With the Department for Education and Employment we are working up proposals for community sports co-ordinators whose role would include building and supporting school/club links.

Commonwealth Games

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations he has received on plans to host the 2002 Commonwealth Games; and if he will make a statement. [34735]

Mr. Banks: The Department has received 14 representations regarding the 2002 Commonwealth Games in Manchester since May 1997.

The Government strongly support the organisation of the 2002 Games, and this Department is working closely with Manchester City Council to ensure the delivery of a successful event. Other Government Departments will become involved when necessary.

UK Sports Institute

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what contracts have (a) been signed and (b) put out to tender in relation to the establishment of the United Kingdom Sports Institute. [34218]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: None.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the United Kingdom Sports Institute will be opened; and which sports will be catered for. [34230]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Everyone is keen to see progress made and the UKSI in place in the shortest time possible. A date will be fixed in due course.

Athletics, road cycling, judo, swimming and triathlon have indicated that they may wish to have their national training facility at the HQ site. In addition, netball, squash and table tennis have indicated that they may wish to have their English training centres at the HQ site. Discussions are underway with all eight sports on this matter. However, all sports, including major spectator sports, will be able to tap into the support services throughout the UKSI network.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the sites that will form the regional network of the UK Sports Institute. [34223]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Information on the establishment of the regional network will be issued shortly. There will be facilities in at least eight locations in England, and others in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will estimate the proportion of the funding for the United Kingdom Sports Institute to be provided by the National Lottery. [34219]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: A detailed lottery application will have to be approved before such an estimate can be made. However the Home Country Sports Councils have indicated that some £160 million is to be made available of which £40 to £60 million is for the HQ site.

Sport Governing Bodies

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the total grant-in-aid made available by the United Kingdom Sports Council to governing bodies of sport for the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98; and what it is projected to be for the next three financial years. [34266]

Mr. Banks: The information requested is set out in the table. Projections have not yet been made for 1999–2000 and 2000–2001.

Year	£000
1996–97	[1]1,616
1997–98	[2]5,481
1998–99	[3]5,203

[1] The United Kingdom Sports Council became fully operational in 1 January 1997. The figure, therefore, covers the period 1 January 1997—31 March 1997.
[2] Forecast outturn.
[3] Budget figure.

Rugby League

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the 25th anniversary of the British Amateur Rugby League Association. [33916]

Mr. Banks: I congratulate the British Amateur Rugby League Association on the occasion of its Silver Jubilee, and commend its good work over the last 25 years in developing the game.

Listed Buildings

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many requests for listing public houses were (a) received and (b) approved in each of the past five years. [34362]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 13 March 1998]: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Number of applications	Number listed
1993	72	6
1994	72	25
1995	32	11
1996	64	7
Total	258	51

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with local authorities concerning possible changes to the criteria used for listing buildings. [34596]

Mr. Banks: I have had no such discussions. However, Warrington Borough Council has corresponded with my officials about the criteria for listing public houses.

Football

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he has taken to develop the Football in the Community Initiative. [34217]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Football in the Community is an excellent initiative. The Sportsmatch scheme, which is funded by my Department, has made 87 awards worth £801,448 to Football in the Community projects across the country, since its inception in November 1992.

Community Sports

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment the Sports Council has made of community sports facilities provision; and if he will make a statement. [34211]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The English Sports Council (ESC) is creating a Facilities Planning Model (FPM) which will enable it to undertake assessments of shortfalls in specific types of community sports facilities across England. A total of ten regional assessments—based upon the FPM and individual National Governing Body Strategies should be available in the autumn.

Drug Control (Sport)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he has taken to promote drug control programmes in sport. [34228]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: I am committed to eliminating drug abuse in sport and we have been among the world leaders in pushing for strong and effective anti-doping measures. The UK Sports Council (UKSC) is responsible for administering the doping control system for the UK and is the first organisation worldwide to have achieved ISO 9002 certification for the management of drug testing programmes in sport.

Sports Council Database

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if the updating of the Sports Council's National Sports Facilities Database is complete. [34212]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The English Sports Council (ESC) has collected extensive facilities data. This will form part of an integrated corporate database currently being developed by the ESC and which they advise me should be available later this year.

TREASURY

Excise Duty

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the level of excise duty expressed in £ sterling per litre on (a) whisky, (b) gin, (c) wine and (d) fortified wine in (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) each member state of the European Union in (1) 1992, (2) 1995 and (3) 1998. [34037]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The levels of excise duty are set out in the tables.

Taxation

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if proposed tax changes in the forthcoming Budget (a) have been or (b) will be disclosed to the EU Peer Review Group prior to 17 March. [34287]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 13 March 1998]: No.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlay his decision to allow the Inland Revenue to collect excess taxes for the current financial year. [34712]

Dawn Primarolo: I am not clear precisely what the hon. Member intends in his Question, and I am writing to him.

Government Debt

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the monthly average interest cost on total Government debt in (a) 1996 and (b) each month since May 1997. [34030]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 12 March 1998]: There are no monthly debt interest figures for the public sector as a whole. Most public sector debt interest payments are from central government. These monthly figures are published in Financial Statistics.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response she has given to DG21 with regard to the official complaint made against selective higher rate IPT in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [34182]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 March 1998]: There has been no such complaint from any Directorate General to the European Commission about the higher rate of insurance premium tax.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library correspondence with or from DGXXI regarding selective higher rate IPT; and if he will make a statement. [34519]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 March 1998]: There has been no such correspondence.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 5 March 1998, Official Report, columns 716–17, if he will place in the Library copies of the correspondence from DGIV referred to in the correspondence he has placed in the Library. [34518]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Subject to obtaining the appropriate permission from DGIV, copies of this correspondence will be placed in the Library.

Ovarian Cancer

Helen Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of all female deaths in the Warrington, North Constituency for each of the years 1992 to 1997 were as a result of ovarian cancer. [34597]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Helen Jones, dated 17 March 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question asking what percentage of all female deaths in the Warrington North Constituency for each of the years 1992 to 1997 were as a result of ovarian cancer.

Percentage of female deaths from ovarian cancer to women resident in the county district of Warrington[1] 1992–1996[2]

Year	Percentage
1992	1.6
1993	0.9
1994	1.3
1996	1.1

[1] ONS does not routinely publish data by parliamentary constituency, and could only do so at disproportionate cost.
[2] Data for 1997 are not yet available.

Deaths due to ovarian cancer were identified as those certified with an underlying cause of International Classification of Diseases Ninth Revision [ICD9] 183.0.

Deaths for 1992 represent the number of deaths registered in the year, while deaths from 1993 are deaths that occurred in each year. Also, new procedures for coding cause of death from 1993, and the absence of medical enquiries, mean that figures for 1993 onwards may not be exactly comparable with earlier years. However, for most conditions (including ovarian cancer) these effects are small. More details may be found in ONS Series DH2 no. 21 for 1993 (revised) and 1994, which was published in September 1996. Copies of this publication are available in the House of Commons library.

Small Firms

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response the Treasury has made to the Bank of England's January 1998 report on finance for small firms. [33404]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The Government welcome the Bank of England Report. We recognise that small and growing firms form the bedrock of a successful enterprise economy, creating wealth and employment and generating new ideas and products and are therefore committed to providing an environment in which they can flourish. To encourage more innovative and entrepreneurial activity in our economy we are also pursuing a number of direct policy measures to encourage investment into high-tech companies, including reviewing the Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme to improve access to finance for technology-based firms, reviewing the Venture Capital Trust and Enterprise Investment schemes to encourage equity investment by private individuals in high-growth firms, and reviewing Capital Gains Tax to consider ways of increasing the incentives for investment in entrepreneurial firms.

Official Accommodation

Mr. Forth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax liability arises when ministerial official accommodation is improved out of public funds. [32954]

Dawn Primarolo: It is accepted by the Inland Revenue that Government Ministers occupying official residences by reason of their office meet the statutory conditions (mainly in Section 145(4) of ICTA 1988) for exemption from a tax charge on provided living accommodation or on any structural alterations or additions made to it. Where improvements to the accommodation consist of repairs, decoration or furniture, tax is charged on a benefit limited by Section 163(2) of ICTA 1988 to 10 per cent. of the taxable Ministerial salary and any other benefits.

The same rules apply for Ministers of the Crown as for other office holders or employees.

Public Works Loan Board

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the quotas for lending to local authorities by the Public Works Loan Board. [35132]

Mr. Darling: The Public Works Loan Commissioners have issued a circular today notifying local authorities that there will be no change in the formula for calculating quotas for 1998–99.

Copies of the circular have been placed in the Library.

HEALTH

Guy's Hospital

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the documents considered in the re-evaluation of accident and emergency services at Guy's Hospital, as recommended in Health Services in London—A Strategic Review. [30392]

Mr. Milburn: In line with our policy on open government the relevant documentation will be available from the National Health Service Executive on request.

The NHS Executive is also preparing a paper which brings together the work on re-evaluation and contingency plans to ensure that St. Thomas's accident and emergency department can absorb the increased activity, and this should be available shortly.

Midwives

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by health authority area the number of midwives per 1,000 deliveries. [32828]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 4 March 1998]: The number of midwives per 1,000 maternities (used as a proxy for deliveries, and defined as pregnancies resulting in the birth of one or more live or stillborn children) for each health authority in England is shown in the table. The figures should be interpreted with caution as midwives work across health authority boundaries.

2. Maternities are attributed to the health authority covering the mothers usual area of residence.
3. Midwives are attributed to the health authority area within which the NHS trust that employs them falls.
4. The figures in the table should be interpreted with caution as it is possible for midwives to serve a population which is different from that of the health authority to which they are attributed.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those bids under the Investing in Dentistry initiative which were (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful; and if he will make a statement. [33260]

Mr. Milburn: Since the Investing in Dentistry initiative was announced in September last year, 81 funding requests had been approved and 84 refused. The table gives details of successful and unsuccessful requests made by health authorities, which are shown in alphabetical order. All the unsuccessful requests have been given feedback and health authorities have been invited to re-submit them if they can provide further information to satisfy the criteria of this initiative.

Fluoride

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of fluoride retention on human health; and what plans he has for an indemnity for water companies required to introduce fluoride into the water supply. [33033]

Mr. Milburn: Appropriate use of fluoride improves health by reducing dental caries, partly through the retention of fluoride in the teeth, without any known adverse effects on health. The Department is already able to offer indemnities to water companies against costs, damages or other expenses incurred by them as a result of fluoridating water supplies.

With the publication of the Public Health Green Paper "Our Healthier Nation" on 5 February 1998, we have set out the terms for a wide ranging debate on the options for improving dental health including the fluoridation of water.

Smoking

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the Government is taking to reduce the number of cigarette smokers; and if he will make a statement on his Department's targets in this area. [34330]

Ms Jowell: Our strategy to reduce smoking will be set out in the Tobacco Control White Paper to be published later this year.

On 4 December 1997 the European Union Health Council reached a common position on a European Union wide ban on tobacco advertising and promotion.

In 1997/98, the Government are funding a £1 million anti-smoking promotion campaign called "Respect", and the Health Education Authority's adult smoking education campaign costing £5.5 million. As part of the HEA campaign, £700,000 is being given to Quit to operate the Quitline—telephone helpline—which offers smoking cessation advice, counselling and support.

In addition, a wide range of health professionals, notably general practitioners, routinely offer cessation advice and support.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further measures he proposes to reduce smoking in public places. [34489]

Ms Jowell: We are considering what measures might be included in the Tobacco Control White Paper, to be published later this year, to reduce smoking in public places.

The White Paper will take into account the recently published conclusions of the Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health on the scientific evidence on the health effects of exposure to environmental tobacco smoke.

Workforce Planning

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1998, Official Report, column 112, in what ways workforce planning arrangements have been improved to ensure that the supply of doctors reflects demand. [34461]

Mr. Milburn: Recent steps to improve medical workforce planning include:

(i) the Specialty Workforce Advisory Group (SWAG), which advises on the numbers of doctors and dentists in training needed to meet future requirements for consultants, has recently extended its remit to cover general practice, enabling planning across the entire medical workforce; and

(ii) SWAG's planning processes now build in greater input and involvement from National Health Service management, timed to inform national workforce planning at a much earlier stage in the cycle than has been possible previously, encouraging a more effective dialogue with the NHS and thus a better blend of top-down and bottom-up planning.

We aim to improve NHS workforce planning by ensuring that workforce plans are considered alongside future plans for services. In particular, local NHS organisations are being encouraged to take an active role in workforce planning. Also, workforce planning should cover the whole NHS workforce.

Cardiac Rehabilitation Units

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list NHS cardiac rehabilitation units indicating which operate an upper age limit. [34321]

Mr. Milburn: A list of units is not held centrally but an audit of cardiac rehabilitation centres published in 1995 and funded by the National Health Service Executive showed that in 1993 there were 199 centres in England and Wales which offered a cardiac rehabilitation service.

The White Paper "The New NHS" makes it clear that fair access to health services, based on clinical need, irrespective of age, is one of our top priorities.

Evidence from recent studies shows that many heart patients can benefit from rehabilitation programmes whatever their age. Health authorities and NHS trusts have been advised to eliminate all discriminatory practices and to ensure that all patients who can benefit from such programmes are given the opportunity to do so.

We are determined to tackle any remaining problems of access.

Coronary Care Units

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list NHS coronary care units indicating which units operate an upper age limit. [34322]

Mr. Milburn: A list of coronary care units is not kept centrally. The Directory of Emergency and Special Care Units 1997, published by CMA Medical Data Ltd., Cambridge Research Laboratories, lists coronary care units in the United Kingdom. We are not aware of any units which operate an age limit for access to these services. However, we are aware that access to coronary services, including coronary care units, does vary. The White Paper "The New NHS" makes it clear that fair access to health services, based on clinical need, irrespective of age or any other factor, is one of our top priorities.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the Insight report into the resources and performance management of community health councils; and if he will make a statement. [34618]

Mr. Milburn: We announced last year that we had no intention of implementing the Insight Report's recommendations on Community Health Councils' (CHCs) functions and resourcing. Officials have continued to work with CHCs on developing suitable arrangements for ensuring their accountability.

Physiotherapy

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to deal with staff shortages among physiotherapists. [34542]

Mr. Milburn: We are ensuring that effective recruitment and retention policies are in place to make the best use of trained staff and that training levels are sufficient to get a better match between supply and demand.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the continuing need for physiotherapist services. [34541]

Mr. Milburn: It is currently the responsibility of local commissioners to assess the health care needs of their population, and to secure a range of hospital and community health services to meet those needs.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34828]

Mr. Milburn: We announced on 22 December 1997 our intention to legislate to establish a General Care Council which will replace the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work (an Executive non-departmental public body) as the body responsible for social services training.

Since 1 May 1997 the Department has established the Royal Commission on Long Term Care of the Elderly, which has planned annual running costs for 1998–99 of £673,000.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason he has asked officials to identify ways of overcoming the financial effects of the Value Added Tax Order which came into effect on 1 January. [34807]

Mr. Milburn: The Value Added Tax Order had financial implications for local health services. Officials were asked to investigate the size and scope and to determine ways of minimising these effects without compromising the tax avoidance measures introduced by the Order.

Ovarian Cancer

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has given to NHS trusts on the use of Taxol combination treatments in the treatment of ovarian cancer. [34599]

Mr. Boateng: Taxol is a drug licensed by the Medicines Control Agency for use in treating widespread cancer of the ovary or metastatic breast cancer where standard treatment regimes have failed. A clinical trial for first-line treatment of widespread breast cancer by Taxol in combination with other drugs is currently in progress. As with any other drug, it is a matter for individual clinicians, in discussion with their patients, to recommend a treatment regime which will be best for their patients. Guidance on clinical management of ovarian cancer was produced by the Standing Medical Advisory Committee and was published in November 1991.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women in the Warrington North constituency were diagnosed as having ovarian cancer in each of the years 1992 to 1997. [34600]

Mr. Boateng: Figures for Warrington North are not available separately. The latest available data for Warrington residents are set out in the tables, and relate to the five-year period 1990–1994:

Market Research

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what expenditure has been incurred by his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies (a) in 1996–97 and (b) since 1 May 1997 on (i) opinion polling, (ii) focus groups and (iii) other forms of market research; if he will list the surveys commissioned and the purpose of each; and if he will make a statement. [26599]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 5 February 1998]: A list of research projects carried out by the Department in the financial year 1996–97 and since 1 May 1997 has been placed in the Library. The cost of each individual survey is a matter of commercial confidentiality. The total expenditure for 1996–97 and the estimated costs of work commissioned since 1 May 1997 are:

£ million

	1996–97	Since 1 May 1997
Department
i) opinion polling	0.2	0.1
ii) focus groups	0.3	0.1
iii) other market research	0.2	0.1
Agencies
iii) other market research	0.1	0.1
Total
i) opinion polling	0.2	0.1
ii) focus groups	0.3	0.1
iii) other market research	0.3	0.2

The Department has a major survey programme amounting to £5 million which is "social research" not "market research" as ordinarily understood. The purpose of this research is to monitor change and inform policy development. As part of this programme the Department commissions questions to the Office for National Statistics (ONS) omnibus survey to look at behaviour and attitudes of the general population on specific topics. Although the majority of questions focus on behaviour some of these questions might be considered "opinion polling". For example, questions have been asked within the smoking module on views about tobacco advertising.

In 1996–97, questions on food safety, back pain, condoms, contraception, drinking, smoking, sun exposure, living wills, attitudes to mental illness and part time working patterns of children aged 10–16 were undertaken. The total cost was £350,000.

Since 1 May 1997, questions on contraception and condoms usage, sun exposure and smoking have been commissioned on the ONS omnibus. These costs totalled £220,000.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of community hospitals in the United Kingdom. [34437]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 13 March 1998]: This information is not collected centrally. However, the Community Hospitals Association estimates that there are currently 325 community hospitals in England. Community hospitals in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Bodies (Reports)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the bodies within the responsibility of her Department currently required by legislation to lay a report before Parliament. [33561]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 9 March 1998]: Reports of the following Northern Ireland bodies are required by legislation to be laid before Parliament:

The Commission for Racial Equality for Northern Ireland
The Equal Opportunities Commission for Northern Ireland
The Fair Employment Commission for Northern Ireland
The Probation Board for Northern Ireland
The Independent Assessor of Military Complaints Procedures in Northern Ireland
The Parades Commission for Northern Ireland
Her Majesty's Inspectors of Explosives for Northern Ireland
The Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights
The Police Authority for Northern Ireland
The Independent Commission for Police Complaints
The Parliamentary Ombudsman for Northern Ireland
The Northern Ireland Commissioner for Complaints.

Regional Selective Assistance

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list, for each offer of regional selective assistance made during 1997, the percentage of the project's capital cost represented by the grant offered; and if she will indicate, for each offer, if it related to an area of full or intermediate assisted area status. [33705]

Mr. Ingram: In the financial year 1996–97, 91 projects were offered Selective Financial Assistance by the Industrial Development Board (IDB) and 3,774 projects were offered Selective Financial Assistance by the Local Enterprise Development Unit (LEDU). A list detailing percentage contributions for IDB and LEDU offers will be placed in the Library. The list covers all offers made during 1996–97 and which are still "live"—i.e. have not been declined or withdrawn.

The NI Selective Financial Assistance corresponds broadly to Regional Selective Assistance in GB. It is available throughout NI. No technical distinction is made of full or intermediate assisted area status.

Industrial Investment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the (a) level of financial investment and (b) number of jobs created by (1) LEDU and (2) the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland within (i) North, (ii) South, (iii) East and (iv) West Belfast for the period 1987 to 1997. [34320]

Mr. Ingram: Available information is listed in the tables. Details on jobs created by LEDU are not available by Parliamentary Constituency.

Table B: "Financial Investment" by LEDU

£ million

Belfast constituency	Financial commitment (1 April 1988–1 December 1997)
North	18.9
South	17.7
East	11.8
West	12.4

Notes:
Above figures relate to direct assistance to companies. They include funding made available under the Making Belfast Work (MBW) Programme and the Special Support Programme for Peace and Reconciliation (SSPPR).
Information on investment prior to 1 April 1998 is not readily available in this format.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list (a) the level of financial investment and (b) the number of jobs created by LEDU within Northern Ireland for the years 1987 to 1997. [34324]

Mr. Ingram: The expenditure figures as outlined below represent LEDU expenditure on its main programmes of support as well as expenditure incurred through the Making Belfast Work and Making Londonderry Work schemes. This financial assistance is paid out both directly to clients and indirectly through third parties providing assistance to small businesses on LEDU's behalf.

£ million

Year	Expenditure
1987–88	18.0
1988–89	26.6
1989–90	28.6
1990–91	25.9
1991–92	26.2
1992–93	23.3
1993–94	22.7
1994–95	24.9
1996–97	23.7

Prior to 1990–91 the principle measure of LEDU performance was job promotions—jobs promised by client companies in return for financial assistance. The job promotion figures for 1987–88 to 1990–91 are as follows:

Year	Jobs promoted
1987–88	4,047
1988–89	4,395
1989–90	5,221
1990–91	5,501

Since 1991–92 actual net employment change within all LEDU client companies has become the principle measure of LEDU performance. Net employment change for the years 1991–92 to 1996–97 are as follows:

Year	Net employment change
1991–92	–650
1992–93	730
1993–94	1,630
1994–95	3,500
1995–96	3,060
1996–97	3,525

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Inspections

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to establish a common framework for inspection of educational institutions catering for the over 16s. [34601]

Dr. Howells: In our consultation paper on lifelong learning, "The Learning Age", we have stated our intention to work with inspectors and providers with a view to harmonising inspection arrangements across schools, further education colleges and LEAs, adult education and training providers.

Vocational Qualifications

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list incidents of fraud and payment errors in connection with the award of NVQs in each of the last three financial years. [34818]

Dr. Howells: The Department logs all reported incidents of alleged fraud on Training and Enterprise Council (TEC) delivered programmes funded by the Department. Since 30 August 1995, 105 cases have been recorded. Those involving invalid NVQs in the last three financial years are 1994–95 (Nil), 1995–96 (4) and 1996–97 (8).

It is not practical for the Department to log discrete NVQ payment errors by Training and Enterprise Councils.

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is taking to (a) evaluate and (b) reduce the scale of (i) financial and (ii) academic fraud concerning vocational qualifications. [34819]

Dr. Howells: The Department has established a financial scrutiny unit with the particular purpose of investigating allegations of fraud involving training providers contracted with TECs, including abuse of vocational qualifications. I have recently announced a strengthening of that unit. The Department has also established a 'fraud hotline' (0800 163 339) to enable suspicions of fraud to be promptly and directly reported to the Department. The maintenance of the standards of vocational qualifications is the prime responsibility of awarding bodies and the Department is currently providing £1.5 million to support additional external verification of NVQs by awarding bodies to help in assuring standards of assessment in TEC funded programmes. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) has established a compliance investigation section to investigate allegations of abuse of vocational qualifications accredited by it. The QCA's section works closely with the Department's financial scrutiny unit.

EU Equal Treatment Directive

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the nature of the advice given on behalf of the United Kingdom Government by Lindsey Nicholl of the Treasury Solicitor's Department, Eleanor Sharpston Barrister and Michael Beloff QC, to the Court of Justice of the European Communities when it was considering the Marschell v Land Nordrhein Westfalen case. [34886]

Mr. Alan Howarth: At the hearing of the European Court of Justice on 11 March 1997 in the case Helmut Marschell v Land Nordrhein Westfalen, Michael Beloff QC, representing the United Kingdom Government, made oral submissions to the Court.

These submissions drew attention to the fact that the ECJ had already had occasion, in the case of Kalanke v Freie Hansestadt Bremen, to examine the proper interpretation of Article 2(4) of the Equal Treatment Directive, and that in that case the ECJ had laid down four very important guidelines which, it was submitted, should be determinative of the result of the Marschall case.

Those guidelines were:

First, the ECJ upheld the importance of the principle of non discrimination.

Secondly, it confirmed that national laws like the law at issue in Kalanke involve direct discrimination on the grounds of sex.

Thirdly, it characterised Article 2(4) of the Equal Treatment Directive as a derogation from the core principle of equal treatment, and hence as a provision to be interpreted narrowly.

Fourthly, it identified equality of opportunity, and not equality of result, as the means chosen by the Directive of achieving equal representation.

National Curriculum Tests

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to introduce more rigorous procedures for National Curriculum tests at Key Stage 1. [34879]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are introducing some additional procedures for the National Curriculum tests at Key Stage 1 in 1998. These include reducing the scope for potential malpractice by delivering tests later to schools, asking headteachers to sign a declaration that tests have been administered correctly, and external checks to be conducted during the assessment period. We are also continuing to support schools' administration and marking of the Key Stage 1 tests by funding supply cover, and through the audit of assessment standards in over a quarter of schools. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority will continue to monitor test standards for consistency with the demands of the National Curriculum and comparability with previous years.

Education Action Zones

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will list applications to run education action zones received from (a) local education authorities and (b) other organisations; [34954]

(2) if he will list the private sector organisations which have applied to run education action zones; [34955]

(3) if he will list applications to run education action zones where the proposed zone crosses local education authority boundaries. [34956]

Mr. Byers: The deadline for applications is this Friday, 20 March.

Class Sizes

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will publish figures for the average class size, for each school, in the national performance tables for primary schools; [34817]

(2) if he will publish figures for the average class size in the national performance tables for primary schools. [34883]

Mr. Byers: Primary school performance tables are published by individual local education authorities. We have no present plans to require the publication of information on class sizes in the tables, but if LEAs wish to publish such information and have the necessary data from schools they are free to do so. We ask all primary schools to consider providing parents with information on class sizes in their school prospectus.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34833]

Dr. Howells: Since 1 May 1997 the Department has abolished two bodies and transferred their functions to a new body:

(a) Abolished	Date of closure
School Curriculum and Assessment Authority (SCAA)	30 September 1997
National Council for Vocational Qualifications (NCVQ)	30 September 1997

(b) Established	(c) Planned annual running costs 1997–98 estimate	1998–99 planned
Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) 1 October 1997	10.5 for 6 months	19.5
Disability Rights Task Force	—	—
New Deal Task Force	—	—
Skills Task Force	—	—

[1] Advisory NDPBs, travel and subsistence costs.

School Expenditure

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the minimum per capita spent from local authority revenue budgets on education in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools necessary for satisfactory delivery of the national curriculum and achievement of the Government's educational attainment targets. [34602]

Mr. Byers: Education Standard Spending for LEAs in England will be £19.4 billion in 1998–99, an increase of £1 billion over the equivalent figure for 1997–98. The priority given to school spending within our plans for 1998–99 reflects the importance of delivering our targets for educational attainment. The total is allocated to Local Education Authorities in Standard Spending Assessments, using a formula which takes account of pupil numbers, deprivation and population sparsity. It is for Local Education Authorities to reach final decisions on how to use the resources available to them. We do not seek to set a minimum level of expenditure, but we have made it clear that we expect the substantial additional provision for 1998–99 to go specifically to raising standards in schools.

New Deal (Deaf People)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements are in place for communication support for young deaf users of British Sign Language entering the New Deal gateway with particular reference to the early stages. [30680]

Mr. Andrew Smith: There is explicit guidance for dealing with those clients who are deaf or hard of hearing. Employment Service staff are trained to recognise hearing impairment and to lip read. They are asked not to make assumptions about an individual's ability to communicate or the ways in which they do so. They are advised to ask the client to tell them what means of communication they favour and to accede to any requests for sign language to be used. Jobcentres have access to sign language interpreters, often Employment Service staff in the offices. In addition, light writers, typetalk and hearing loops are available and are used if the client requests them.

If there is a barrier, the Employment Service will first identify it and then take appropriate action to overcome it. Once in a job help for clients under the Access to Work initiative is available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she has taken or plans to take to ensure the millennium compliance of the computer systems involved in providing an uninterrupted supply of electricity and gas; if she has agreed or arranged for contingency plans; and if she will make a statement. [33315]

Mrs. Roche: DTI officials have discussed this issue with the electricity and gas industries and their trade associations. Both industries are aware of the potential difficulties arising from the millennium date change and companies have carried out, or are carrying out, full assessments of the potential impact of their computer and control systems. These assessments are continuing. Reports thus far suggest that the risk to the continuity of the electricity supplies is minimal.

Transco, operator of the major part of Great Britain's gas transportation system, is conducting a thorough action plan to ensure that any risk to its ability to operate safely its gas supply network is managed. Each component of the "gas chain" is responsible for its own programme but Transco is playing a pivotal role in encouragement of best practice in the rest of the industry. It is offering support to its partners in the gas chain and other utilities in meeting their own responsibilities through sharing of best practice. Along with DTI, the Office of Gas Supply is actively monitoring the work being carried out by the industry on this.

Notwithstanding the current risk assessments, individual companies will wish to review existing contingency plans with emergency authorities as appropriate to deal with any supply problems arising from the millennium date change.

This is a complex area of work and the providers of utility service are dependent one upon the other to ensure that continued operation occurs without difficulty.

Post Office

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she will announce the results of her current review of the Post Office. [34813]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have been reviewing carefully the views advanced by interested parties during the consultations following my announcement last year of a review of options for granting the Post Office greater commercial freedom. These will inform our decisions on the next phase of the work, about which I will make an announcement as soon as we are in a position to proceed.

Agenda 2000

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she has taken to ensure that the West Midlands continues to benefit from Structural Funds after the introduction of Agenda 2000. [34296]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The Commission expects to publish on 18 March its detailed draft regulations covering the operations of the Funds for the period 2000–2006. These draft regulations will then need to be negotiated in the Council of Ministers and approved by the European Parliament.

In the meantime, Ministers have been in regular contact with the European Commission and other Member States, with an aim of securing a package which is fair to all Member States especially to the United Kingdom and regions and which is affordable and durable, simpler and more efficient. In these discussions, we have suggested that GDP per capita should be a factor taken into account in the allocation of the Funds.

Yemen and Oman

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff there are on her Department's (a) Yemen desk and (b) Oman desk. [34551]

Mrs. Roche: Both desks have a full-time Country Officer who has administrative support and reports to a Senior Country Manager and Section Head. Both desks also have Export Promoters on loan to the DTI from private industry.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to promote trade and investment in Oman. [34552]

Mrs. Roche: The DTI Oman Desk is involved in a wide range of promotional activities. In 1998, the DTI will support six outward trade missions to Oman, two exhibitions in Oman, six "Gulf Spotlights" in the UK, three inward visits by senior Omanis, the Oman British Friendship Association and Committee for Middle East Trade Round Table and the CBI "Invest in Oman" Conference in London. The Chairman of the British Overseas Trade Board visited Oman last month. In addition, my noble Friend the Minister for Trade met his Excellency Maqbool Sultan (the Oman Minister for Commerce and Industry) and also his Excellency the Ambassador on an earlier occasion.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the number of British firms which have offices in Oman. [34550]

Mrs. Roche: There are approximately 70 British firms with offices in Oman.

Adoption Leave

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on Government policy towards national guidelines on adoption leave for parents adopting a child. [34759]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government are committed to implementing the EC Parental Leave Directive, which will provide both parents with the basic entitlement to three months unpaid leave following the birth or adoption of a child. The Directive contains a number of flexibilities, including the requirement to consider whether entitlement to parental leave needs to be adapted to meet the circumstances of adoption. We shall want to give full consideration to these matters and consult on options for implementation. We are required to implement the Directive by December 1999.

Cosmetic Surgery

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will regulate the prices charged for cosmetic surgery procedures; and if she will make a statement. [33922]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My right hon. Friend and I have no plans to regulate the prices charged for cosmetic surgery procedures, but we are aware of concerns about the quality of such surgery.

Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost of overtime worked by private office staff of the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs since 1 May 1997. [32689]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 3 March 1998]: Overtime for the period 1 May 1997 to 31 January 1998 amounted to some £21,600 gross.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Experience

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the fluoro-carbon gases, as regulated under the Kyoto Protocol on Climate Change, that will be utilised in the air conditioning equipment for the Millennium Experience; and if he will make a statement. [28140]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) announced on 13 March the outcome of their competitive tendering process for the supply of chiller units which will provide chilled water for air cooling of the Dome's various exhibits, restaurants and hospitality suites. The refrigerant used in these units is R134a, a hydrofluorocarbon (HFC) which is used as environmentally preferable alternative to CFCs and HCFCs. The NMEC will operate and maintain the units to the highest possible standard, and aim to keep emissions of HFCs below 1%—a target which will be monitored by regular independent audits of refrigerant usage. A robust plan for the safe handling and recovery of the refrigerant when the units are disposed of will be put into place. These arrangements meet in full the terms of the 1996 Declaration of Intent agreed between the then Government and Refrigeration Industry which recognises the essential role of HFCs as a replacement for CFCs and HCFCs.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how the temperature of the Millennium Dome will be controlled. [31193]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company will be able to maintain a constant temperature throughout the Dome through an effective ventilation and air-conditioning system.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Conferences

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of his officials attended conferences (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) overseas; and how many and what percentage made (i) oral and

(ii) written contributions to the matters under discussion in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [31179]

Dr. David Clark: For the purposes of this answer, my Department is defined as the Office of Public Service (OPS) and the Executive Agencies for which I am responsible. Records are not kept in this form, but so far as I can establish, the number of officials who attended conferences in the United Kingdom in the period 1 January to 31 December 1997 was 216 and the number attending conferences overseas was 33. Of these, 109 made oral contributions and 38 made written contributions to the matters under discussion.

In addition, figures for the Central Office of Information, which is a separate Department, also reporting to me, are as follows: 32 officials attended conferences in the United Kingdom and one attended overseas. Of these, 7 made oral contributions and 1 made a written contribution.

Civil Servants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will estimate the number and percentage of civil servants in his Department, at each grade including and above higher executive officer who (a) attended university and (b) attended either Oxford or Cambridge University; [33059]

(2) if he will estimate the number of civil servants in his Department, at each grade, who received their schooling in the independent school sector; [33060]

(3) if he will estimate for each of the last five years, the number and percentage of new civil servants in his Department who attended Oxford or Cambridge University, broken down into the number of entrants joining the Department from (a) the regular Civil Service entrance procedure, (b) the fast stream and (c) the private sector. [33061]

Mr. Kilfoyle (holding answer 9 March 1998): Although the precise information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, I can assure my hon. Friend that all career civil servants who join my Department, which for this purpose includes the Cabinet Office, the Office of Public Service and its executive agencies and the Central Office of Information, (which is not an agency of the Cabinet Office but which reports directly to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster) are recruited by an appropriate Civil Service entrance procedure, using fair and open competition and recruitment on merit. Numbers joining my Department from the fast stream are approximately five in each of the last five years. Of those, approximately 50 per cent. spent part of their education at either Oxford or Cambridge Universities. Relatively few new entrants to the department are school leavers and many therefore have experience of the private sector.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the numbers of civil servants based in each economic planning region in (i) 1995, (ii) 1996 and (iii) 1997; and if he will express the numbers as a proportion of the resident population in each region in each of those years. [34502]

Dr. David Clark: In common with most regional official statistics, since April 1997 regional statistics about the Civil Service have been compiled on the basis of Government Office Regions. The full-time equivalent numbers of permanent civil servants in each Government Office Region at 1 April 1995, 1996 and 1997 and those numbers expressed as proportions of the resident population in each region and year are shown in the following table:

Government Office Region	Civil Servants (1 April 1995)		Civil Servants (1 April 1996)		Civil Servants (1 April 1997)

Magistrates (Lancashire)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of having shared responsibility with the Secretary of State for the Home Department for the appointment of magistrates in the County Palatine. [34747]

Dr. David Clark: I do not share responsibility for the appointment of magistrates in the County Palatine with the Secretary of State for the Home Department. I appoint magistrates in Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside while the Lord Chancellor appoints magistrates in the remainder of England and Wales. The Lord Chancellor and I have a network of Advisory Committees who are responsible for recruiting and interviewing candidates and recommending suitable people for appointment as magistrates. These committees work to a set of similar directions.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34822]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The non-departmental public bodies for both the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and the Prime Minister are listed under my Department in the booklet "Public Bodies" published by The Stationery Office. For purposes of this question I am answering on behalf of my Department and the Prime Minister.

Since 1 May 1997 we have abolished two non-departmental public bodies: the Citizens Charter Panel of Advisers; and the De-regulation Task Force. We have established two non-departmental public bodies: The Better Regulation Task Force; and on behalf of The Prime Minister, The Security Vetting Appeals Panel.

The planned annual running costs of the Better Regulation Task Force are £8,500.

The costs of the Security Vetting Appeals Panel are minimal. Costs are met from within existing divisional resources, they do not have a separate budget and it is not anticipated that this is likely to change at least in the short term.

Archway Tower

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will call for a report from the Property Services Agency on its contact with Islington Borough Council concerning future use of Archway Tower and relevant local development plans; and if he will make a statement. [34313]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 16 March 1998]: As my hon. Friend is aware, Property Advisers to the Civil Estate (PACE) is responsible for the disposal of the vacant Government offices it inherited on 1 April 1996, including Archway Tower. The Chief Executive of PACE, Mr. John Locke, reports to me regularly on the agency's performance. Therefore, I have asked Mr. Locke to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John C. Locke to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated March 1998:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service to reply to your Parliamentary Question about Archway Tower.

Since 1998 there have been major policy changes affecting Civil and Defence accommodation. Departments have been fully untied from the former PSA which was privatised in 1993.

PACE has responsibility for vacant office buildings which have been declared surplus by other Government Departments. Archway Tower is such a building. PACE is charged with disposing of it at best value for the Exchequer.

PACE has no intention of seeking to change current planning permission to use Archway Tower for office use. Furthermore the property is currently held under the terms of a lease which restricts occupations to office use. Mr. Colgan has made you aware that if the London Borough of Islington was to consider redevelopment of the area responsibility for implementation and funding would lie with them. PACE has a contractual commitment to the existing building and use.

The lease on Archway Tower runs until 24 December 2009 and the current annual rent payable is £884,000. Further rent is payable for 49 adjoining car parking spaces. The outgoings for the property in the current year are estimated at approximately £1.1 million including rent. The best value solution for dealing with the building is to effect necessary repairs and refurbishment and bring it back into use as offices. A detailed scheme, which does not require planning permission as it is essentially repair, has been worked up and necessary contracts are about to be let. An occupier has been secured for part of the building and the remainder of the space will be marketed widely as soon as it is again in occupiable condition. In this way PACE intends to defray the cost of holding Archway Tower and bring about an improvement in the appearance and management of the building.

I understand that you are in close contact with Mr. Colgan, Director of PACE, London and South East Region, and that he has outlined these proposals in more detail to you and representatives of Islington Borough Council at a recent meeting. Should the Borough Council have any proposals for the property which are achievable in view of the existing leasehold constraints and offer better value for money than naturally PACE would be pleased to consider them.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Air Quality

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his assessment of the improvement in air quality in relation to (a) benzene, (b) oxides of sulphur, (c) lead, (d) PM_{10}, (e) volatile organic compounds, (f) oxides of nitrogen and (g) ozone which will be achieved by the specifications for fuel quality and emissions (i) contained in the common position agreed by the Council of Ministers on the proposed Auto-Oil Directive and (ii) proposed by the European Parliament to the proposed Auto-Oil Directive. [33933]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 12 March 1998]: Explanatory Memoranda 9856/96, 8827/97 and 8939/97 explain that the standards agreed in the common positions on the Auto-Oil fuels and cars directives will deliver very significant reductions in road transport emissions. They will make an important contribution to improving air quality and to achieving and maintaining our National Air Quality Strategy objectives, especially in urban areas. The European Parliament's proposals for more stringent standards would make a further contribution to improving air quality, not least by facilitating the uptake of cleaner vehicle technologies. The extent of the further reductions has not yet been evaluated.

The table gives a snapshot of the estimated emission reductions in the UK which would result from the Auto-Oil fuels and cars common positions. The benefits will continue to grow beyond 2010 as cars achieving these emissions standards represent a greater proportion of the vehicle fleet. These reductions are in addition to those which are already forecast as a result of existing emissions standards and other measures, which are shown as a "base case" figure. They take into account expected traffic growth, as predicted in the 1997 National Road Traffic Forecasts.

Freehold Purchase

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many cases of freehold purchase are being currently pursued under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 in the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals and in the Lands Tribunal. [34740]

Ms Armstrong: As at 30 November 1997 there were 858 outstanding cases at leasehold valuation tribunals relating to the purchase of freeholds of leasehold houses and flats. This total includes 39 cases where the original landlord had failed to comply with the right of first refusal provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 and the tenants were acquiring the freehold from the subsequent purchaser.

As at 16 March 1998 there were 48 outstanding appeals against decisions of leasehold valuation tribunals at the Lands Tribunal. Information as to the subject matter of these appeals is not available.

Local Government Pensions

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many of those in the local government pension scheme retired before 5 April 1978 by local authority; how many contributed to provision for a widow's pension; and how many of these widow's pensions are being taken. [35062]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested is not held centrally. Individual pension fund authorities may be able to provide it.

Core Policy and Administration Group

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are (a) the number of staff employed in (b) the salary bill for and (c) the administration costs of his Core Policy and Administration Group. [34779]

Angela Eagle: At 1 January 1998, the number of staff in the Headquarters element of my Department is £3,586 and the 1997–98 forecast outturn for the salary and other running costs is £211,644,000.

Common Land

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the total area of common land in England; and what is the total area of common land over which the public has rights of access by (a) statute and (b) individual access agreements. [34605]

Angela Eagle: The total area of common land in England is approximately 370,000 hectares. Members of the public have statutory access rights to about 20 per cent. of this land. We do not have details of the area of common land subject to individual access agreements.

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the total area of each national park and within those national parks the total area of (a) common land and (b) common land covered by agri-environmental schemes. [34606]

Angela Eagle: The total area of each National Park, the total area of common land and the total area of common land covered by agri-environmental schemes in each Park is set out in the table.

Square kilometres

National Park	Total area	Total area of common land	Total area of common land covered by agri-environmental schemes
Exmoor	693	46.3	46.1
Dartmoor	953	349.7	349.7
Lake District	2,292	620	618
North York Moors	1,436	233.8	222.1
Peak District	1,438	15.3	13.2
Yorkshire Dales	1,769	468.1	102.2

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Works of Art

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will estimate the total value of works of art held by the Government. [34516]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 13 March 1998]: No complete valuation exists of works of art held by the Government. Monetary values for works of art are generally assessed for the purposes of purchase, sale or insurance. This does not apply to the Government, because, in general, works of art held by the Government are neither traded nor insured.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent by the Government since 1 May 1997 on acquiring works of art; and how much has been realised from the sale of works of art. [34468]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 13 March 1998]: Since 1 May 1997 the Government Art Collection has spent £98,041 on purchases of works of art. No works of art have been sold from the Government Art Collection. The Foreign Office has spent approximately £20,000 on purchases.

We have not been notified of any other purchases or sales by other Government departments.

Government Funding

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations he has received from organisations concerned with (a) sport, (b) tourism, (c) the arts, (d) museums and galleries, (e) libraries, (f) royal palaces and parks, (g) the built heritage and (h) film requesting increases in Government funding. [34731]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 16 March 1998]: I am in regular contact with, and receive a great many representations from, all parts of my Department's sectors. A number of them touch on the issue of funding.

National Lottery

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list those Government initiatives which (a) have been and (b) have been proposed to be funded by the National Lottery. [34962]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 17 March 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport gave on 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 23. My hon. Friend made clear that Lottery money will not fund Government spending programmes. The initiatives to be funded under the new good cause proposed in the National Lottery Bill will be determined by Order subject to the affirmative resolution procedure in both Houses of Parliament. Subject to the approval of Parliament, the first three initiatives will support healthy living centres; out of school hours activities, including childcare; and the provision of information and communications technology training for serving teachers and librarians. These initiatives were widely welcomed and supported in the responses to the White Paper, "The People's Lottery" (CM3709).

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34827]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 17 March 1998]: The information is as follows:

a. NDPBs abolished since 1 May 1997

Treasure Trove Reviewing Committee[1]

b. NDPBs established since 1 May 1997

Treasure Valuation Committee[1]

Annual running costs—1997–98 £1,049; 1998–99 £4,550

Football Taskforce[2] £100,000—This is the total amount that has been allocated to the Taskforce. It is not possible to split the total between running costs and non-running costs ie research.

[1] The Treasure Trove Reviewing Committee was reconstituted as the Treasure Valuation Committee in September 1997 as a result of the Treasure Act 1996.

[2] The Football Taskforce has been set up with a specific remit with funds provided by the Department (£50,000) and the English Sports Council (£50,000).

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Council

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future of the British Council. [34619]

Mr. Fatchett: As the United Kingdom's principal agency for cultural relations overseas, the British Council will continue to contribute to the achievement of the Government's foreign policy objectives including the enhancement of the United Kingdom's influence and prestige overseas, the spread of good government and the promotion of exports in the cultural and education and training fields.

European Communities

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the extent to which article K7, if incorporated into United Kingdom law, would be binding on future parliaments. [34795]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The European Communities (Amendment) Bill will not incorporate Article K7 into UK law.

There is no question of Article K7 binding future Parliaments.

Tibet

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has sought and obtained from the Chinese Government about the fate of the Panchen Lama. [35044]

Mr. Fatchett: Concerns for the whereabouts and welfare of Gedhun Choekyi Nyima, the Dalai Lama's choice of Panchen Lama, have been raised at successive rounds of EU/China human rights talks, and by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary when he visited China in January. The Chinese Government have replied that the child is living with his family and going to school.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Lord Chancellor's Residence

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 22, if he will list those societies and groups which have made written requests to visit the Lord Chancellor's official residence; if he proposes to accommodate these requests; what his policy is in respect of future requests; and if he will make a statement. [35031]

Mr. Hoon: Since 6 March, the number of requests to visit the Residence has grown. By 13 March 1998, 58 letters have been received. The Groups and Societies which have made written requests to visit the Residence are as follows:

Barbican Tuesday Club

Clapham Common Architectural Society

Evesham Art Society

Faculty of Pharmaceutical Medicine of the Royal Colleges of Physicians of the United Kingdom

Friends of Dulwich Picture Gallery

Friends of the Whitworth Gallery, Manchester

Hadlow Women's Institute

Heart of England Heritage

Kensington and Chelsea National Trust Association

London Appreciation Society

National Trust for Scotland

Sheffield 41 Club

South West London Decorative and Fine Arts Society

Staines Ladies

University of the Third Age in Cambridge

Unnamed art group

Unnamed group of senior citizens

Unnamed theatre group.

All letters requesting visits to the Residence are acknowledged, and when the final arrangements for opening the Residence are made, information on these arrangements will be sent to all who write on the subject to the Lord Chancellor or his officials. They will then be able to arrange visits to the Residence.

Legal Aid

Mr. Willis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the amount of legal aid recovered as a percentage of the amount paid out during each of the last three years where (a) non-franchised firms of solicitors were acting for the assisted persons and (b) franchised firms of solicitors were acting for the assisted persons. [34135]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Legal Aid Board records show only those solicitors' offices which hold a franchise and do not specify whether the franchise was in force when the work carried out on a closed case was undertaken. To answer the question would require the checking of individual case payment records across England and Wales.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the amount of legal aid recovered by the Legal Aid Board from successful injury claimants during each of the last three full years. [34134]

Mr. Hoon: The amount of legal aid recovered by the Legal Aid Board from successful personal injury claimants, in respect of cases closed during each of the last three full financial years for which records are available, was as follows:

Year	£ million
1995–96	184.36
1996–97	212.36

Mr. Willis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total amount of legal aid paid to assisted persons for personal injury work during each of the last three full years for which records are available. [34132]

Mr. Hoon: The total gross amount of legal aid paid to lawyers representing assisted persons in personal injury work (including medical negligence), in respect of cases closed during the last three full financial years for which information is available, was as follows:

Year	£ million (gross)
1994–95	190.08
1995–96	239.57
1996–97	274.18

HEALTH

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what management resources he is planning to make available to the development of the primary care trusts; and what estimate he has made of the costs of management that will be needed to (a) develop and (b) service these at each stage. [34231]

Mr. Milburn: Primary care trusts will be funded from within the overall health authority/primary care group management cost envelope. Where a primary care trust merges with a community National Health Service trust the management cost envelope will be further adjusted.

Physiotherapy

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state (a) the turnover among physiotherapists in the National Health Service and (b) the vacancy rates for such physiotherapists. [34545]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not collected centrally. For the information that is available on turnover and vacancies for physiotherapists in the National Health Service I refer the hon. Member to the reports of the Review Body for Nursing staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicines, copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the present waiting lists for those waiting for treatment within the NHS from physiotherapists. [34544]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available centrally.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what means his Department is monitoring the millennium compliance of the computer systems involved in the provision of care services by health authorities and trusts; and if he will make a statement on progress. [34806]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive, through its regional offices, is closely monitoring the progress of health authorities and trusts on their millennium compliance work. An executive letter, EL(97)59 issued in October 1997 to all chief executives, set deadlines for completing stages of the compliance work against which performance is monitored.

Year 2000 projects are now fully underway in all NHS organisations and it is anticipated that all will complete detailed project plans, inventories of systems and resource plans by the second deadline of 31 March 1998.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he (a) has held and (b) plans to hold with the private health sector on the need for computer systems to be millennium compliant. [34805]

Mr. Milburn: Discussions on the millennium issue have been ongoing since November 1997 with one of the largest companies in the private health sector. It is hoped that these discussions will be broadened to include all major health sector companies in the near future.

It is our policy to collaborate fully on the millennium problem with all organisations, both in the private and public sectors, where interests overlap and mutual benefit can be obtained.

Juveniles (Secure Accommodation)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 March 1998, Official Report, column 203, where the six new places in local authority secure accommodation planned for since 1 May 1997 will be provided; and how many places have been planned for since 1 May which will become available after the end of 1998. [34867]

Mr. Boateng: The six places comprise 2 at Dyson Hall (Liverpool) and 4 at Thornbury House (Oxfordshire).

We have instituted a review of the whole range of secure accommodation for young people held on remand, including the local authority secure estate. The review is examining how to make better use of the existing and planned accommodation to ensure that provision is more consistent and coherent, and that regimes tackle criminality and meet the educational and other needs of these young people. We will be considering the outcome of the review, which is due to report shortly, when planning the implementation of these proposals. The review will help inform whether there should be a further expansion of the secure estate.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the current criteria for admittance to a local authority secure unit; and what plans he has to change these. [34802]

Mr. Boateng: I have been asked to reply. Local authority secure accommodation is provided for young people generally between the ages of 10 and 18 who are likely to cause serious injury to themselves or others if placed in other forms of accommodation. Section 25 of The Children Act 1989 sets out the criteria which must be met before a child being looked after by a local authority can be placed, and if placed, kept in secure accommodation. We have no plans at present to change these criteria. Additionally, children sentenced under Section 53 of The Children and Young Persons Act 1933 may be kept in secure accommodation where my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary considers that to be the most appropriate placement.

Factor VIII

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what time scale he has given for health authorities to provide all under 16 year olds and new patients requiring the synthetic version of blood product Factor VIII with this treatment; and what advice he has given to those authorities which previously restricted its availability because of budgetary constraints. [34957]

Mr. Boateng: Health Service Circular HSC 033 requests chief executives of health authorities and trusts to take the necessary steps to ensure that new patients and patients under the age of 16 have access to recombinant Factor VIII as soon as supplies allow after 1 April this year, if their clinicians recommend this treatment.

The circular acknowledges that many health authorities have previously decided not to fund this treatment on the basis of the clinical evidence of effectiveness and safety relative to cost. It makes clear that extra funding will be provided in 1998–99 to cover new patients and children under 16 who were not already receiving recombinant Factor VIII prior to 26 February, and who were not covered by current contracting arrangements.

Copies of the circular are available in the Library.

Leagues of Hospital Friends

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total capital expenditure by leagues of hospital friends on capital projects for the National Health Service in financial years (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997; and for each year what was the value added tax paid for those projects by (i) the NHS Executive, (ii) NHS Trusts and (iii) the leagues of friends. [34838]

Mr. Milburn: Information about donations to the National Health Service is recorded in NHS trusts annual accounts. The amounts donated by the leagues of hospital friends is not, however, separately disclosed.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Development Assistance

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department will spend on bilateral development assistance programmes through UK NGOs for development and relief activities in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [34972]

Clare Short: Information on spending through UK NGOs for development and relief activities funded by the Department for International Development's (DFID) bilateral development assistance programmes is not held centrally in the format requested. A full answer to the question could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Emergency Assistance

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department expects to spend on bilateral emergency assistance in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 and in respect of how many countries this expenditure will be incurred. [34976]

Clare Short: In 1997–98 we estimate that expenditure on bilateral emergency aid will be around £65 million. Over 60 countries have received assistance. Provision for 1998–99 is currently being considered within the Department's resource allocation round.

Details of bilateral emergency aid are published each year in the British Aid Statistics. The next issue, which will include final expenditure figures for 1997–98, is due for publication in December 1998. Copies will be made available to the Libraries of both Houses.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department expects to spend in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 through NGOs to alleviate suffering in respect of disaster, refugee and emergency situations. [34971]

Clare Short: In 1997–98 we estimate that expenditure on bilateral emergency aid will be around £65 million. Although we are unable to say currently how much of that will be spent through particular channels, over the previous three years around a fifth of bilateral emergency aid has been channelled through NGOs. Provision for 1998–99 is currently being considered within the Department's resource allocation round.

Volunteer Sending Agencies

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what sums her Department will provide in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 to volunteer sending agencies; how many will receive funding in each year; and in how many countries. [34973]

Clare Short: Final figures for 1997/98 are not yet available.

My Department estimates that £23.844 million will be provided to the 4 main UK volunteer sending agencies [Voluntary Services Overseas (VSO), International Corporation for Development (ICD) and United Nations Association for International Service (UNAIS) and Skillshare Africa] in 1997/98. This will help fund the work of approximately 2,080 volunteers in around 60 countries.

Future years allocations are being considered within the Department's Resource allocation round.

Kosovo

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the UN concerning assistance to the people of Kosovo. [34858]

Clare Short: To date, I have not held any discussion with the UN on this issue.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she will next meet her EU counterparts to discuss assistance for Kosovo; and if she will publish the agenda of the meeting. [34852]

Clare Short: I shall next be meeting EU counterparts at the Development Council in Brussels on 18 May. At present, assistance to Kosovo is not on the agenda.

The European Community Humanitarian Office (ECHO) are continuing to monitor the situation in Kosovo and have already decided on a small increase to Kosovo under their global plan for 1998 agreed on 5 March.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department has taken to assess the aid needs of Kosovo. [34854]

Clare Short: Officials of my department are meeting representatives of NGOs active in Kosovo on 19 March to receive an update of their recent activities and to exchange assessments of the current situation and needs.

Our current assessment is that although the situation is extremely serious, it does not constitute an humanitarian crisis.

We will continue to monitor the situation carefully.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she plans to meet officials from the OSCE to discuss the assistance needs of Kosovo. [34853]

Clare Short: At present, I have no plans to meet Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) officials.

Wildlife Conservation

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department expects to spend in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 on projects relating to the conservation and management of wildlife; and in respect of how many countries this expenditure will be incurred. [34975]

Clare Short: Information can be provided in terms of our expected expenditure in 1997–98 for biodiversity as a total, but no separate figures are available for conservation and management of wildlife. I regret that figures are also not available on the number of countries in which this expenditure will be incurred.

Uganda

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to support multi-party democracy in Uganda. [34893]

Clare Short: My Department is continuing to work closely with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to ensure that the Government of Uganda are aware of the importance Her Majesty's Government place on multipartyists being given an adequate opportunity to present their case in the run up to the 2000 Referendum.

In Uganda itself we are funding a £250,000 civic and votes education project to improve Ugandans' awareness of their democratic rights and responsibilities, and to strengthen the capacity of the Ugandan Electoral Commission.

Joint Funding Schemes

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much she estimates her Department will spend in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 on joint funding schemes; how many development projects will be financed through these schemes; and how many United Kingdom NGOs will be involved. [34974]

Clare Short: My Department estimates that £36.156 million will be spent on development projects through the Joint Funding Scheme in 1997–98. This will involve approximately 1,780 projects managed by around 128 UK NGOs.

Future years allocations are being considered within the Department's Resource allocation round.

Macedonia

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the future of the United Kingdom's aid programme to Macedonia. [34856]

Clare Short: The United Kingdom has spent almost £4 million in Macedonia since 1993–94 when assistance was first provided through the Know How Fund. We expect to spend around £600,000 in 1997–98 and will expand the programme significantly in 1998–99.

Following discussions with other donors and local partners we will focus on the priority sectors of Small and Medium Enterprise Development, Good Government (initially focusing on media and police training) and the Financial Sector.

The main project planned for the next two to three financial years will be to develop three regional small and medium enterprise development centres in Western and Southern Macedonia; two of the three are planned for the ethnic majority Albanian towns of Tetevo and Gostivar.

Albania

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the United Kingdom's aid programme for Albania. [34855]

Clare Short: The United Kingdom's bilateral developmental assistance to Albania has totalled over £5,700,000 since 1992/93. This sum includes bilateral emergency aid, but most of this funding has been disbursed through the Know How Fund in the form of technical assistance.

In 1996/97 the Know How Fund spent some £937,000 in assistance to support Rural Development, Good Government/Public Administration and the Health and Financial Sectors.

The disturbances in the first half of 1997 disrupted Know How Fund activity severely and the programme effectively restarted only in the autumn of last year. We expect to have spent around £400,000 in 1997/98.

More funds will be made available in 1998/99 with the focus continuing to be Health, Rural Development, Good Government and the Financial sector (with a particular emphasis on strengthening regulatory frameworks).

Economic and political transformation in Albania will take some time. We aim to support the reformist Government of Prime Minister Fatos Nano, as well as private organisations and NGOs, with carefully targeted support in key areas which will benefit the widest range of individuals and groups.

Over £292,000 of bilateral emergency aid to Albania in 1997/98 was in support of organisations providing relief following civil unrest. This was primarily disbursed through the International Committee of the Red Cross and non-governmental organisations.

We also remain in close contact with other multilateral donors to which we contribute, such as the World Bank and the European Union Phare programme, to influence, monitor and co-ordinate activities. Through our membership of the EU we contribute approximately 15 per cent. of the Phare programme in Albania.

SCOTLAND

Student Grants

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Scottish students at Scottish universities did not receive payment of grants awarded to them by the SAAS within (a) one week, (b) two weeks, (c) four weeks and (d) eight weeks of their course commencing; and for each figure, what percentage of Scottish students at Scottish universities this represents. [26055]

Mr. Wilson: The table shows, in relation to Scottish students[1], the numbers of applications not processed[2] within the time parameters specified and the percentages of students this represents. It is important to recognise that these figures take no account of when individual applications were actually received by the Agency. The figures therefore do not indicate how long the Agency took to process applications, nor do they provide an accurate measure of the number and proportion of applications which were not processed within the Agency's target time.

Weeks after the start of courses	Number of applications from Scottish students not processed	Percentage of Scottish students
2	22,810	31.6
4	17,637	24.5
8	8,545	11.9

[1] For the purposes of this answer, Scottish students are defined as Scottish domiciled students in receipt of an award at a Scottish university.

[2] The information relates to the date of processing, rather than date of receipt of the payment, because the former is known while the latter can vary. (Students who did not receive their payments at the start of the academic year would receive their payment 3 to 4 days after processing).

Land Information Register (Highland)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with Highland Council regarding their cost estimates for the establishment of a land information register in their region; and if he will make a statement. [34123]

Mr. McLeish: The Government have had no specific discussions with Highland Council regarding the establishment of a land information register in its region, though we are aware of this initiative.

The Land Register of Scotland operated by the Registers of Scotland Executive Agency is a modern map-based register of title, which gives details of ownership of properties which have been sold after individual counties become operational in the Register. It will be extended to all the counties of Scotland by 2003. In those areas for which Highland Council is the responsible authority, there already exists substantial ownership and other information available to the public in the Register of Sasines which is the national register of deeds and has recorded property transactions in Scotland since 1617.

Pre-school Year Children

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what forecast his Department has made of the number of pre-school children in each of the next five years. [34019]

Mr. Wilson: Estimated numbers of pre-school year children in each of the next five years are given in the table. These estimates are based on the Registrar General's latest (1996) mid-year population estimates and the 1996-based projected number of births produced by the Government Actuary's Department. These have been adjusted to show ages as at 28 February. No account has been taken of future deaths or migration, or of children whose entry into the pre-school session or primary one may be deferred.

Pre-school session	Number of pre-school year children[1]
1998–1999	61,371
1999–2000	59,303
2000–2001	59,559
2001–2002	58,283
2002–2003	58,107

[1] The figures for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 are based on the 1996 mid-year population estimates adjusted to show ages as at 28 February 1996. Figures for the remaining years are based on the 1996-based projected number of births and adjusted to 28 February. These adjustments are calculated by subtracting one third of the mid-year population at a specific age and adding in its place one third of the mid-year population one year older.

Primary Schools

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent per pupil at primary schools in Scotland in real terms in (a) 1979, (b) 1989 and (c) the most recent year for which figures are available. [34020]

Mr. Wilson: The information is given in the table. 1995–96 is the latest financial year for which information is currently available. The figures, which are derived from local authority financial returns, do not include the cost of home to school transport, school meals, education authority central administration costs and loan charges.

Year	£ Amount
1979–80	1,203
1989–90	1,780
1995–96	1,866

Note:
Expenditure per primary school pupil, adjusted to 1995–96 prices using the GDP deflator

Drug-related Crime

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what studies his Department has commissioned to ascertain what amount of crime is drug-related in Scotland. [34017]

Mr. McLeish: The Scottish Office commissioned research on "Heroin Use and Crime" by the Addictions Research Group of the University of Strathclyde, which was published in 1990. We are currently funding a collaborative study, which is being carried out at Ruchill Hospital, to assess whether methadone prescribing in Glasgow is associated with changes in drug injecting, crime, health and social functioning. The relationship between crime and substance misuse remains a priority area for future research.

Electoral Arrangements

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those wards proposed under the Third Statutory Review of Electoral Arrangements which include electors in more than one parliamentary constituency; and if he will make a statement on the need for special arrangements to be adopted by returning officers to deal with elections at the same polling station on the same day. [34234]

Mr. McLeish: The third Statutory Review of Electoral Arrangements is not yet complete. The information requested is not held centrally; however, inquiries are currently being made to see if this information can be obtained for those reports already submitted and I will write to my hon. Friend. Where local government and Parliamentary elections are held on the same day, returning officers will need to ensure that sufficient equipment and staff are provided for polling stations within the polling places designated by local authorities. Returning officers are entitled to recover any such costs under Section 15(4) of the Representation of the People Act 1985.

Police Expenditure

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent on (i) capital projects, (ii) training, and (iii) pension provision (a) by each police force and (b) in total, in each of the last three years; and what is the amount allocated for each of the forthcoming years for which plans have been made. [34704]

Mr. McLeish: The information on capital and pensions expenditure for the last three years is set out in the tables. Expenditure figures for training by forces are not held centrally.

The Secretary of State does not allocate expenditure for training or pension provision. Within the budget set by each police authority, expenditure on training will be decided by the chief constable and pension provision will be dependent on the number of police officers who retire each year.

Sex Discrimination

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the external legal advice, based on two opinions by Patrick Elias QC, on the subject of the Jepson case and proposals to amend sex discrimination legislation; [34878]

(2) what external legal advice he has sought from persons with relevant expertise in Scotland on sex discrimination in relation to the Scotland Bill; and if he will list the persons consulted and make a statement on the advice received. [34880]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 17 March 1998]: The Government do not ordinarily disclose the terms of legal advice and do not consider that it is appropriate to disclose any specific legal advice received in relation to the matters referred to in the question.

Boundary Commissioners

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the members of the Boundary Commission for Scotland. [35530]

Mr. Dewar: I have reappointed Dr. Charles M. Glennie CBE and Professor Urlan A. Wannop to the Boundary Commission for Scotland from 1 January 1998 to 31 December 1998.

The other members of the Commission are:

Madam Speaker—ex officio, Chairman;

The Hon. Lady Cosgrove, appointed as Deputy Chairman by the Lord President of the Court of Session from 1 January 1997 to 31 December 1999.

Agricultural Science Agency

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the revised Framework Document for the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency will be published. [35531]

Mr. Macdonald: The revised Framework Document has been published today and a copy has been placed in the Library.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Buildings Refurbishment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 to date and (d) 1997–98 full year; and if he will make a statement. [26686]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The estimates detailed in the following table are for DfEE HO buildings only.

Year	£
(a) 1995–96	4,271,081
(b) 1996–97	4,195,382
(c) 1997–98 to date	2,255,263
(d) 1997–98 full year	2,507,281

All of the refurbishment work was part of the Department's long-term plan to ensure the operational efficiency of the offices concerned.

Empty Properties

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the (a) annual cost and (b) total value of the empty properties owned by (i) his Department, (ii) his agencies and (iii) other public bodies for which he has responsibility, in (A) 1995–96, (B) 1996–97, (C) 1997–98 to date and (D) 1997–98 full year. [26684]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 5 February 1998]: The following is a breakdown of costs and values:

Financial year	Property owner	(a) Costs	(b) Values
1995–96	DfEE HO	2,834,468	7,935,850

New Deal

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide a breakdown of patterns of expenditure in 1998–99 on (a) young and (b) long-term unemployed participants in the New Deal by travel to work area or other suitable locality. [29689]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have placed in the Library a list of the client volume planning assumptions for each New Deal unit of delivery which the Employment Service is using to plan provision for young unemployed people aged 18–24. However, actual take-up of each element of the New Deal for 18–24 year olds will be determined by the needs of individual clients, and it is not therefore possible to predict what the precise pattern of expenditure will be. Similarly, actual take-up of particular elements of provision will determine expenditure within the New Deal for long-term unemployed people aged 25 or over.

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much of the windfall tax proceeds devoted to the New Deal will be used (a) to employ staff in the Employment Service, (b) to purchase computers or furniture for the Employment Service, (c) for advertising; (d) for employment of staff or purchase of furniture or equipment by TECs, (e) for pay in respect of New Deal participants and (f) for employment subsidies. [32789]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The windfall tax proceeds devoted to the New Deal programmes for unemployed people aged 18–24 and for long-term unemployed people aged 25 or over will provide help in making the move from benefit into work for the whole of this Parliament. Each programme will offer help to everyone who becomes eligible. Everyone who joins the New Deal for 18–24 year olds will receive help tailored to individual circumstances. Accordingly, total expenditure in each year will be determined by the number of people who actually join the programme and the precise pattern of help they require, and cannot be predicted in advance.

A large part of the New Deal for 18–24 year olds will be delivered through partnership arrangements rather than by Employment Service (ES) staff. These arrangements are currently being finalised before the programme's national launch in April, and it is therefore not yet possible to determine the overall impact on ES staffing.

Changes to the ES infrastructure in terms of accommodation, furniture and IT equipment will also depend on local delivery arrangements and their impact in each Jobcentre. Expenditure on each of these items will be known only when these plans are finalised and linked to the numbers of young people actually joining the programme.

The New Deal programmes have a total marketing budget for the life of this Parliament of up to £24 million.

As far as advertising is concerned the current programme of marketing to employers is aimed at raising interest to provide unsubsidised vacancies in the Gateway and subsidised places for the Employment Option. There will also need to be further advertising to launch the New Deal for those above 25 years of age as well as continuing to maintain employer involvement after the initial phase of interest. The amount of future advertising—over the life of the Parliament—will need to be assessed once we have established how much additional marketing is required to encourage further employer participation or to communicate other key New Deal messages. The TECs in many of the Delivery Units are working alongside the ES as key strategic partners. Where they take responsibility for managing some elements of the programme (such as one or more of the options) then they may need to employ staff and may even require some infrastructure investment. However, while the delivery arrangements are still being negotiated it is not possible to anticipate this impact.

The fact that the New Deal programme is demand led and largely determined by client choices means that there is no fixed split between expenditure on employment subsidies and New Deal participants. This flexibility which New Deal clients will have is a very important feature of the programme and it means that expenditure on particular elements is difficult to forecast at the outset.

Part-time Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of extending student loans to part-time students in (a) further and (b) higher education; [32822]

(2) what plans he has for further assistance for students in part-time education. [32823]

Dr. Howells: We agree with the Dearing Committee's recommendation that extending loans to part-time students in higher education should not be a priority. The Department estimates that the costs of extending loans to part-time students in higher education would be of the order of £350 million per year in the short term, depending on take-up. No estimates have been made of the costs of extending student loans to part-time students in further education.

We do recognise the needs of part-time students and have taken positive steps to ensure that they are not financially disadvantaged. Students in higher education who are unfortunate enough to lose their jobs, through no fault of their own, will be able to have their fees remitted. Eligibility for Access Funds will be extended to part-time students in higher education from 1998–99. In addition, the Department for Education and Employment and the Department of Social Security are reviewing, as the Dearing Committee recommended, the interaction between benefit entitlement and part-time study.

Physical Education

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations he has received from Her Majesty's Chief Inspector on the state of physical education and sport in schools; and when he expects next to receive a report on this matter. [34737]

Ms Estelle Morris: Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools reports annually to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on the standards and quality of physical education and other subjects taught in schools. His Annual Report for 1996–97, published on 3 February, also reported on extra-curricular sporting activities.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations he has received from teacher training institutions on the state of physical education and sport within the Initial Teacher Training Scheme. [34739]

Ms Estelle Morris: None.

School Sports

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken to encourage schools to extend sporting opportunities outside school hours. [34220]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The Department works closely with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and with other agencies to provide a range of sporting opportunities within and beyond the school curriculum. The Government are also keen to encourage out of school hours clubs in schools and in other community premises, including sports clubs. We will shortly publish a national framework for out of school hours learning, which will acknowledge the valuable work already done to motivate young people and help them become more active learners, and suggest ways in which this can be developed. The New Opportunities Fund will administer £200 million of Lottery funding for out of school hours learning, including sporting activities.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken since 1 May 1997 to encourage greater co-operation between schools and local communities in sports matters. [34207]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Co-operation between schools and their communities is always important, and particularly so where such co-operation leads to the more effective use of resources and the development of school-community links. The Government will shortly publish a national framework for out of school hours learning, which will acknowledge the valuable work already done by schools and youth and community workers, as well as others, to motivate young people and help them become more active learners through a variety of different activities, including sport.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Schools

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Ministerial visits to schools have taken place since 1 May indicating the number to (a) controlled schools, (b) integrated schools, (c) Catholic maintained schools and (d) voluntary grammar schools. [34416]

Mr. Worthington: There have been 13 Ministerial visits to schools since 1 May:

(a) controlled schools—8 visits

(b) integrated schools—2 visits

(c) Catholic maintained schools—2 visits

(d) voluntary grammar schools—1 visit.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the amounts paid for the years 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 to the Council for

Catholic Maintained Schools under paragraphs (a) 11, (b) 13, (c) 14 and (d) 15 of Schedule 8 of the Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989. [34415]

Mr. Worthington: The information is as follows:

Paragraph 15 capital	54,391	114,959	147,927

No grants are paid under paragraph 14.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the cost of financing tuition fees for the fourth year of study for Northern Ireland domiciled students studying at Scottish universities; and if she will make a statement. [34125]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 12 March 1998]: The estimated cost is about £550,000.

Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list for each police division in Northern Ireland the number of (i) full-time and (ii) part-time RUCR officers. [34004]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 12 March 1998]: The numbers of Full-Time and Part-Time Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve Officers in each Division as at 10 March 1998 are shown in the table:

DEFENCE

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many meetings have been requested with his Department's Ministers by (a) Labour and (b) Conservative hon. Members; and how many meetings have been granted in each category. [31293]

Mr. Spellar: It is not our normal practice to refuse requests for meetings with hon. Members although on occasions it has been suggested that a meeting would be either untimely or unnecessary, or should be held with a Minister other than the Minister to whom the request had been made.

In addition to regular meetings with Ministerial colleagues our Departmental records show that Ministers have had meetings with the following numbers of hon. Members from the Labour and Conservative parties.

Labour hon. Members 29

Conservative hon. Members 5.

Employee Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost of employee travel on office business, broken down into (a) fuel allowances, (b) unproductive time during travel, (c) other costs related to car transport and (d) costs related to public transport, for (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96, (iii) 1996–97 and (iv) 1997–98. [32443]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 3 March 1998]: The information is not held in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The only figures readily available relate to Motor Mileage Allowances paid to MOD Civilians using their private cars for official business during the financial year 1996–97. These amounted to £8.76 million.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the recent discussions on the millennium compliance of computer systems at the US Department of Defense at which his Department was represented; which other countries were invited or were represented; and what the outcome was. [33380]

Mr. Spellar: The US Department of Defense hosted a meeting in Washington on 18 February 1998 to discuss the impact of the Year 2000 problem on interchange of Defence-related electronic information between Allied Nations and on equipment that is in common service with a number of Nations. In addition to the US and UK, Canada and Australia were also represented. It was agreed that a senior level steering group would be set up to review progress on ensuring that interconnections between Allied Nations were Year 2000 compliant, to ensure that Year 2000 modifications made to an equipment by a Nation were notified to other Nations using the same equipment and to consider the inclusion of "Year 2000 tests" within multinational military exercises.

Gulf Presence

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimate of the cost of maintaining the British military presence in the Gulf. [34464]

Mr. George Robertson: The costs incurred to the end of February amounted to some £3 million. The current estimate of the total additional cost for the preparation, deployment and recovery of forces is £12 million, and an additional £0.5 million per month to maintain the forces while in theatre.

Loan Service Officers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many loan service officers are currently stationed in (a) Qatar, (b) Oman, (c) Bahrain, (d) Kuwait and (e) the United Arab Emirates. [34711]

Dr. Reid: As at 12 March 1998, the total number of UK loan service personnel stationed in the countries listed was:

Country	Total
Qatar	0
Oman	102
Bahrain	1
Kuwait	58
UAE	11

Berlin Airlift

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the Berlin Airlift. [34762]

Dr. Reid: I am glad to say that the courage of those who took part in the Berlin Airlift, and the success of the operation to sustain the people of Berlin and their freedom, will be celebrated by a series of events in Berlin over the summer.

RAF bands will play at the traditional wreath laying ceremony and at various concerts. The Queen's Colour Squadron and aircraft from squadrons associated with the airlift will participate in events and ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of the start of the airlift. The Battle of Britain Memorial Flight Dakota will fly in the colours of a squadron that flew in the airlift.

Aer Lingus Viscount Crash, 1968

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the new evidence he has received concerning the involvement of a second aircraft in the crash of an Aer Lingus Viscount in the Irish Sea on 24 March 1968. [34809]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 17 March 1998]: I have received no new evidence about the involvement of a second aircraft in the crash of the Aer Lingus Viscount in the Irish Sea on 24 March 1968.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received, and discussions he has had, concerning the Aer Lingus Viscount crash in the Irish Sea on 24 March 1968; and if he will undertake to discuss the matter with his counterparts in the Irish Government. [34812]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 17 March 1998]: The Ministry of Defence has received a number of questions from the media and a letter from the Celtic League on this subject. I have not received representations from the Irish Government, but would be happy to respond if there were to be any.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the exercises in the Irish Sea on the day of the Aer Lingus Viscount crash in March 1968; if RAF or other aircraft participating in those exercises are recorded as having been lost; and if United Kingdom naval vessels picked up any person, dead or alive, from the Irish Sea on the day of the crash. [34881]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 17 March 1998]: There is no indication of any UK military exercise in the Irish Sea on the day of the crash. No person, dead or alive, was picked up by British naval vessels in the Irish Sea on that day.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Self-Injury)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recorded incidents of self-injury there were in each (a) public and (b) private prison in (i) 1995, (ii) 1996 and (iii) 1997. [32102]

Ms Quin [holding answer 2 March 1998]: The numbers of incidents of self harm reported by Prison Service establishments in the relevant years are set out in the table. There are a number of factors that are responsible for the uneven pattern of the figures in the table, across establishments and time.

Local prisons, owing to their role as reception and allocation centres, tend, in general, to have to deal with more difficult prisoners, including those likely to self harm. Also a single prisoner can generate a large number of self harm incidents in any one year. The table shows that the rise in the number of incidents from 1994–95 to 1995–96 had been partly reversed in the following year.

Children's Hearings

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Children's Panel and Children's Hearings system in Scotland; and what assessment he has made of the advantages of introducing elements of this system in England and Wales. [33596]

Mr. Michael: Research commissioned by the Scottish Office regarding the effectiveness of the Scottish Children's Hearing system is expected to be completed later this year. This research includes a study into decision making in the children's hearing system and a three year longitudinal study examining outcomes for a cohort of children referred to Reporters in 1995.

In developing proposals for reform of the Youth Court in England and Wales, which are set out in the White Paper "No More Excuses: a new approach to tackling youth crime in England and Wales" (Cmnd 3809), we considered the available information about the youth justice systems in other jurisdictions, including the civil Children's Hearing system in Scotland and family group conferencing approaches in New Zealand. The proposals for reforming the Youth Court, which are set out in chapter 9 of the White Paper, aim to reflect best practice from these different approaches in a way which is consistent with the youth court arrangements in England and Wales. In particular, our longer term proposals for a youth panel which would be responsible for agreeing a "contract", which would be overseen by the Youth Court, with certain young offenders (those appearing before the Youth Court for the first time and who plead guilty) provide an opportunity for a restorative approach to be introduced. These contracts would ensure that the young person made amends to the victim or the community at large and would tackle the causes of the offending behaviour. Experience in Scotland, in New Zealand and elsewhere has informed our consideration of how best to deal with young offenders in England and Wales and the development of the proposals set out in "No More Excuses" and in the Crime and Disorder Bill.

Driving (Drugs)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legislation covers those driving while under the influence of drugs. [34413]

Mr. Michael: Section 4 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 makes it an offence to drive or attempt to drive a mechanically propelled vehicle on a road or other public place when unfit to drive through drink or drugs. It also makes it an offence to be in charge of a mechanically propelled vehicle in the same circumstances. A constable may arrest a person without warrant if he has reasonable cause to suspect that an offence has been committed. Section 7 of the Act empowers a constable to require a suspect to provide a specimen of blood or urine for a laboratory test where he is advised by a medical practitioner that the condition of the person might be due to some drug.

The Act defines a person as being unfit to drive:
"if his ability to drive properly is for the time being impaired".

It defines drugs as:
"any intoxicant other than alcohol" and can therefore include drugs of all kinds.

The Road Traffic Act 1991 added the offence of causing death by careless driving when driving a mechanically propelled vehicle under the influence of drink or drugs. The same definition of being unfit to drive applies.

The available penalties for the offences are set out in the table.

Drugs driving offences: Maximum penalties

Offence (with provision)	How prosecuted	Maximum punishment	Disqualification	Endorsement
Causing death by careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs (section 3A RTA 1988 as added by RTA 1991)	Indictment	10 years imprisonment or level 5 fine (£5,000), or both	Obligatory	Obligatory 3–11 penalty points
Driving or attempting to drive when under the influence of drink or drugs (section 4(1) RTA 1988)	Summarily	6 months imprisonment or level 5 fine (£5,000), or both	Obligatory	Obligatory 3–11 penalty points
Being in charge of a mechanically propelled vehicle when unfit to drive through drink or drugs (section 4(2) RTA 1988)	Summarily	3 months imprisonment or level 4 fine (£2,500), or both	Discretionary	Obligatory 10 penalty points
Failing to supply specimen for laboratory test (section 7 RTA 1988)	Summarily	(a) Where specimen required to ascertain ability to drive—6 months or level 5 fine (£5,000) or both (b) in any other case, 3 months or level 4 fine (£2,500) or both	(a) Obligatory (b) In any other case, discretionary	Obligatory (a) 3–11 penalty points (b) 3–11 penalty points

Prison Service (Pensions)

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the pension provision made for staff by private sectors prison contractors relative to arrangements in the public sector; what is his policy of pension provision to private sector contractors; and if he will make a statement. [34682]

Ms Quin: Pension arrangements for staff employed at privately managed prisons are a matter for the contractors, although Her Majesty's Prison Service, when considering bids for the management of prisons, requires details of bidders' personnel policies so that it can assess whether these might in any way affect the prison's operation.

My right hon. Friend asked the Prison Service on 19 June 1997 to consider plans for establishing a case for returning contractually managed prisons to the public sector. As part of that work, all aspects of the remuneration of Prison Service staff have been studied in relation to their private sector counterparts. That work is still in progress and its findings are due to be reported shortly.

Police Expenditure

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money was spent on (i) capital projects, (ii) training and (iii) pension provision, (a) by each police force and (b) in total, in each of the last three years; and what is the amount allocated for each of the forthcoming years for which plans have been made. [34684]

Mr. Michael: The information requested in respect of actual expenditure in years 1994/95 to 1996/97, and estimated expenditure in 1997/98, is set out in the table. This is taken from police authority returns to the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA). Detailed estimates for 1998/99 will not be published by CIPFA until later in the year.

Obstructions (Prosecutions)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought and convictions secured for placing goods for sale, advertising boards and other obstructions on the pavement in each year since 1992. [34756]

Mr. Michael: The data held centrally on the Court Proceedings database do not separately identify such offences.

Fire Service

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reached a decision on the application under section 19 of the Fire Services Act 1947 of the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority to reduce its firefighting resources. [35341]

Mr. George Howarth: I have today advised the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority that my right hon. Friend has agreed to its application to close the Barbican and Shooters Hill fire stations, to change the arrangements for the provision of fire cover on the River Thames and to a consequent reduction in the establishment of London Fire Brigade of 80 firefighting posts.

The statutory responsibility for the provision of an efficient fire service rests with the local fire authority. In considering applications by fire authorities for reductions in firefighting resources, my right hon. Friend has to be satisfied that there has been adequate consultation and that, following any reductions, national standards of fire cover can continue to be maintained. In fulfilling this function, my right hon. Friend relies on advice from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Fire Services.

Both my right hon. Friend and I are satisfied that the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority has consulted widely over its proposals. There has also been opportunity over some months for representations to be made direct to the Home Office and a considerable number, including representations from right hon. and hon. Members. have been received. These have all been thoroughly considered, particularly those relating to the proposed closure of the fire stations at the Barbican and Shooters Hill. We have taken into account the points raised by hon. Members in the debate on the Adjournment of the House on 9 March 1998, Official Report, columns 291–9. We have sought the professional advice of Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Fire Services, and specifically of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector.

The advice that we have received from Her Majesty's Chief Inspector is unequivocal that, following the proposed reductions, the London Fire Brigade would still be able to meet fully the agreed national standards of fire cover in the areas immediately affected by the changes and elsewhere in the capital. The Chief Inspector has, in particular, confirmed that the Authority's proposal to cover the fireground currently served by Shooters Hill from the fire stations at East Greenwich, Plumstead, Woolwich, Eltham, Lee Green and Bexley is wholly consistent with the continued maintenance of the national standards, as is the proposal to cover the Barbican fireground from the fire stations at Dowgate, Clerkenwell and Shoreditch.

Taking full account of this advice, and after the most careful consideration, my right hon. Friend has therefore decided to approve the Authority's application. The implementation of these proposed changes is now a matter for the Authority.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many parliamentary questions she has answered since 1 May 1997 (a) in total and (b) which have taken more than four weeks to respond to. [34839]

Mr. Denham: As of 16 March 1998 we have answered 2,229 Parliamentary Questions of which 64 have taken more than four weeks to respond to.

Notes:

1. The figures do not include recesses.

2. Figures were taken from the Department's Parliamentary Questions database and may be subject to some degree of error.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which organisation is carrying out research for her Department on the non take-up by pensioners of their entitlement to income support; at what cost and over what timescale; and if she will place a copy of the organisation's proposed research methodology in the Library. [34691]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Research has been commissioned comprising in-depth interviews with pensioners currently claiming and not claiming, but potentially eligible for, Income Support (IS). Pensioners will be selected to cover key demographic characteristics. The interviews will explore the reasons for not claiming Income Support, and the views of claimants and non-claimants to give an insight into what encourages, as well as discourages, claims for IS.

This is being followed by a quantitative survey of eligible non-claimant pensioners to identify the relative importance of the various factors deterring potential claimants; and to assess whether different factors are important for different sub-groups; and whether different groups of pensioner non-claimants are experiencing different levels of hardship.

Finally, the project will also include focus groups with advice agencies.

Contracts worth a total of £282,000 have been awarded to Social and Community Planning Research and the Office for National Statistics.

The project was begun at the end of last year and will take a year to complete.

An estimated one million pensioners are not taking up their entitlement to IS and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently announced details of a number of pilot schemes to be run from April this year to find the best way to provide more automatic help to the poorest pensioners.

The pilots will start next month and run for six months in Glasgow, York, Preston, Stroud, Lambeth, East Renfrewshire, Torbay, Torfaen and South Staffordshire local authorities.

The pilots will have two main objectives. They will test the best ways of finding potential IS claimants by matching records held centrally and locally. The pilots will then test the best ways of reaching potential claimants by visiting them at home, ringing them or writing to them.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what (a) percentage and (b) number of single pensioners have a total income of at least £100 per week from (i) all sources, (ii) sources not including the state pension and (iii) sources not including any state benefits. [33524]

Mr. Denham: The information is set out in the table.

Single pensioner with weekly income of at least £100 in 1995–96

Definition of income	Number	Percentage
Gross Income from all sources	3,050,000	70
Gross Income excluding State pensions	1,050,000	25
Gross Income excluding State benefits	700,000	16

Notes:
1. The information is based on gross unequivalised weekly income before housing costs and benefit income at July 1995 prices. Reported incomes from the State pension and all benefits were subtracted from gross income to give the income distribution shown. The results are based on survey respondents' identification of different elements of benefit income, and therefore are subject to misreporting.
2. The Pensioners' Income Series gives estimates for pensioner units. A pensioner unit is defined as a single person over State Pension Age (SPA) or a couple where the man, defined as the head, is over SPA.
3. Numbers of pensioner units are rounded to the nearest 50,000, percentages to the nearest 1 per cent.
4. The Pensioners' Incomes Series 1995–96 is to be revised, owing to a number of inaccuracies. The revised version of the publication will be issued as soon as possible. The figures above are not affected by these problems.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what (a) percentage and (b) number of pensioner couples have a total income of at least (i) £200 per week, (ii) £160 per week and (iii) £140 per week from (1) all sources, (2) sources not including the state pension and (3) sources not including any state benefits. [33525]

Mr. Denham: The information is set out in the table.

Weekly income of pensioner couples (£) in 1995–96

Definition of income		At least £200	At least £160	At least £140
Gross income from all sources	Number	1,450,000	1,950,000	2,300,000
	Percentage	53	73	86
Gross income excluding State pensions	Number	800,000	950,000	1,100,000
	Percentage	29	36	42
Gross income excluding State benefits	Number	700,000	850,000	950,000
	Percentage	25	32	36

Notes:
1. The information is based on gross unequivalised weekly income before housing costs at July 1995 prices. Reported incomes from the State pension and all benefits were subtracted to give the income distribution shown. The results are based on survey respondents' identification of different elements of benefit income, and therefore are subject to misreporting.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will estimate how many couples aged over 60 years would become eligible for income support if the applicable amount, including the pensioner premium was (a) £200, (b) £160 and (c) £140 assuming (i) no change in capital limits and (ii) an upper capital limit of £16,000 and lower capital of £10,000; [33520]

(2) if she will estimate the cost of increasing the applicable amount, including the pensioner premium, for income support for couples aged over 60 years to (a) £200, (b) £160 and (c) £140 assuming (i) no change in capital limits and (ii) an upper capital limit of £16,000 and lower capital of £10,000. [33521]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Not all the information is available. Figures for total numbers eligible could be produced only at disproportionate cost. The information set out in the tables is based on the numbers who, on current take-up levels, could be expected to claim.

Estimated extra number[1] of couples aged 60 or over claiming income support if the applicable amount, including the pensioner premium, was increased

	Existing capital limits	Capital limits of £10,000 and £16,000
Applicable amount of £200 per week	710,000	785,000
Applicable amount of £160 per week	500,000	550,000
Applicable amount of £140 per week	290,000	330,000

[1] Rounded to the nearest 5,000

Estimated cost[1] of increasing the applicable amount in income support for couples aged 60 and over £billion

	Existing capital limits	Capital limits of £10,000 and £16,000
Applicable amount of £200 per week	4.1	4.4
Applicable amount of £160 per week	2.0	2.1
Applicable amount of £140 per week	1.0	1.1

[1] Rounded to the nearest £100 million.

Note:

These figures include costs incurred in Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit due to the alignment of the applicable amounts in these benefits with those in Income Support. It has been assumed that the changes in the capital limits apply only to couples where at least one is aged 60 or over.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will estimate how many single people aged over 60 years would become eligible for income support if the applicable amount, including the pensioner premium, was £100 assuming (a) no change in capital limits and (b) an upper capital limit of £16,000 and lower capital limit of £10,000; [33522]

(2) if she will estimate the cost of increasing the applicable amount, including the pensioner premium, for income support for single people aged over 60 years to £100 assuming (a) no change in capital limits and (b) an upper capital limit of £16,000 and lower capital limit of £10,000. [33523]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested. Figures for total numbers eligible could be produced only at disproportionate cost. Information is available based on the numbers who, on current take-up levels, could be expected to claim.

The estimated extra number of single people aged 60 or over claiming Income Support and the associated cost if the applicable amount, including the pensioner premium, was £100 is:

(a) 790,000[2] with no change in capital limits at cost of £3 billion[3]; and

(b) 935,000[2] with an upper capital limit of £16,000 and a lower capital limit of £10,000 at a cost of £3.3 billion[3].

These figures include costs incurred in Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit due to the alignment of the applicable amounts in these benefits with those in Income Support.

Notes:

1. Changes in capital limits are assumed to apply only to single people aged 60 or over for the purposes of the costings.

TREASURY

VAT Refunds (Sports Clubs)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the estimated VAT refund to (a) recreational sports associations, (b) voluntary sports clubs and (c) charitable sports clubs under the Value Added Tax (Sport Physical Education and Fund Raising Events) Order 1994. [34255]

Dawn Primarolo: No separate figures are available.

Euro Information Unit

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff and at what level are employed in the Treasury's Euro information unit; what funding he has sought for it from Europe; and what contacts it will maintain with (a) the finance ministries of member countries and (b) the EMI. [33808]

Mrs. Liddell: Full details of the Euro Preparations Unit (EPU) are included in press release 156–97 available from the press office of HM Treasury.

The Government are involved in a constructive dialogue with the European Commission to examine what financial assistance might be available from the Community budget to help with the Government's information campaign.

The EPU is in regular contact with officials in other finance ministries. The Bank of England is closely involved in the work of the EMI; the Governor of the Bank of England is a member of the EMI Council.

Tobacco

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he (a) has commissioned, (b) has evaluated and (c) plans to commission on the numbers of under 16s who, since the European border restrictions were removed in 1993, have purchased cigarettes bought on the continent and illegally resold in the United Kingdom which do not display English language health warnings. [34699]

Dawn Primarolo: No research has been commissioned and there are no plans to do so.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when representatives from the Police, HM Customs & Excise and the National Weights and Measures Laboratory and Ministers from his Department last met to discuss the issue of tobacco imported from Belgium and illegally resold in the United Kingdom. [34701]

Dawn Primarolo: There have been no such meetings.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will press for upward harmonisation of tobacco taxes at the next meeting of EU member states' finance ministers. [34700]

Dawn Primarolo: It is Treasury Ministers' current intention to discuss the minimum rate of excise duty for tobacco products in ECOFIN following production of the European Commission's report on their review. Government policy in this area is to allow Member States a continuation of fiscal sovereignty, but underpinned by a regime of sensible and realistic minimum rates. In the case of tobacco we advocate a cash floor to the duty on cigarettes and higher minimum rates for the other tobacco products.

MIRAS

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the estimated tax expenditures under the MIRAS system for (a) each United Kingdom nation, (b) each English region and (c) the UK, for (i) 1970, (ii) 1979, (iii) 1989 and (iv) the last available two years, expressed in current prices. [34872]

Dawn Primarolo: Country and regional estimates of the cost of mortgage interest relief for 1989–90, 1995–96 and 1996–97 are published in Table 5.3 of the 1996 and 1997 editions of "Inland Revenue Statistics", copies of which are in the Library. Estimates prior to 1982–83 are not available. Estimates for 1982–83 onwards can be found in the 1993 edition of "Inland Revenue Statistics". The estimates for all these years are based on analyses of family expenditure surveys up to 1995–96. The estimates for 1996–97 are projections based on applying the same country and regional distribution as in 1995–96 to the total figure for 1996–97.

Estimates at the United Kingdom level for all years from 1962–63 to 1996–97 are published in Table 5.1 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1997".

VAT

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the total amount raised from value added tax is paid directly to the European Commission; how much this raises at the current rate; and what the yield to the Commission was in each financial year since the introduction of VAT. [34695]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 March 1998]: VAT contributions to the European Community are assessed from VAT bases calculated in a common manner across all member states. A uniform Community rate is applied to the VAT bases to arrive at the actual contributions. The Community rate for 1997 was a maximum of 1.16 per cent., but the actual rate paid by the UK was 0.52 per cent. allowing for the abatement to offset the low level of UK receipts from the European Union's General Budget.

Member states did not commence paying VAT based contributions until 1979. Since then, the UK has paid the following amounts during each calendar year:

Year	£
1979	843,683,425
1980	776,155,832
1981	1,060,209,936
1982	1,554,368,023
1983	1,668,927,244
1984	1,665,401,210
1985	2,089,417,074
1986	1,743,046,245
1987	2,277,429,915
1988	1,265,213,455
1989	2,243,863,837
1990	2,919,974,035
1991	770,987,557
1992	2,183,357,515
1993	1,953,652,009
1994	1,316,266,329
1995	3,637,792,072
1996	2,059,438,539
1997[1]	1,664,864,875

[1] The 1997 accounts are finalised in December 1998, so the contribution may be adjusted.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the question from the hon. Member for Blaby of 20 January 1998 relating to pensions (Ref. 24129). [34882]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 March 1998]: I did so on 21 January 1998, Official Report, column 530. If the hon. Member had intended to inquire about figures for returns on pension funds' investments, which the Chief Secretary gave to the House on 15 January 1998, Official Report, column 478, the source was a report published by the WM Company in January 1998.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) he has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) he has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34837]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 18 March 1998]: The Treasury has neither abolished nor established any non-departmental public bodies since 1 May 1997.

Excise Duty (Sparkling Wine and Cider)

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to equalise the excise duty levied upon low-strength sparkling wine and sparkling cider. [35340]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor's Budget Statement announced a reduction of 20 per cent. in the duty on low-strength sparkling wine and a 20 per cent. increase in the duty on sparkling cider. I can confirm that these changes are an important step in the process of aligning the duty rates for these competing products and that the rates will be fully aligned in the next Budget.

Pensions Mis-selling

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of the numbers of cases of personal pensions mis-selling in the categories (a) priority and (b) other; what is the estimated cost of compensation for each group and the timescale for the completion of the review by the companies concerned; and if she will make a statement. [35082]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms) on 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 315.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Focus Groups

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much his Department (a) has spent since 1 May and (b) is planning to spend on focus groups. [34965]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 5 March 1998, Official Report, columns 763–64.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those countries with freedom of information acts which exclude from the scope of the legislation (a) the law enforcement functions of the police, (b) the law enforcement functions of the immigration service and (c) the security and intelligence services. [35110]

Dr. David Clark: Information held by my Department about overseas freedom of information acts is not comprehensive. Using known examples however, the answers are: (a) the US Freedom of Information Act does not cover the police (as it is a Federal Act) and also excludes certain operational files of the FBI; (b) none; (c) the Australian Freedom of Information Act wholly excludes that country's security and intelligence services while the US Freedom of Information Act excludes certain operational files of the CIA. In general, even where countries exempt rather than exclude law enforcement, security and intelligence functions from their Freedom of Information Acts, the level of actual protection for such information remains high.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what procedure and criteria will apply in respect of the appointment of the Information Commissioner; how long his or her term of office will last; and if he will make a statement. [35035]

Dr. David Clark: The formal procedure for appointing the Information Commissioner and details of his or her term of office will be set out in the draft FOI Bill which I intend to publish later this year for public consultation.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what appeal procedure will apply in respect of decisions reached by the Information Commissioner. [35036]

Dr. David Clark: As proposed in paragraph 5.16 of the White Paper "Your Right to Know", decisions of the Information Commissioner would be subject to judicial review. The White Paper indicates why this is preferred to a substantive right of appeal.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the procedures which will be put in place to ensure full public accountability of the work of the Information Commissioner. [35032]

Dr. David Clark: Paragraph 5.11 of the White Paper "Your Right to Know" proposes that the Information Commissioner should be required to publish an annual report (and special reports where necessary) to Parliament on the operation of his or her function; and to publish reports on the outcomes of investigations.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Text Telephones

Mr. Levitt: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons text telephones with large display screens, for the use of people whose hearing and sight are both impaired, are not available in the United Kingdom; and if she will amend the relevant regulations to make them available. [34343]

Mrs. Roche: There are no regulations restricting the availability of text telephones with large display screens in the UK. OFTEL is consulting on proposals for improving telecommunications services for people with disabilities and the Government will be consulting shortly on their proposals to implement the Amending Voice Telephony Directive, which covers the provision of services for disabled people.

Fireworks

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will restrict the sale of fireworks to the general public to within a specified period around 5 November each year. [34595]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 16 March 1998]: I share the concerns of my hon. Friend to ensure that fireworks are sold for only a limited period round events such as bonfire night and religious festivals eg diwali. The private Member's Bill of my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mrs. Gilroy) gives power to restrict the sales period and we will be discussing this with representatives of the firework industry, consumer groups and others.

Telecommunications

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Office of Telecommunications has the power to specify that telecommunications companies should consult with other organisations regarding their joint response to an emergency or a potential emergency; and if she will make a statement. [34176]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Public Telecommunications Operators have a requirement in their Telecommunications Act 1984 licences to consult the authorities responsible for emergency organisations and other departments of central and local government designated by Oftel, in making plans and arrangements to respond to emergencies.

Inward Investment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what level of financial support she proposes to offer the English Regional Development Organisations for 1998–99. [35202]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The ten English Regional Development Organisations continue to make a significant contribution to the work of the Invest in Britain Bureau, to the overall success of the UK in attracting inward investment and in particular to their own region's performance. Having considered their future plans I have today offered £10.94 million of grant in total for their inward investment promotion activities for 1998–99.

This represents a 4.49% increase in the RDO grant total, and is to enable the UK to remain competitive in promoting its locational advantages in the face of increasing competition for mobile inward investment projects. I have allocated the grants as follows:

RDO	1998–99 Grant
Northern Development Company (NDC)	1,665
INWARD Ltd. (in the North West)	1,393
Yorkshire and Humberside Development Agency (YHDA)	1,415
West Midlands Development Agency (WMDA)	1,314
East Midlands Development Company Ltd. (EMDC)	984
Devon and Cornwall Development International (DCDI)	954
London First Centre	1,015
West of England Development Agency (WEDA)	600
East of England Investment Agency (EEIA)	800
South East Regional Investment Limited (SERIL)	800

All grants are offered on an annual basis for an agreed programme of future activities aimed at maximising value for money in inward investment work at regional level.

Engineering

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what meetings (a) she and (b) her Ministers have held with the Engineering Council since 1 May 1997; what was the subject of the discussions; and what future meetings are planned. [35040]

Mr. Battle: I met Dr. Alan Rudge, the Chairman of the Engineering Council, and Mr. Michael Heath, the Director General, on 27 November 1997. A wide range of topics were discussed, including the role of engineering and engineers in international competitiveness and the public perception of engineers and engineering in our society.

Lord Simon spoke on the subject of competitiveness and engineering skills at last year's Annual Conference of the Engineering Council, and my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is expected to address this Annual Conference on 30 April.

I also hope to address the Senate of the Engineering Council in December of this year.

In addition, officials of the Department of Trade and Industry are in frequent, almost daily, contact with the Engineering Council on a wide range of issues and I welcome their proposed advertising campaign on engineering.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will alter the title of the Chief Scientific Adviser to reflect his engineering responsibilities; and if she will make a statement. [35041]

Mr. Battle: The title, role and remit of the Chief Scientific Adviser, Sir Robert May, are matters for my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister who received his advice directly. There are currently no plans to make any changes to these arrangements. In this context, "scientific" is interpreted broadly to encompass scientific, engineering and technological issues, as for instance, in the guidelines on the use of scientific advise in policy making, published in March 1997 by the Office of Science and Technology.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps the World Bank is taking to ensure that the computer systems with which it is engaged are millennium compliant. [33860]

Clare Short: I have been asked to reply.

The World Bank is actively promoting the need for millennium compliance and organising guidance for its client countries. Bank Country Directors have been charged with approaching senior country officials to raise awareness of the issue. Countries are being urged to designate executive sponsors and to identify a specific agency and staff to be responsible for carrying forward their own work and for relating to international donors. The Bank has also instructed staff to investigate compliance on current projects and to ensure requirements on compliance are included in future contracts.

The Bank's aim is to put tools into the hands of developing country governments to enable them to identify the problem, to prioritise systems, and to protect those systems which are key to the economy and public order and well-being. It has initiated a project to develop a toolkit for review and prioritisation systems. It also proposes to catalogue all the types of assistance available from IT companies. It plans to roll out a series of seminars through developing countries to raise awareness of the issues and these facilities.

We have contributed £10 million to the Bank's trust fund for information development in order to promote and support new bank authorities.

WALES

Health Problems (Blaenau Gwent)

8. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on health problems in Blaenau Gwent. [33433]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The poor health and well-being of some communities in Wales, such as Blaenau Gwent, is a matter of concern to me. The Chief Medical Officer has advised me that a complex range of factors are likely to be involved in influencing the health of communities. We shall shortly be publishing a Green Paper which will provide the basis of a new public health strategy for addressing inequalities in health in Wales.

Farm Incomes

10. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about farming incomes since 1 March. [33435]

Mr. Ron Davies: I am continuing to receive representations from farmers and others drawing my attention to the decline in farm incomes over the past year.

National Assembly

11. Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his powers, with regard to England, which will be transferred to the Welsh assembly. [33436]

Mr. Ron Davies: These powers generally relate to small parts of England and are adjacent to Wales; they reflect the need to make sensible administrative arrangements on water and fisheries. The details will be contained in a transfer order under clause 22 of the Government of Wales Bill, which will be subject to affirmative resolution procedure in both Houses of Parliament.

13. Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from Welsh hon. Members regarding the siting of an assembly. [33439]

Mr. Ron Davies: On 3 February, I placed in the library of the House a list of all those who responded during the public consultation period.

I have received many representations—both in the form of correspondence and questions—from hon. Members.

14. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the criteria for the selection of a site for the Welsh assembly. [33440]

Mr. Ron Davies: The most important criteria were value for money; suitability for purpose of the proposed solution; and accessibility for members of the public.

16. Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the location of the National Assembly for Wales. [33444]

Mr. Ron Davies: I announced my decision on Friday 13 March 1998, Official Report, column 358.

26. Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from Welsh businesses regarding the setting up of the proposed National Assembly for Wales. [33455]

Mr. Ron Davies: The National Assembly Advisory Group have received written representations from the Federation of Small Businesses, the House Builders Association and Antur Dwyryd-Llan Cyf. In addition, members of the National Assembly Advisory Group recently held a consultation meeting with business representatives and trade unions.

Green-field Sites

12. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on developments on green-field sites in Wales. [33438]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We place great importance on the need to encourage and promote more sustainable patterns of development. Appropriate guidance is already in place. "Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy of 1996" stresses that full and effective use should be made of land within existing urban areas. The use of appropriate vacant land within urban areas can assist regeneration and relieve pressure for development on greenfield sites.

Green Belts can prevent urban sprawl and assist in urban regeneration. I have written to Welsh authorities encouraging them to give serious consideration to Green Belt creation and propose to ask for a progress report.

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on developments on greenfield sites in Wales. [33453]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We place great importance on the need to encourage and promote more sustainable patterns of development. Appropriate guidance is already in place. "Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy of 1996" stresses that full and effective use should be made of land within existing urban areas. The use of appropriate vacant land within urban areas can assist regeneration and relieve pressure for development on greenfield sites.

NHS Waiting Lists

15. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received regarding hospital waiting lists in Wales. [33443]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Other than in respect of individual cases, none. Reducing the time people have to wait for treatment, within the emphasis on emergency care, remains a priority for the Government. In recognition of this, I welcome the Chancellor's announcement yesterday, Official Report, columns 1097–1112, of additional moneys for NHS Wales next year, much of which will be used to target the growth in inpatient waiting lists.

Structural Funds

17. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of the European structural funds in Wales. [33445]

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of European structural funds in Wales. [33437]

Mr. Hain: The Government will consider the European Commission's proposals for reforming the Structural Funds and respond vigorously. There will be detailed negotiations over the coming months. We are committed to ensuring that Wales continues to secure the maximum benefit from the Funds after 1999.

Abattoirs

18. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received about the operating costs of abattoirs; and if he will make a statement. [33446]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We have received several representations. We have consulted the industry on the implementation of EU Directive EEC/96/43 on Financing of Veterinary Inspections and Controls and will be considering carefully all the responses made. The Meat Hygiene Service has also recently commenced a consultation exercise with the industry on meat hygiene inspection charges for 1998–99 and we will be taking note of responses there also.

The Government recognise the effect that current problems have had on the industry. In order to help the industry through this difficult time, we have announced that charges for implementing Specified Risk Material controls on cattle, sheep and goats in fresh meat plants will not now be recovered from the industry from 1 April 1998, as previously planned.

Landfill Sites

19. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the disposal of calcium sulphate filter cake at landfill sites in Wales. [33447]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We have received a number of representations about landfill sites in Wales, some of which have made reference to the disposal of calcium sulphate filter cake.

Farmers

20. Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received since 1 March about problems facing farmers. [33448]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We are continuing to receive representations from farmers and others drawing our attention to the problems in farming over the past year.

23. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding HLCA payments to Welsh hill farmers. [33451]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We have received a range of representations from industry bodies and hon. Members concerning HLCA rates. My right hon. Friend and I have also met, separately, representatives of the National Farmers' Union of Wales and the Farmers' Union of Wales as part of the Autumn Review. Payments under the 1998 scheme started this month.

Welsh Language

21. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to extend knowledge of the Welsh language in England. [33449]

Mr. Ron Davies: My priority is to support the Welsh language within Wales. A wide range of benefits will flow from that.

I am always happy to explain our policies for the language, and the progress we are making to implement them, more generally.

Ambulance Service

22. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the establishment of an all-Wales ambulance trust. [33450]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I announced the establishment of a new single ambulance trust for Wales on 26 February. This followed a three month consultation exercise during which the people of Wales were given the opportunity to express their views on the proposals. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I considered all the responses to the consultation together with advice from others, including the independent assessors I appointed to examine the proposals, before reaching our decision. We are satisfied that the overwhelming benefits to patients identified in the consultation document could be realised and a decision was taken to merge the existing ambulance services from 1 April 1998.

Manufacturing Industry

24. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the prospects for manufacturing industry. [33452]

Mr. Hain: Business Strategy Ltd and Cambridge Econometrics forecast that manufacturing output will grow faster in Wales than in the United Kingdom as a whole for the foreseeable future.

Wildlife Conservation

25. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on wildlife conservation in Wales. [33454]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We are fully committed to wildlife conservation in Wales and pursue policies which conserve sensitive sites, habitats and species. These include the designation and protection of areas of environmental sensitivity such as Special Protection Areas; support for a programme of biodiversity action in Wales both at the local and national level; priority to the promotion of sustainable development; and a commitment to the Government's international nature conservation obligations such as those imposed by the EC Habitats Directive.

In addition, I am developing an all-Wales agri-environment scheme encompassing the key components of existing schemes such as Tir Cymen and Environmentally Sensitive Areas. The criteria for the new scheme include the protection of species and habitats identified in the UK's Biodiversity Action Plan.

Beef

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he has taken to assist beef farmers in Wales. [33534]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government recognise the serious problems that the current difficulties have created for the agriculture industry and we have responded positively. Just before Christmas the Government announced an aid package worth £85 million for the livestock industry. This exceptional and one off aid package is both substantial and realistic given the pressures on public spending. This is in addition to the £1.4 billion already budgeted to support the beef sector during the current financial year.

We have also recently announced that some £70 million will be paid by the Government in meeting the costs of BSE related schemes. In order to help the industry through this period, charges for implementing Specified Risk Material controls on cattle, sheep and goats will not now be recovered from the industry from 1 April 1998, as previously planned. Additionally, the entire start-up costs and the first year of the running costs, including enforcement, of the new computerised Cattle Tracing System will be funded by the Government.

The right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales met representatives of the Farmers' Union of Wales, the National Farmers' Union and the Country Landowners' Association on 9 February to discuss the long term future of Welsh agriculture.

Rural Schools

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to introduce measures similar to those proposed in England to protect rural schools from closure; and if he will make a statement. [33992]

Mr. Hain: In Wales, the Secretary of State has the opportunity to call in any proposals for schools to be closed and is obliged to do so where any objections are raised. The close links existing between the Welsh Office and the local education authorities mean an automatic call in procedure is not needed.

The Secretary of State would not normally be prepared to approve closure of a popular and effective school unless the alternative proposed would offer a higher quality and equal diversity of education at total lower cost than would have been available had the school remained open. The guidance also emphasises that he would not expect to approve the closure of any school where there was strong parental opposition unless he was convinced that it was not possible to provide satisfactory education across the curriculum and across all age groups. I also acknowledge the vital importance of schools in many rural communities in Wales.

Agenda 2000 (Agriculture)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's response to the European Commission's Agenda 2000 consultation document on agriculture. [34494]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government have given the European Commission's consultation document on Agenda 2000 a broad welcome. The Welsh Office will continue to work closely with farming unions in Wales to identify and argue for the needs of Welsh agriculture, as the reform process goes forward.

New Deal

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of the New Deal in Wales. [33441]

Mr. Hain: I am delighted to say that we have made good and rapid progress in implementing the New Deal for young people in the South-West Pathfinder area.

To date, well over 2,000 interviews with unemployed young people have been completed and almost 1,200 jobs pledged by more than 250 employers. A further 400 employers are expected to sign-up in the next three months.

This represents an excellent start to our crusade to bring hope to young people and one which we will build on when the New Deal is launched throughout Wales in April.

Youth Services

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his proposals for extending youth services throughout Wales. [33442]

Mr. Hain: Our proposals for extending youth services will be explored in a Green Paper for Wales on lifelong learning, which we expect to publish very shortly.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Complaints

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what records he keeps of complaints made by him in his official capacity to media organisations and individual journalists on their reporting and commentary on (a) the Millennium Dome and (b) other Government business; and how many such complaints have been made since 2 May 1997. [35106]

Mr. Mandelson: I keep no such records (but can recall few such complaints).

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

New Covent Garden

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) when he plans to introduce legislation to enable him to sell the new Covent Garden market; [25910]

(2) if he will make a statement on his plans for the future ownership and operation of new Covent Garden market. [25911]

Dr. John Cunningham: The Government believe that they should not retain assets they do not need. However, any change in the status of New Covent Garden Market would be subject to Parliamentary time being available.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many overseas countries he has visited since 1 May 1997. [32065]

Dr. John Cunningham: I have visited 10 overseas countries since 1 May 1997. They are: Belgium, the Netherlands, Sweden, Luxembourg, France, Italy, Germany, South Africa, St. Lucia and Spain.

Fishing Industry

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 3 March 1998, Official Report, column 598, on the fishing industry, what estimate he has made of the levels of employment in the inshore United Kingdom fisheries industry which would be sustainable on (i) extension and (ii) lapse of derogation on the 12 mile fisheries limit after 2002. [33965]

Mr. Morley: In 1996 there were some 5,600 under 10 metre vessels in the UK fishing fleet. Many of these and other inshore vessels would be adversely affected if the restrictions on access by foreign fishing vessels within 12 mile limits were not extended beyond 2002. The Government have not made estimates of possible future changes in the levels of employment. The restrictions were continued after the mid-term review of the Common Fisheries Policy in 1982. As I indicated in my reply to the hon. Member on 3 March 1998, Official Report, column 598, it is the Government's firm intention for these restrictions to remain after 2002.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 496, if he will raise each of the fishing measures listed at the next Council of Ministers meeting. [34861]

Mr. Morley: The future of the Common Fisheries Policy after 2002 is not on the agenda of the next meeting of the Fisheries Council. Such matters are, however, expected to be relevant to the following meeting.

Agriculture Expenditure

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what areas of budgeted agricultural expenditure the appreciation of the pound sterling since 1 April 1997 has reduced planned sterling expenditure; and by how much. [33810]

Dr. John Cunningham: It is not possible to identify precisely what proportion of the difference in total expenditure compared to estimated requirements is accounted for by changes in the sterling exchange rate.

Suckler Cow Producer Subsidy

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the average subsidy paid per suckler cow producer for each year since 1979. [34259]

Mr. Rooker: Listed in the table are the average sums received by claimants of Suckler Cow Premium under the Suckler Cow Premium Scheme since 1984–85:

Year	Payment per producer
1984–85	473
1985–86	470
1986–87	491
1987–88	635

1993–94	2,303
1994–95	2,345
1995–96	3,701
1996–97	5,684

Figures are derived from the annual Farm Business Survey and relate to England and Wales. The figure for 1996–97 takes account of additional BSE related payments made to producers that year. Information for the earlier years and on a UK basis are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Farm Bankruptcies

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers (a) nationally and (b) in Shropshire went bankrupt in each year since 1979. [34271]

Mr. Morley: The national data are set out in the table. Data by county are not available.

Lindane

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he plans to ban the use of Lindane. [34785]

Mr. Rooker: Lindane has been used widely as a pesticide and in human and veterinary medicines for many years. In 1995, the independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP) reviewed a very substantial body of evidence on the toxicology of lindane in the course of a review of its agricultural uses; the Committee concluded that approvals should continue, as there was no evidence of an unacceptable risk to human health. The ACP also reviewed lindane's non-agricultural uses in 1992 when the same conclusions were reached.

Whilst the balance of our scientific advice is that insufficient evidence has been presented to justify immediate withdrawal of lindane, the Government are always ready to consider new findings. Lindane is currently the subject of a review under Community pesticides legislation and is also under discussion in the context of international negotiations on the long range transport of certain chemicals in the atmosphere. A pesticide can, of course, be withdrawn at any time, and I can assure the hon. Member that the Government would not hesitate to act if there was a real risk to human health or the environment.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Totnes of 21 January regarding the withdrawal of suckler cow quota from Mr. Ian Pedrick of Broadmoor Farm, Marlborough. [34951]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 17 March 1998]: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Secretary replied to the letter of 21 January from the hon. Member on 16 March.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 16 and 17 March; and if he will make a statement. [35495]

Dr. John Cunningham: I chaired the third meeting under the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union Council of Agriculture Ministers on 16–17 March in Brussels. My noble Friend Lord Donoughue, Parliamentary Secretary responsible for the farming and food industry, represented the United Kingdom. My noble Friend Lord Dubs, Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland was also present.

The Council agenda included two very important issues relating to BSE.

The Council first considered Commission proposals for amending the terms of the export ban on UK beef, with tighter controls over beef and beef products imported into the UK and then re-exported, but with significant easing of the ban through a Certified Herds Scheme to be operated in Northern Ireland. This proposal, which narrowly failed to receive a qualified majority in the Standing Veterinary Committee earlier this month, was adopted decisively by the Council, a qualified majority voting in favour. Only Germany and Belgium voted against, with Spain and Luxembourg abstaining. This decision represents the first step in lifting the world-wide ban on UK beef, and has been welcomed by farming organisations not only in Northern Ireland but in the United Kingdom as a whole.

The Council returned to the important issue of specified risk material (SRM). The Standing Veterinary Committee earlier this month rejected a Commission proposal for a Community system of rules on the removal of risk material from cattle and sheep. I explored with Council and Commission the possibility of finding support for alternative arrangements which would reflect not only the varying incidence of BSE in different member states but also the need for member states with high levels of protection against BSE—notably the United Kingdom and France—to safeguard this level of protection for public safety in any future system. The Council confirmed by a majority (from which only Finland, Spain and Sweden stood aside) the rejection of the Commission's latest formal proposal. The Council invited the Commission now to propose to the Standing Veterinary Committee that its earlier Decision on SRM, which would provoke trade problems, should not come into force on 1 April as previously decided, but should be deferred to allow further time for discussion. At ministerial level a qualified majority was established for this next step.

The Council agreed unanimously a Decision to approve the equivalence agreement on trade in animals and animal products between the European Union and United States. The agreement will be signed when a qualified majority in the Council establishes that the US has published satisfactory draft legislation recognising the distribution of animal diseases in the EU. The Council's Decision represents a decisive stage on the part of the EU in concluding an agreement which will be important for trade in animal products between the EU and US, to the economic advantage of both sides.

Commissioner Fischler introduced a proposal to update and extend current EU legislation on the welfare of laying hens. The proposal would substantially increase the minimum welfare requirements applying to laying hens throughout the Union. I welcomed this proposal on behalf of the Council and undertook that the UK Presidency will now arrange for the necessary discussions at technical level.

Finally, the Council discussed a communication from the Commission about food, veterinary and plant health control and inspection. The Commission took note of concerns voiced by several member states about aspects of the present arrangements, and undertook to act on them.

Set-aside

Mr. Walter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total area by county, and the average payment per hectare in each of those counties, of set-aside land in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997. [34604]

Mr. Rooker: Payment rates per hectare on land set-aside apply for England as a whole. The payment rates that applied and areas of land set-aside under the Arable Area Payments Scheme in each of the three years requested are as follows.

Payment rates (£/hectare)

	1995	1996	1997

Mr. Walter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total area of set-aside land in the United Kingdom in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997. [34603]

Mr. Rooker: The total area of land set-aside under the Arable Area Payments Scheme in the United Kingdom was 605,360 ha in 1995, 476,821 ha in 1996 and 295,334 ha in 1997. In addition 36,534 ha and 15,209 ha were set aside under the Five Year Set-aside Scheme in 1995 and 1996.

Ministers and Top Management Programme

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff are involved in the Ministers and Top Management Programme; where these staff are based; and what are the total salary bill and the administration costs for this programme. [34783]

Mr. Morley: There are currently 38 staff and four Ministers in the Department's secretariat which is located in Central London. The total salary bill for the secretariat, excluding Ministers, is £937,000. The total estimated administration costs (including Ministers salaries of £142,000 but excluding other salaries) are £714,000 per year.

Current gross annual salaries (basic salary plus any pay additions and specialist allowances) have been used for the salary bill.

Departmental Services

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are (a) the number of staff employed by, (b) the salary bill of, (c) the location of offices used by and (d) the estimated administration costs in the current financial year of his Department's (i) Press and Information Service, (ii) Legal Service, (ii) Economic and Statistics Section, (iv) Information Technology Service, and (v) Financial Planning and Control Programme. [34786]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is shown in the table. Current gross annual salaries (basic salary plus any pay additions and specialist allowances) have been used for the salary bill. The latest estimated annual administration costs include all non-pay running costs and capital, less VAT recoveries. Money from receipts is not included.

Consultants

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total value of contracts sourced by his Department with (a) non-IT and (b) IT external consultants in (i) London and (ii) Scotland. [34784]

Mr. Morley: The information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Cranston: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 18 March. [33419]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I will have further such meetings later today.

Public Appointments

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Prime Minister how many of the appointments to public bodies which he has made since 1 May 1997 have been from the Public Appointments Unit list. [33258]

The Prime Minister: My aim is that appointments to public bodies should be from a wide range of sources. The Public Appointments Unit is one source as are advertisements for specific posts. I have made twenty-one appointments since 1 May to bodies listed in "Public Bodies" one of which was from the Public Appointments Unit list.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Forth: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 581, on ministerial visits, if he will list the occasions prior to 1 May 1997 when the personal companion of a Minister travelling on official business was not a spouse. [33370]

The Prime Minister: I am not accountable for previous administrations.

Government Reviews (Wales)

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list each Government review currently taking place which affects Wales; and in each case, if it is intended to be completed before the proposed date for elections to the Welsh Assembly. [33701]

The Prime Minister: My Government have in place a wide programme of reviews which are intended to underpin their work, and that of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales in particular, in extending democratic accountability; increasing economic prosperity and improving the quality of life for people throughout Wales; and realising Wales's potential within the UK, Europe and the wider world.

A summary of the reviews being undertaken currently by the Welsh Office is as follows:

Welsh Office Reviews	To be completed before Assembly Elections
Health
Review of Health Authority allocation formula	Yes
Review of NHS Capital Charges	Yes
Review of Health Promotion arrangements in Wales	Yes
Location of various activities of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority after 1999	Yes

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions Her Majesty's Government have had with the Chinese over their interpretation of recent UN

Resolutions, in relation to authorising the commencement of military action, undertaken in the name of the United Nations against targets in Iraq. [34318]

The Prime Minister: During the recent Iraq crisis we maintained close contact with all members of the Security Council, including the Chinese.

Security Council Resolution 1154 was adopted unanimously by the Security Council. All members, including China, agreed that further violations of Iraq's obligations under relevant Security Council Resolutions and the Memorandum of Understanding signed in Baghdad would be followed by the severest consequences.

Rupert Murdoch

Mr. Gray: To ask the Prime Minister when he last met Rupert Murdoch; where that meeting occurred; and what was discussed. [35061]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 5 March 1998, Official Report, column 702.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Ashford Great Park

Mr. Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what estimate he has made of the current annual loss to the income stream resulting from the Ashford Great Park development project. [35147]

Mr. Stuart Bell: The Commissioners, like any investment organisation, have a spread of investments. At any one time there are many alternatives available. It is not realistic to put a hypothetical income stream on individual investments on the premise that they might have performed differently or different investments might have been preferred.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Consultants

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his estimate of the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on external consultants in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 to date and (iv) 1997–98 full year; and if he will also estimate the cost savings resulting from the employment of such consultants for each of the above years. [26626]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 5 February 1998]: My Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies use consultants for a wide variety of tasks. The available expenditure information is given in the following table:

	1995–96 (actual)	1996–97 (actual)	1997–98 (spend to date)	1997–98 (estimate)
Department for Culture, Media and Sport	304,632	448,931	429,396	460,000
Historic Royal Palaces Agency	506,000	296,000	225,000	258,000
Royal Parks Agency	771,986	819,551	356,644	581,000
Non-departmental public bodies	20,136,168	33,970,571	35,015,744	n/a n/a = Not applicable

Consultants contribute to the Department's output and efficiency by bringing in specialist skills and improving the Department's effectiveness.

BBC

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received from (a) the public and (b) commercial broadcasters about the scale and cost of the BBC's promotion of (i) BBC channel services and its corporate image and (ii) the licence fee; and if he will make a statement. [34113]

Mr. Fisher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received representations from three members of the public and from the Commercial Radio Companies Association about the BBC's promotion of its public service programmes. He has received a number of representations from members of the public about the BBC's promotion of the licence fee, but our records do not provide an exact figure. No representations on this subject have been received from commercial broadcasters.

The Government believe that the BBC should be allowed restricted use of free airtime to promote the licence fee and its public service programmes, provided such promotion meets the requirements of fair competition. The use of such airtime informs licence fee payers of the range and type of public services available, assisting them to get full value from the licence fee.

Elgin Marbles

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the retention of the Elgin Marbles in the United Kingdom; [34024]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the repatriation of antiquities from UK national museums and galleries to their country of origin; [34022]

(3) if the Government will make it their policy not to allow the Elgin Marbles to leave the custody of the British Museum. [34023]

Mr. Fisher: It is for the Government's policy that the Parthenon sculptures should remain in the British Museum. More generally, the retention or disposal of objects in our national museums and galleries is a matter for the trustees of those institutions. However, the trustees can only dispose of objects within the scope of their statutory powers, and in many cases those powers limit trustees' discretion to the dispersal of articles which have become useless by reason of damage or are otherwise unsuitable for retention in the collection. The Government have no powers to intervene and no plans to change the law.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations the Government have received regarding the Elgin Marbles. [34025]

Mr. Fisher: I regularly receive representations about the Parthenon sculptures. Most of these are from individual members of the public either directly or via their Member of Parliament.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list those parliamentary questions he has taken eight weeks or more to answer since 1 May 1997. [32714]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 12 March 1998]: No parliamentary question tabled to this Department since 1 May 1997 has taken more than eight weeks to answer.

TREASURY

Construction Industry

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of GNP the construction industry represents in each OECD and EU country. [34243]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Nick Gibb, dated 12 March 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the construction industry.

The ONS only publishes data relating to the United Kingdom.

Usually, construction is not measured as a percentage of Gross National Product (GNP), this is due to data being unavailable relating to net property income from abroad of the construction industry. The usual convention estimates construction as a percentage of Gross Domestic Product (GDP).

International data is published by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). GDP by type of activity, including construction, is published in; National Accounts Detailed Tables Volume II 1997 edition. The most recent published data on an OECD basis for the UK relates to the year 1994. For example, in 1994 construction, at current prices, was measured at £31,035 million, this represented 4.67% of GDP.

More recent estimates of UK construction and GDP are available from the United Kingdom National Account (Blue Book 1997). However, this set of data contains revisions to previous estimates and will not be fully consistent with the UK estimates published by OECD. In 1996 construction, at current prices, was measured at £33,746 million, representing 4.55% of GDP.

Copies of both publications are available in the House of Commons library.

Taxation (Qualified Majority Voting)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is Government policy not to concede taxation matters to qualified majority voting in the EU. [34171]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 12 March 1998]: Decisions on tax are subject to Unanimity.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the estimated gross domestic product per head for (a) each United Kingdom nation, (b) each English region and (c) the UK, expressed in current prices, for (i) 1970, (ii)1979, (iii) 1989 and (iv) the last two years for which figures are available. [34877]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tom Holt to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 19 March 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on gross domestic product (GDP) per head for the countries and regions of the United Kingdom.

The available information is given in the attached table. With effect from April 1997, Government Office Regions (GORs) replaced Standard Statistical Regions (SSRs) as the primary classification for the presentation of statistics for the regions of England. GDP data are available from 1984 for GORs and from 1971 for SSRs. Data have been provided on both bases in the table.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to recast GDP to take account of environmental factors. [35318]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 19 March 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on GDP.

The ONS is maintaining an active programme of work on calculating a 'satellite' environmental account. Techniques of environmental valuation are used by officials to assist in informing policy making. There are no current plans to use environmental valuation techniques to recast GDP. GDP is calculated by an internationally agreed procedure set out in the System of National Accounts (SNA68), SNA93 from September 1998, and subsequently in the European Union's European System of National Accounts (ESA93), ESA95 from September 1998.

For further information the ONS published "The pilot UK environmental accounts" in Economic Trends in August 1996 and an article "Environmental Accounts—valuing the depletion of oil and gas reserves" published in April 1996. Copies of Economic Trends are available in the House of Commons Library.

Smuggling

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets he has set Customs and Excise to assess their success rate in confiscating smuggled or bootlegged tobacco and alcohol; and if he will report their success in achieving these targets to Parliament annually. [34800]

Dawn Primarolo: For 1997–98 Customs planned to make detections of cross Channel smuggled excise goods worth £36.7 million in revenue. Results for the first 10 months (up to 31 January 1998) are £40.6 million.

Customs publicise their achievements against plans in their Annual Report, copies of which are placed in the House of Commons Library.

Independent Financial Advisers

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to review the independence of independent financial advisers; and if he will make a statement. [35100]

Mrs. Liddell: None. That is a matter for the regulators.

Continence Products

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his oral answer of 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 743, concerning continence products, what factors led the VAT Tribunal in July 1996 to rule that such products should be zero rated. [34889]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 March 1998]: The factors which the Tribunal took into account were the precise terms of the individual contracts, and the arrangements under which the supplies actually took place. Based on that examination, the Tribunal decided that VAT relief applied in some cases, but not in others.

Court of Auditors Report

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what position was taken by Her Majesty's Government during the Council of Ministers' discussion of the Court of Auditors' report on 9 March; what conclusions were reached by the Council of Ministers; and if he will make a statement. [34821]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 March 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) on 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 319.

As representative of the UK, I additionally noted the unacceptably high level of errors reported in the Statement of Assurance, called on the Commission to work with Member States to improve performance, and welcomed the work already undertaken to improve financial control of the Structural Funds.

Environmental Audit Committee

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to respond to the Pre-Budget report from the Environmental Audit Committee, Session 1997–98, HC 547. [35027]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 March 1998]: The Environmental Audit Committee's report on the implications of the Pre-Budget Report on environmental protection and sustainable development was published on 10 March. I expect to respond to the report within 2 months of that date.

Budget (Environmental Impact)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy in respect of the environmental impact of his Budget. [35033]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 March 1998]: The Financial Statement and Budget Report includes an environmental assessment of the Budget measures which will have a significant effect on the environment. The Government are committed, more generally, to ensuring that policy appraisal includes an assessment of the environmental impacts.

VAT (Historic and Religious Buildings)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was his response to the request by the General Synod to lower the rate of VAT on repairs to historic and religious buildings. [35060]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 March 1998]: The Chancellor has received no direct communication from the General Synod to lower the rate of VAT on repairs to historic and religious buildings, although he is aware that a resolution was passed by the Synod.

A relief of the kind envisaged is not possible under European law.

Resource Accounts

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends that the Resource Accounts to be produced by Government will include an evaluation of the present value of United Kingdom state pension liabilities; and when he intends that these accounts will first be published. [34697]

Mr. Darling: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Paymaster General to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Gibb) on 5 March 1998, Official Report, columns 718–19.

European Single Currency

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about his proposals for the design of the banknotes for the proposed European single currency. [34791]

Mrs. Liddell: The EMI is responsible for supervising the technical preparations of euro banknotes, in accordance with Article 109f(3) of the Treaty. The initial designs for euro banknotes were unveiled at the European Council in Dublin in December 1996. Final decisions on the technical specifications of euro banknotes will be taken by the ECB once it is established.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the proportion of British businesses which account to six places of decimals; [35217]

(2) if British companies dealing with European companies which are using the euro will be required to change their accounting systems to use the triangulation method and six places of decimals. [35220]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 309. Businesses accounting in euro do not need to follow the triangulation method, which only concerns the conversion from one national currency unit of a country participating in the single currency to the national currency unit of another such country. There is no requirement to account in euro to six significant figures.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what regulations there will be, after the exchange rates of the euro-participating currencies are locked in May, to prevent different prices, spreads or commissions in dealings in these currencies; [35219]

(2) what decisions (a) have been taken and (b) remain to be taken on the permitted or recommended spread or commission once the European currency rates of euro countries are locked in May. [35218]

Mrs. Liddell: Bilateral conversion rates between currencies of countries participating in the single currency will form the basis for the conversion rates between national currencies and the euro, in accordance with Article 1091(4) of the Treaty on 1 January 1999. These bilateral rates will be announced on 3 May 1998. There will be no regulations on spreads or commissions covering the period from 3 May 1998 to the start of stage three.

Conversions from the euro unit to the national currency units of participating countries from 1 January 1999 and vice versa will be required to use the special conversion rate in accordance with council regulation (EC) No. 1103/97 of 17 June 1997.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government plan to legislate to abolish the ecu. [35216]

Mrs. Liddell: No. The ecu, as referred to in Article 109g of the EC Treaty and defined in Council Regulation (EC) No 3320/94 of 22 December 1994, will become the single currency on 1 January 1999, in accordance with Article 1091(4) of the EC Treaty, and will be called the euro. Council Regulation (EC) No 1103/97 of 17 June 1997 which will be applicable in all member states, including the United Kingdom, provides confirmation that references to the Ecu in contracts and other legal instruments, including legislation, will be presumed to refer to the euro.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government plan an Act of Parliament to legalise (a) the euro as a foreign currency and (b) the compulsory conversion of other European currency contracts into euros. [35215]

Mrs. Liddell: It is a rule of the conflict of laws, applied by courts in the various jurisdictions in the United Kingdom, that a foreign currency has the status accorded to it by the law governing that currency. Courts in the United Kingdom will therefore recognise the status that the euro will have under EC law, including Council Regulation 1103/97 of 17 June 1997 which confirms that references in contracts to national currencies replaced by the euro will be interpreted to refer to the euro. Domestic legislation will not be required in the United Kingdom.

Government Borrowing

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give details of the Government's borrowing programme in 1998–99. [35689]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government have today published the 1998–99 Debt Management Report. This sets out the Government's debt management policy, reviews the Government's borrowing programme in 1997–98, and gives details of the Government's borrowing programme in 1998–99, including remits for the Debt Management Office and National Savings. This is the first remit for the UK Debt Management Office, which takes on responsibility for debt management from 1 April 1998, following the decision to transfer Government debt management responsibilities from the Bank of England to the Treasury. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when he expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 3 February on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Harradine; [35311]

(2) when he expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 2 February on behalf of Ms Chetwood; [35326]

(3) when he expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 2 February on behalf of Mr. Sandercock. [35319]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Interim replies have been sent today, and I will respond in more detail to the right hon. Member shortly.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her policy towards the funding of police training in Indonesia. [35046]

Clare Short: We are not funding any such training, and have no intention to do so.

Iraq

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimates she has made of the impact of sanctions on (a) child mortality and (b) child malnourishment in Iraq since 1990. [34958]

Clare Short: The UK Government are not in a position to make reliable estimates of the impact of sanctions on Iraq. However, we take seriously disturbing reports from international humanitarian organisations suggesting that the people of Iraq are suffering deprivation and hardship.

The issue is complex, given the many influences that bear upon the well-being of the population, of which sanctions are one. Numerous attempts have been made, e.g., under the auspices of the UN, to estimate the impact of sanctions on Iraq, but the findings are open to differences of interpretation. In addition, there are practical difficulties. UK missions to Iraq attempt to monitor the situation, but are currently restricted to the north of the country. We do not have independent access to Baghdad-controlled Iraq.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what representations he has received from British theme park owners on the Millennium Dome project. [29864]

Mr. Mandelson: I have received representations from various organisations from the leisure industry, including theme park operators. The New Millennium Experience Company and I will continue to seek advice, as and when necessary, from a range of experts in this field.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio when he plans to provide the full details of the contents of the Millennium Experience. [31202]

Mr. Mandelson: On 24 February, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister presented an outline of the Dome's contents and details of seven zones. The New Millennium Experience Company will announce details of the remaining exhibits in due course.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what assessment he has made of the risk of terrorist attacks on the Millennium Dome at Greenwich. [33993]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company have had discussions with the relevant bodies and agencies to ensure that security measures taken during construction and operation minimise this risk.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how many works of art he estimates will be exhibited in the Millennium Dome. [34787]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is currently considering its policy and strategy on displaying works of art within the Dome. It is therefore too early to say how many such works might be exhibited.

Millennium Experience

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what (a) the BAA, (b) the Corporation of London, (c) Tesco, (d) British Telecom, (e) BSkyB, (f) Manpower, (g) British Airways and (h) Camelot will receive in return for their sponsorship of the New Millennium Experience. [32231]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 59. Details of specific sponsorship arrangements between the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) and individual companies are subject to ongoing negotiations and contractual arrangements.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how many bids he received for the staffing contract for the Millennium Experience; whether the contract was advertised in the Journal of the European Communities; and what the criteria were for a successful bid. [33835]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 10 March 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) have not placed any advertisements for the supply of operational staff at this stage.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the new games which will be included in the Millennium Experience, indicating in each case (a) the expenditure by the New Millennium Experience Company on their development, (b) the rights acquired by the Company, and (c) the individuals, organisations or companies with which the Company has been associated. [34860]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) have not taken any final decisions about the inclusion or otherwise of new games within the individual exhibits.

PRIME MINISTER

Focus Groups

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Prime Minister how much his Department (a) has spent since 1 May and (b) is planning to spend on focus groups. [34969]

The Prime Minister: For the purpose of this answer, my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 5 March 1998, Official Report, columns 763–65.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Freemasons

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General what steps he has taken to encourage disclosure by freemasons in the Crown Prosecution Service; and if he will make a statement. [33790]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service, in conjunction with other interested parties, will now be taking forward implementation of the Government's response to the Home Affairs Committee.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Attorney-General what initiatives have been taken to reduce delays within the Crown Prosecution Service. [33781]

The Attorney-General: The Government are determined to tackle delays across the criminal justice system and have in hand a range of measures in the Crime and Disorder Bill. The Crown Prosecution Service is fully involved with the development of these measures which will reduce delay.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Nottingham, South, (Mr. Simpson) on 27 February 1998, Official Report, column 394, if he will review the convention that advice given by Law Officers is not disclosed outside Government. [33789]

The Attorney-General: The convention was considered during the preparation of the White Paper on Freedom of Information. The conclusion in the White Paper is that legal advice to Government from any source should not be covered by the proposed legislation. The Government believe that it is appropriate to continue to observe the convention.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Kosovo

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Department for International Development concerning the provision of aid to Kosovo. [34857]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I understand that officials from the Department for International Development (DFID) will be meeting with representatives of those British charities which are already active in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia today. The meeting will enable DFID officials to assess the current situation in Kosovo and its people's needs. I am further informed that the Department for International Development is currently funding Oxfam's work in providing a centre for disabled children and health education for rural women in Kosovo.

Ethical Investment

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice on ethical issues is available from his Department to individuals, organisations and companies considering trade or investment projects in (a) Algeria, (b) North Korea, (c) Burma, (d) Indonesia, (e) Libya, (f) Colombia, (g) Syria, (h) Iraq, (i) Saudi Arabia and (j) China. [35043]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department, together with the DTI, provides advice on all aspects of doing business overseas, including relevant export controls and any commitments made by HMG regarding the application of the controls to the particular country concerned. This Department is ready to offer advice on ethical issues, and regularly provides advice on the political situation in particular markets, to companies considering or involved in trade overseas. This Department works with DTI and DfID to encourage all British companies to set the highest ethical standards in their overseas activities.

EU Accession

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the completion date of the accession negotiations relating to applicant countries for the EU; and if he will make a statement. [35098]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Luxembourg European Council established a framework which will allow Cyprus and the ten applicant countries of Central Europe to join the EU as soon as they are ready. We shall launch accession negotiations with six of these countries on 31 March. The speed of each applicant's progress will depend on its preparations for membership. So it would be misleading to set any deadlines for the completion of accession negotiations.

China and Tibet

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the matters in respect of Tibet which he raised with the Chinese Ambassador at their last meeting; and if he will make a statement. [35314]

Mr. Fatchett: The right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did not discuss Tibet when he last met the Chinese Ambassador on 9 January. When he met Chinese leaders in Beijing on 19–20 January, he discussed the forthcoming EU Troika Ambassador's visit to Tibet, raised certain individual cases of concern and urged the Chinese authorities to enter into dialogue with the Tibetan people.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what procedures are in place to monitor Chinese adherence to treaties and agreements signed which have human rights considerations. [35315]

Mr. Fatchett: Amongst the United Nations human rights treaties, China has ratified the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD); the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC); the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW); and the Convention against Torture (CAT). States parties are required to submit periodic reports to the respective treaty monitoring bodies of the UN in respect of all of these. These monitoring bodies are responsible for examining states' adherence to their commitments under the treaties.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors he takes into account before deciding to what extent constructive engagement is likely to be bring about an improvement to the human rights situation in (a) China and (b) Tibet. [35316]

Mr. Fatchett: Since the resumption of the EU-China dialogue in October 1997, China has taken some positive steps towards closer cooperation with the UN's human rights mechanisms. In addition the EU and China have agreed a programme of assistance designed to improve China's human rights performance in concrete ways. We believe this approach is the best way to bring about real improvements in China, including Tibet.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish (a) the number of places on each of his Department's non-departmental public bodies, (b) the number of places that are currently unfilled on each non-departmental public body, (c) the total number of members that have resigned since 1 May 1997, (d) the total number that have retired since 1 May 1997, (e) the total number that have not had their contracts renewed since 1 May 1997, (f) the total number that have remained in place since 1 May 1997 and (g) the total number that have been appointed since 1 May 1997. [35276]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The FCO has responsibility for 7 Non Departmental Public Bodies: Marshall Aid Commemorative Committee (MACC), Westminster Foundation for Democracy (WFD), Commonwealth Institute (CI), British Council (BC)[1], Britain Russia Centre (BRC)[2], British Association for Central and Eastern Europe (BACEE)[1,2], Great Britain China Centre[2]—this has no public appointments.

[1] The Secretary of State approves nominations rather than makes appointments to these bodies. He has the power only to veto a nomination.

[2] These three bodies do not fall within the provisions of the OCPA guidance on appointments.

Argentina

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there have been any new exceptions to the arms embargo on Argentina. [35500]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have recently granted an exception to the embargo relating to the sale of spare parts for the Argentine icebreaker, the Almirante Irizar. This represents an exception but not a change to the embargo.

Afghanistan

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom will continue to impose an arms embargo on Afghanistan in line with the EU's Common Position of 17 December 1996. [35501]

Mr. Fatchett: We remain committed to the EU arms embargo against Afghanistan which the UK interprets as covering all goods and technology entered on Part III to schedule 1 to the Export of Goods Order 1994, as amended.

Following consultation with this Department and the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry recently approved a licence for the export of mine clearance equipment for use by the United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Assistance to Afghanistan in its demining operations. The grant of this licence is for humanitarian purposes, and is consistent with the purpose of the embargo.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 19 January 1998, forwarded to him from the Home Office on 4 February, on behalf of Mr. Johnson. [35324]

Mr. Fatchett: A reply was sent to the right hon. Member on 17 March.

Partners in Europe

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors determined which contact points were listed in the Partners in Europe pamphlet, "Resources and Contacts". [32963]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The Department asked the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges to provide details of contact points for the organisations which can provide schools with information and advice; and funding for developing European partnerships and projects.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Persistent Young Offenders

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what date he expects to halve the time from arrest to sentencing for persistent young offenders; what monitoring of timings is undertaken; what representations he has received concerning the definition of persistent young offenders; and if he will make a statement. [34683]

Mr. Michael: Halving the time between arrest and sentence for persistent young offenders is our top law and order priority, and we intend to achieve this objective as soon as possible. We have already encouraged all youth justice agencies to take action within the current statutory framework to tackle unnecessary delays, including establishing fast track arrangements for persistent young offenders.

Ministers from all the relevant Departments joined my right hon. Friend and my right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor to promote this initiative and it is clear that real efforts are being made at a local level to respond. In addition, the Crime and Disorder Bill, currently before Parliament, includes a range of important measures to streamline the system, improve case management and provide for statutory time limits.

Since coming to office, the Government have carried out a survey of persistent young offenders dealt with by the youth justice system in 1996. That survey indicated that in 1996 the average time between arrest and sentence for persistent young offenders was 142 days. The Government are committed to halving that figure to 71 days. To monitor progress towards that pledge, we are ensuring that systems are put in place to produce regular data on the time between arrest and sentence for persistent young offenders. During this month, we are contacting youth justice agencies to find out what progress has been made locally to tackle delays and to establish fast tracking arrangements for persistent young offenders.

In response to the consultation paper "Tackling Delays in the Youth Justice System" we received 48 representations concerning the Government's proposed definition of persistent young offenders. Nine respondents welcomed the definition of persistent young offender. 25 respondents suggested that a range of different definitions of persistent young offender should be used, or that there should be no standard definition at all. Others commented more generally on the proposed definition. The definition is intended primarily for monitoring purposes, and is not intended to exclude others from being fast tracked. Local areas may use their discretion in deciding which additional cases to fast track, including spree offenders and others.

Tobacco

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to prevent the sale of tobacco to those aged under 16 years. [34620]

Mr. Michael: The Government are keen to protect children from the dangers of smoking. A White Paper on tobacco control will be published later this year by the Department of Health, setting out a comprehensive strategy to tackle smoking, particularly among young people.

It is illegal to sell tobacco to a person under the age of 16, whether or not he or she appears to be so. The Children and Young Persons (Protection from Tobacco) Act 1991 places the responsibility on the retailer to take steps to ensure that the individual is aged 16 or over before the sale is made. If in doubt, the retailer should ask for identification. Guidelines were issued to local authorities in 1992 on the application of the Act, including particular types of enforcement activity. Local authority enforcement of the Act is the responsibility of local trading standards officers.

We are monitoring the effectiveness of the Act. In 1996 (the latest year for which figures are available) there were 140 prosecutions of individuals and companies, 119 of which resulted in findings of guilt.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what regulations govern the placing of CCTV cameras on private property such that passage along a public footpath is monitored. [35317]

Mr. Michael: The Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 grants a general planning permission for the installation, alteration or replacement of closed circuit television (CCTV) cameras on shops, flats, houses and other buildings, subject to specified limits on size and numbers. Planning applications are required for development proposals above the limits specified in the Order. Listed building consent may also be required for the installation of a CCTV camera on a listed building.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will allow those asylum applicants whose claims have remained undecided for 10 years or more to remain in the UK exceptionally. [35714]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Whilst each asylum claim is considered on its individual merits, it has been a long-standing practice (since the early 1990s) to consider the grant of exceptional leave, on account of the length of stay here, in those asylum cases where a decision had not been taken seven years after the application was made. There are criteria for considering such cases and the grant of exceptional leave is not an automatic outcome. We will publish the relevant guidance to caseworkers shortly and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Rape

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the law in relation to rape. [33788]

Mr. Michael: The Government keep the law on rape under review to ensure that it is effective in punishing and deterring crime and is fair to victims.

A wide ranging inter-departmental review of the way in which vulnerable and intimidated witnesses are treated by the criminal justice system is currently being conducted. Amongst other things, this review is looking at ways to prevent unrepresented defendants from personally cross-examining victims in rape and other serious sexual offence cases, curbs on cross-examining victims about their previous sexual history and the more widespread use of the power to hear similar fact trials together as well as other measures to assist vulnerable or intimidated witnesses, including victims of rape. The review is nearing completion and we will be considering its recommendations very carefully.

In addition, the Home Office has commissioned a research study to discover what factors influence whether or not a recorded rape leads to a conviction and whether such factors have changed since a similar study of 1985 cases. This arises from concern that despite a significant increase in the number of reported rapes, the proportion of convictions have declined. The final report of this study will be available later this year. The Government will consider whether changes to the law are required in the light of these research findings.

Anti-drugs Campaigns

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1998, Official Report, column 514, for what reasons it was never intended that the Teesside University Criminology Department's research on anti-drugs campaigns should be published. [35289]

Mr. George Howarth: The research was commissioned to inform the development of local prevention activities of the then Newcastle Drug Prevention Team and other local agencies and the report includes the account of interviews which the research team carried out on a confidential basis. I shall, however, write to my hon. Friend with a summary of the report's recommendations.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has evaluated on the extent to which anti-drug campaigns lead to (a) increased and (b) decreased levels of drug use. [35290]

Mr. George Howarth: Emerging evidence from work done by the Home Office Drug Prevention Initiative suggests that information can play an important part in drugs prevention when it is tailored to a specific local audience and linked with other ventures.

The Department of Health contracted the Health Education Authority to carry out a national publicity campaign between 1995 and 1998 to raise awareness of the risks associated with drug misuse. This includes provision for evaluation which should be available towards the end of this year.

Mrs. Beatrice Day

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make a decision following the adjudicator's recommendation in the case of Mrs. Beatrice Day of 24 Garlick Rea, Brixham; and if he will make a statement. [34959]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A decision was made on 17 February 1998. I am now having it reviewed in the light of the hon. Member's representations and will write to him in due course when representations on this matter have been given full and proper consideration.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the hon. Member for Walsall, North in respect of his letter of 16 February regarding a constituent. [35134]

Ms Quin: I replied to my hon. Friend on 16 March 1998.

SCOTLAND

National Year of Reading

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he anticipates that the first payments of £1,000 for the purchase of books under the National Year of Reading will be made to schools in Scotland. [32798]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 3 March 1998]: The policy to which the right hon. Member refers relates to schools in England only. I have made separate arrangements reflecting the circumstances that exist in Scotland. On 8 March I announced that grants totalling £400,000 were being made available to education authorities as part of the Early Intervention Initiative. This will enable the purchase of additional reading materials to help reading in primary schools and boost their supply of books in the approach to the National Year of Reading.

Electoral Arrangements

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the reports that he has received from the Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland arising from the third statutory review of electoral arrangements for local council areas; and when he expects to receive reports for the remaining areas. [34233]

Mr. Macdonald: To date the Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland has submitted reports on two council areas, namely Angus and East Lothian. We expect it to submit reports for all other authorities within the next few months.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he has made of the effect of the use of split-ticket voting in the election for a Scottish Parliament under the provisions of the Scotland Bill on the objectives of Government policy as set out in the White Paper, Scotland's Parliament (Cm 3658); [34582]

(2) what measures he is taking to prevent or discourage split-ticket voting in the elections for the Scottish Parliament in 1999. [34583]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 16 March 1998]: It will be for the electorate to decide how they wish to use their votes in the elections to the Scottish Parliament and it would be pointless to speculate on whether voters may cast their votes for different parties. Ultimately, it is for the political parties to persuade voters to cast both their votes for the same party.

Hospitality

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list planned expenditure on hospitality for April and May, indicating the date, location and purpose of each event. [35125]

Mr. Dewar: The main events planned for April and May are a reception in Edinburgh Castle on 3 April for key overseas delegates attending the Royal College of Nursing International Research Conference in Edinburgh; a reception in Bute House on 7 April to mark the 10th Edinburgh International Science Festival; a reception in Stirling Castle on 16 April for delegates attending a Scottish Office and Department for Education and Employment conference on EU Language Learning; and a reception in Edinburgh Castle on 13 May for delegates attending the Annual Meeting of the Association of Surgeons of Great Britain and Ireland. The total cost of these events is estimated at £7,000. It is not, however, possible to provide a comprehensive estimate of total expenditure on hospitality as some events will not be finalised until nearer the time.

Forestry Commission Land

Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to increase public access to Forestry Commission land; and if he will make a statement on the future of the moratorium on large-scale sales of Forestry Commission land. [35835]

Mr. Macdonald: We have made it clear that we are determined to increase public access to the countryside, including woodlands. As Britain's largest landholder, and as the country's largest single provider of outdoor recreation, the Forestry Commission has an important role to play in this; one of its key objectives is the development of opportunities for woodland recreation.

We are still considering the Commission's future activities as part of its Comprehensive Spending Review. Nevertheless, we have agreed that in the coming year the Commission should offer to buy suitable areas of land where it can provide additional public access and recreation facilities, especially in the National Forest, the Community Forests and the Central Scotland Forest. In addition, we wish to ensure that as many of the Commission's woods as possible are open to the public, and so the Commission will also offer to buy out freeholds where the leases currently restrict access to its existing woods.

The Forestry Commission, like any large landowner, needs to be able both to buy and to sell land in order to manage its estate efficiently and effectively, and to carry out its activities within its budgetary provision.

For the coming year, therefore, while the moratorium on large scale sales of forest land will stay in place, the Commission will be able to sell a small amount of land which is surplus to its requirements. This will include agricultural land, unplantable land, and relatively small and isolated blocks of forest land which do not make a significant contribution to the Commission's objectives. Areas of forest land which are important for public access will not be sold unless an access agreement is in place. The Commission will also be prepared to sell areas for development where this is in the public interest.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the expenditure incurred by the former Dumfries and Galloway Regional Council after severe weather in early 1996, and for Moray Council as a result of flooding in July 1997; and if he will make a statement. [35836]

Mr. Macdonald: I am glad to announce that Dumfries and Galloway Council is eligible for a payment of £136,553 under the Bellwin Scheme. The Scheme was triggered twice in 1996, firstly for severe weather in late December 1995 and early January 1996 for the whole of Scotland, and again in February 1996 for heavy snowfalls in the Dumfries and Galloway region alone. The Council's costs were in clearing main roads of snow to keep key communications open and in decanting motorists to temporary shelter.

I am also pleased to announce that we have decided that Moray Council is eligible for a payment of £623,206 under the Bellwin Scheme. The Scheme was triggered in July 1997 for severe flooding in the Moray area. For the most part this payment will reimburse the council for the costs of providing alternative accommodation for evacuees made homeless by the flooding and for addressing the immediate effects of flood damage to roadways, footpaths and bridges.

Both Councils' claims have been subject to detailed scrutiny.

Health Service Waiting Lists

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to reduce waiting lists in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [35529]

Mr. Galbraith: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on Tuesday 17 March 1998, Official Report, column 1112, that additional funds would be allocated to the National Health Service including £44.5 million in Scotland specifically aimed at tackling the problem of waiting lists.

We shall be allocating £20 million of that money at the beginning of April to Health Boards in Scotland with a request that they should draw up comprehensive plans for tackling waiting lists. The initial priority will be to tackle the number of people waiting for in-patient treatment, but I shall also expect them to look at out-patient referrals.

In order to push forward this work, I shall be appointing a Support Force under the Chairmanship of Mr. Tom Divers, General Manager, Lanarkshire Health Board and including as members Mr. Douglas Harper, Medical Director, Falkirk and District Royal Infirmary NHS Trust; Mrs. Lesley Summerhill, Director of Nursing, Dundee Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust; Dr. Erik Jespersen, General Practitioner, Oban; and Mr. Dermot McKeown, Consultant Anaesthetist, Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS Trust. The Support Force will be asked to review the plans to be submitted by Health Boards, to pursue particular problem areas, to monitor the progress of Health Boards and Trusts towards reducing waiting lists and to identify and disseminate good practice in managing waiting lists wherever possible.

Of the remaining resources, £4.5 million will be retained as moneys to be paid to Trusts which perform well and achieve their targets quickly and efficiently. The money would be available for purchases of equipment and other facilities in line with strategic requirements for the Trust.

The remaining £20 million will be used to fund particular initiatives or resolve particular problems identified by the Support Force which require additional funding, and to influence more strategic change in service delivery to achieve long-term reductions in waiting lists.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Wood Recycling

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what programmes his Department has initiated since 1 May 1997 to explore the opportunities for wood recycling and to broaden the use of wood as a recyclable raw material. [33887]

Angela Eagle: The Government are keen to see an increase in the amount of waste which is recycled, and are exploring measures to increase collection of recyclable materials and to stimulate and develop the market for recycled goods generally. The Construction Directorate of my Department invests around £4.4 million in a programme of research and innovation aimed at improving the environmental performance of the construction industry and the industry's contribution to sustainable development. One of the initiatives in this area is directed at increasing the usage of renewable materials (mainly timber) in construction. As part of the programme my Department has recently started to fund a project in collaboration with industry which aims to encourage the adoption of best practice in wood residue management by the UK timber industry.

Greenhouse Gases

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assumptions the Government have made in their calculations concerning the reduction of greenhouse gases about the growth in air traffic during the next 20 years; and if it is Government policy that other industry sectors shall have to make disproportionate reductions in their greenhouse gas emissions to accommodate the projected increase in air traffic. [34129]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Air traffic is forecast to grow at around 5–6 per cent. per year between 1996 and 2015. The amount of fuel used is expected to increase by about 3–4 per cent.

The Government are developing a balanced package of measures to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases. They expect all sectors, including aviation, to play their part in meeting their climate change targets.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the potential for date-related problems with the Global Positioning Satellite (a) during 1999 and (b) at the turn of the century; how they are being resolved; and if he will make a statement. [34508]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As the Global Positioning System (GPS) is a US military system, date-related problems with it are primarily a matter for the US Department of Defense. The US GPS Joint Program Office has issued advice about 1999 (known as the GPS End of Week (EOW) rollover issue) and Year 2000 date-related issues. The US maintains that there are no problems with the system but the timing mechanism within GPS satellites may cause a problem with some older generation GPS civil receivers. Although manufacturers are aware of the problems and have taken, or are taking, action to remedy them, users are recommended to check with the manufacturer of the equipment that they own or use.

In the UK, as precautionary measures, the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) and the Marine Safety Agency (MSA—as from 1 April 1998 the Maritime and Coastguard Agency) are planning to issue advice to the aviation and maritime communities. The CAA is planning to publish an Airworthiness Notice specifically on the 1999 EOW rollover issue and is considering the dissemination of further advice on the Year 2000 issue. The MSA is planning to publish a Marine Guidance Note on issues relating to the Year 2000 and this will include advice about both GPS date-related issues.

Bus Lanes

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish his Department's evaluation of the Bristol scheme for allowing motorcycles to use bus lanes. [34248]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Transport Research Laboratory undertook a short video survey of the Bristol scheme for the then Department of Transport in 1996. This was of course early in the life of the project. The report of this survey was not published at the time, but I have now asked the Laboratory to make it available. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will undertake a fully monitored experiment to assess the advantages of allowing motorcycles to use bus lanes. [34247]

Ms Glenda Jackson: If a local traffic authority were to come forward with a proposal for such an experiment, my Department would be interested in assisting with the monitoring.

Driving Hours

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what factors he will take into account when assessing the advantages of extending the use of tachographs to (a) drivers and (b) vehicles other than those already covered by regulations; [34334]

(2) if he will assess the advantages of tightening the regulations to limit the number of hours per day that a professional courier may drive a vehicle. [34333]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We shall be considering the practical and legal implications of bringing some or all of the types of vehicle operation currently subject to the United Kingdom national rules on drivers' hours within the scope of the European Union rules. Such a change would require primary legislation and we would consult operators and their employees before making it. Any change would need to strike a reasonable balance between road safety and operational flexibility. Subject to the outcome of any consultation, it is unlikely that we would extend the requirement to fit tachographs to vehicles of less than 3.5 tonnes.

There is also the possibility that European Union proposals to extend limits on working time to the road transport sector will apply to vehicles of less than 3.5 tonnes. The aim will be to ensure that workers are protected against adverse effects on their health and safety caused by working excessively long hours, inadequate rest or disruptive working patterns. We expect an initial proposal on working time in road transport from the European Commission later this year.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is the size of the smallest vehicles that are presently required to use tachographs; [34331]

(2) what regulations presently limit the number of hours per day that a professional courier may drive a vehicle, other than those covered by tachograph regulations. [34332]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The European Union regulations which require the fitting and use of tachographs apply to most vehicles used for the carriage of goods where the maximum permissible gross weight of the vehicle, including any trailer, exceeds 3.5 tonnes. Separate UK national legislation contained in Part VI of the Transport Act 1968, as amended, applies to those categories of goods vehicle which are exempt from the European Union regulations but it does not require the fitting of tachographs.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what penalties apply to employers who require employees to drive small vehicles for an unreasonably long period of time in a 24 hour period. [34335]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Part VI of the Transport Act 1968, as amended, details the infringements and penalties that can be incurred on conviction for a drivers' hours related offence. Where it can be proven that an employer caused or permitted an employee to break the drivers' hours rules, that employer is liable to a maximum fine of £2,500 (level 4).

Rural Railway Stations

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of rural railway stations that closed (a) nationally and (b) in Shropshire for each year between 1979 and 1997. [34270]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We do not have station closure statistics broken down into rural and non-rural categories. However, the table gives the total number of railway stations closed between 1979 and 1997.

Year	Stations closed (nationally)	Stations closed (Shropshire)

Drax Power Station

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent discussions his Department has had with the Environment Agency regarding emissions from the National Power Drax Power Station; and if he will make a statement. [34242]

Mr. Meacher: The Environment Agency has advised my officials that the flue gas desulphurisation ("FGD") equipment at Drax is currently out of action following the discovery of cracks in the FGD fans. As a consequence, National Power has applied to the Environment Agency for variation of its Integrated Pollution Control authorisation to increase the limit on the power station's sulphur dioxide emissions. The Agency is considering the application and has advised my officials that there will be a public consultation upon it, commencing with a public meeting on 19 March.

Train Services (Lancashire)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what undertakings he has received from First Group concerning their future intentions for North Western train services in Lancashire. [34462]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Following the offer by First Group PLC to buy out the other shareholders of Great Western Holdings Ltd, the Franchising Director has secured a package of passenger benefits and investments which include, for the North Western Trains network: £1 million to be spent on additional passenger benefits, following consultation with the local Passenger Transport Executives, passengers' representatives and other interested bodies as to what the money should be spent on; CCTV cameras to be fitted to the 70 new trains North Western Trains are providing as part of their franchise commitments; and £100,000 to be spent on providing wheelchair access at core stations by the time that the new trains are introduced.

British Transport Police

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the contributions made by each of the train operating companies to British Transport Police in each of the last two years and their required level of contribution; and if he will make a statement. [34755]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The payments required from the train operating companies for the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98 to the British Railways Board for the provision of services by the British Transport Police are provided in the table. In 1996–97 the required payments were received. No arrears are expected for 1997–98.

Planning Applications

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will remove the presumption in favour of granting planning applications which is currently enjoyed by applicants to local planning authorities. [34760]

Mr. Caborn: Planning Policy Guidance Note 1, 'General Policy and Principles', explains that

'Owners of land and property properly expect to be able to use or develop their land as they judge best unless the consequences for the environment or the community would be unacceptable.'

The Planning system seeks to strike the right balance between the interests of those wishing to undertake development and the wider community through the 'plan led' system. Under section 54A of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990, planning applications must be decided in accordance with development plans produced by local authorities, unless material considerations indicate otherwise. We have no proposals to change this presumption in favour of the development plan.

Sustainable Development Unit

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the work to date of his Department's Sustainable Development Unit. [34990]

Angela Eagle: The Sustainable Development Unit was set up within ETR in July 1997. It provides advice on sustainable development matters to all parts of DETR and to other Departments. It provides support for the network of Green Ministers and is the focal point for Government contact with the Environmental Audit Committee. It has taken the lead in the consultation, launched on 4 February, which will lead to a new sustainable development strategy; in producing, jointly with the Local Government Association and the Local Government Management Board, the guidance "Sustainable Local Communities for the 21st century", published on 14 January; in preparing Policy Guidance on Environmental Appraisal, to be published very shortly; in responding to the third annual report of the Government Panel on Sustainable Development (published on 18 December) and the second annual report of the UK Round Table on Sustainable Development published on 23 February; and in negotiating for the UK on the UNECE Convention on Access to Information, Public Participation and Access to Justice in Environmental Matters.

Public Carriage Office

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what criteria, with reference to advertising experience, are applied to the appointment of Public Carriage Office employees. [34947]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The appointment of Public Carriage Office staff is an administrative matter for the Assistant Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police to whom the Secretary of State's London taxi licensing function has been delegated.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what appeals process is available on decisions taken by the Public Carriage Office not to allow advertisements on licensed taxi vehicles. [34946]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Public Carriage Office will review any decisions when requested to do so by the advertiser or advertising agency concerned.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Public Carriage Office's policy on licensed taxi advertising in London; and if he will review this policy. [34945]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Public Carriage Office consider applications for advertisements against the criteria set out in their publication "Advertising On Licensed London Taxis. Consolidated Guidelines". I have no plans to review the matter.

Bus Services

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will assess the impact of wage levels in the bus industry in London on the provision of bus services; and if he will make a statement. [34948]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No. The provision of bus services in London is the responsibility of London Transport.

Child Pedestrian Deaths

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the growth rate of traffic on child pedestrian death rates. [34040]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The death rate for children aged 0–15 has gone down by 66 per cent. between 1981–1985 and 1996. Over the same period the volume of traffic on the road has increased by 38 per cent. Although children are now walking less, there appears to have been an overall reduction in the rate of child pedestrian accidents in that period.

South West Water

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what contributions have been or are being made by his Department towards (a) the water authority responsibilities of the Council of the Isles of Scilly and (b) the operation of South West Water. [34792]

Angela Eagle: The Water Industry Act 1991 provides for the Secretary of State to pay grant to water and sewerage undertakers, in certain limited circumstances, in respect of the provision of their services. In 1997–98 grants totalling £196,963 have been made to South West Water to help safeguard their water supplies and sewerage services and to help defray the expenses of providing first time water and sewerage services in rural areas. The Department does not make contributions to the Council of the Isles of Scilly, but does make available Supplementary Credit Approvals enabling them to finance capital expenditure on their water and sewerage functions. The Department has issued an Approval of £41,500 in the current financial year.

Bus Routes (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the number of bus routes in Shropshire for each year since 1979. [34869]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department does not collect this information in the form requested.

Focus Groups

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much his Department plans to spend on focus groups. [34978]

Angela Eagle: The Department does not make a forward plan for focus groups. Focus groups are commissioned within the Department to research specific issues as the need arises.

Hedgerows

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate his Department has made of the number of miles of hedgerow removed by farmers since the enactment of the Hedgerows Regulations 1997. [34938]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is not available. We are considering, in consultation with representatives of local government, what information should be collected centrally in relation to the operation of the Hedgerows Regulations 1997.

A survey of hedgerow stock will be undertaken this year as part of the Countryside Survey 2000. This will provide a basis for analysing changes which have occurred since the last comparable survey, which covered the years 1990 to 1993.

British Rail Land

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the number of rail projects that have been affected by the sale of British Rail land since 1 May. [35029]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 March 1998]: While a number of promoters of schemes have lobbied the Department in respect of planned rail projects using surplus land that British Rail has put up for sale, we are not aware of any case in which a firm proposal has been prevented solely by the sale of that land.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what level of capital receipts is anticipated in 1997–98 from the sale of land held by British Rail; what was the estimated level of receipts in respect of 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [35030]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 March 1998]: The level of capital receipts anticipated in 1997–98 from the sale of land held by British Rail is £75 million. The estimated budget at the beginning of the year was £78 million.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from (a) Railtrack, (b) English, Welsh and Scottish Railways and (c) train operating companies in respect of his decision to continue to dispose of land held by British Rail. [35026]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 March 1998]: A number of representations have been received at both Ministerial and official level from Railtrack and from English, Welsh and Scottish Railways (EWS) in respect of the decision to continue to dispose of land held by British Rail. EWS have confirmed that they accept the principle that British Rail land and property should be offered on the open market, and Railtrack are working closely with British Rail to identify individual sites which may be relevant for their future development of the network.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy to generate a level of income from sales of British Rail land commensurate with the plans established before May 1997. [35271]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Yes. The receipts from the disposal of BR Land are part of the expenditure programme of the previous administration, to which the Government are committed.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what responses he has received to his discussion paper on the Single Regeneration Budget; what impact they will have on regeneration policy and possible changes to the structure of the Single Regeneration Budget; and if he will make a statement. [35091]

Angela Eagle: We have received around 150 comments on the discussion paper "Regeneration Programmes—the Way Forward" from public, private and voluntary groups. This paper was published following the launch of the Comprehensive Spending Review of Regeneration and the comments are being considered alongside the spending review to inform the future development of regeneration policy and programmes.

North Wales Main Line

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on plans for improvement of the North Wales main line. [34317]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 March 1998]: Virgin Trains has completed a study into the viability of electrification of the Crewe-Chester route. The findings are currently being reviewed and Virgin will submit a report to the Franchising Director by the end of March. To provide better connections with fast ferries at Holyhead, Virgin's Summer 1998 timetable will include re-timed North Wales services.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action the Civil Aviation Authority is taking following reports on incidents involving electronic equipment interfering with flight equipment. [34751]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 March 1998]: The Civil Aviation Authority requires all aircraft systems and equipment to have a high degree of immunity from interference. In the reported cases of possible interference from 'passenger carry on electronic devices' (PEDs) it has not been possible to reproduce or substantiate the reported effects. While these incidents are more of a nuisance than a hazard, they are taken seriously by CAA. The CAA has consequently issued specific information and instructions to aircraft operators regarding the use of mobile phones and PEDs in Aeronautical Information Circulars and a Notice to Air Operator Certificate Holders. However, it remains the responsibility of the aircraft operator to ensure that any equipment carried on or stowed in the aircraft cannot impair the airworthiness of the aircraft.

In addition, the CAA has initiated research through the Defence Evaluation Research Agency's Electro Magnetic Compatibility Club. This research is comparing the levels and frequencies of the signals produced by PEDs with aircraft systems and the equipment interference immunity and susceptibility standards with the aim of establishing whether any coupling to aircraft systems could occur. While the research is not yet complete, the indications are that PEDs cannot interfere with flight safety and management systems but there may be a theoretical possibility of indirect coupling to VHF radio equipment.

Coastguard Stations

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 1998, Official Report, columns 643–45, on coastguard stations, for what reasons watch levels at (i) Aberdeen and (ii) Stornoway coastguard stations have been persistently below assessed levels; and what measures he has put in place to address the problem. [34753]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 March 1998]: The watch levels set out in "Focus for Change" are suggested and are not therefore prescriptive. Watch complements which fall below the suggested levels through staff vacancies and unplanned absences are allowed to prevail subject to operational risk assessment by local management. Risk assessment are kept under review and contingency arrangements are in place at co-ordination centres should the need arise to increase watch levels. Both stations have been in the process of recruiting staff. At Aberdeen new Coastguard Watch Assistants (CWAs) are currently being trained; at Stornoway two serving CWAs have been selected for promotion to Watch Officer and the resultant CWA posts will be filled through local recruitment. These measures will address vacancy issues at these stations.

Computer System (Swanwick)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the reports produced following internal audits of the Swanwick NERC computer system since the start of the project; [34733]

(2) if he will place in the Library details of the outstanding 5 per cent. of bugs that cannot be rectified in the new en-route centre computer system at Swanwick. [34732]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 March 1998]: No. A number of internal audits of the NERC software systems have been undertaken by National Air Traffic Services Ltd. (NATS) and by the prime contractors developing the Air Traffic Management systems. Those reports contain information that is commercially sensitive, and therefore it would not be appropriate to place copies in the Library.

NATS are confident that there are no bugs within the NERC software systems that cannot be rectified. There is no question of NATS management bringing the new centre into operation until they have full confidence in the safety and integrity of the Air Traffic Management systems.

Counterfeit Aircraft Parts

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many occasions UK-registered aircraft have been found to contain counterfeit parts in each of the last five years; and if he will list the airlines involved. [34752]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 March 1998]: None.

Visual Information (Public Transport)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it a requirement in law to provide visual information inside and outside buses, tubes and coaches to assist deaf people travelling; and for what reasons he is proposing a voluntary code. [34840]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 March 1998]: We will shortly be publishing the draft Disability Discrimination Act Rail Vehicle Accessibility Regulations which will require all new trains, including those used on the London Underground, to be fitted with internal and external visual information systems.

We are still consulting on our proposals for Buses and Coaches but, subject to the views expressed in response to the consultation I propose that the draft regulations for PSVs should require all new buses and coaches used on scheduled services to be fitted with internal and external visual information systems.

Agencies

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the (a) location of, (b) maintenance costs of, (c) number of staff employed at and (d) salary bill for the headquarters of (i) the Driving Standards Agency, (ii) the DVLA, (iii) the Highways Agency, (iv) the Coastguard Agency, (v) the Marine Safety Agency, (vi) the Vehicle Certification Agency, (vii) OPRAF, (viii) the Office of the Rail Regulator and (ix) the Vehicle Inspectorate. [34780]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 March 1998]: The details for the respective headquarters are set out in the table. The figures relate to the 1996–97 financial year.

Organisation	Location	Maintenance costs (£000)	Number of staff employed	Salary bill (£000)
Driving Standards Agency	Stanley House, 56 Talbot Street, Nottingham NG1 5GU	89	184	3,782

Traffic Area Offices

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are (a) the number of staff employed by, (b) the salary bill for and (c) the administrative costs of each traffic area office in (i) London, (ii) the South East of England and (iii) Scotland. [34778]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 March 1998]: In the current financial year the average number of staff employed is 44 at the South Eastern and Metropolitan Traffic Area Office (which includes the London area) and 37 at the Scottish Traffic Area Office. From outturn figures available it is estimated that the salary bill and administrative costs of these offices this financial year will be as follows:

Area office	Salary bill	Administrative costs
South Eastern and Metropolitan Traffic	730,100	325,420
Scottish Traffic	662,000	302,409

Road Traffic

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons the publication of the six working papers referred to in the publication National Road Traffic Forecasts (Great Britain) 1997, has been delayed; and when they will be published. [35304]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Publication of the six working papers has been delayed, the team responsible for their preparation having been redeployed temporarily to assist in the current review of transport policy, the outcome of which will be published in the White Paper.

I understand that four of the six working papers will be available by the end of March, and that the remaining two will be available at end April at the latest.

BSE

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research he has evaluated into the presence of the BSE prion in water samples. [33770]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency is responsible for the regulation of waste disposal in England and Wales. Last year the Environment Agency published a number of quantitative assessments of the risks to public health from BSE via environmental pathways. This included the risk of the infective agent being ingested via drinking water. It was concluded that the risk to human health was very low, negligible compared to other risks in daily life. The reports, which were published on 25 June 1997 incorporated expert advice from the Government's independent advisory committee, the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC), were commissioned by the Agency and undertaken by Det Norse Veritas (DNV), an independent specialist risk assessment consultancy.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the cost to public funds to date of the Terminal 5 Inquiry. [35307]

Mr. Caborn: The estimated cost to date of the Terminal 5 Inquiry to the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, including its agencies, is £8 million. It is estimated that the local authorities involved in the Inquiry have spent about £7 million so far.

Planning Inspectorate

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to visit the headquarters of the Planning Inspectorate. [35308]

Mr. Caborn: I will be visiting the Planning Inspectorate on Wednesday 17 June 1998.

Planning Gain

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards planning gain. [35306]

Mr. Caborn: The policy on planning gain is set out in DOE Circular 1/97. This states that, where appropriate, local planning authorities may seek to enter into planning obligations with a developer regarding the use of the land concerned or other land or buildings, provided all the policy tests are met.

In accordance with the Modernising Planning initiative I announced in January, seminars will be held shortly with a number of stakeholders in the planning system to encourage debate on the current use of planning obligations.

Planning (call-ins)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many call-ins he is currently considering. [35305]

Mr. Caborn: There are currently 31 call-ins under consideration following receipt of the Inspector's report in each case.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish the names of the local authorities to be included in the programme for housing transfers by councils in 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [35690]

Ms Armstrong: I am today announcing the names of the twenty three authorities which will be able to proceed, on a voluntary basis and subject to the approval of their tenants, with proposals to carry out 28 transfers of all or part of their housing stock to Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) in 1998/99. The programme will involve over 85,000 dwellings in large scale voluntary transfers, generating capital receipts of over £482 million. Sixteen of the transfers will be supported by Estates Renewal Challenge Funding.

This reflects the Government's commitment to a continuing programme of transfers as a means of generating private finance to repair and improve the condition of social housing.

The authorities who have successfully gained a place on the programme, together with the intended recipient RSL, are as follows:

(a) disposals by Allerdale Borough Council of not more than 3,899 dwelling-houses to Derwent and Solway Housing Association and not more than 1,002 dwelling-houses on the Salterbeck estate to Impact Housing Association;

(b) a disposal by Bath and North East Somerset Council of not more than 10,200 dwelling-houses to a registered social landlord;

(c) a disposal by Birmingham City Council of not more than 2,643 dwelling-houses on the Central Area estate to a registered social landlord;

(d) a disposal by Bradford City Council of not more than 598 dwelling-houses on the Thorpe Edge estate to a registered social landlord;

(e) a disposal by East Lindsey District Council of not more than 5,179 dwelling-houses to a registered social landlord;

(f) a disposal by London Borough of Greenwich of not more than 1,246 dwelling-houses on the Charlton Triangle estate to a registered social landlord;

(g) disposals by London Borough of Hackney of not more than 1,157 dwelling-houses on the Morningside estate to Sanctuary Housing, not more than 661 dwelling-houses on the Haggerston estate to Metropolitan Housing Trust and Community Housing Association and not more than 1,000 dwelling-houses on the Upper Clapton estate to Clapton Community Consortium;

(h) a disposal by London Borough of Hammersmith and Fulham of not more than 703 dwelling-houses on the Old Oak estate to Family Housing Association;

(i) a disposal by London Borough of Lambeth of not more than 681 dwellings on the Lansdowne Green estate to South London Family Housing Association;

(j) disposals by Liverpool City Council of not more than 800 dwelling-houses on the Pinehurst estate to CDS Housing;

(k) disposals by Manchester City Council of not more than 1,272 dwelling-houses on the Darnhill estate to Guiness Trust and not more than 6,900 dwelling-houses on the East Wythenshawe estate to Willow Part Trust;

(l) a disposal by Rother District Council of not more than 3,180 dwelling-houses to Rother Homes, a subsidiary of South London Family Housing Association;

(m) a disposal by St. Helens Borough Council of not more than 789 dwelling-houses on the Wargrave estate to Wargrave Community Housing Association;

(n) a disposal by South Hams District Council of not more than 3,212 dwelling-houses to a registered social landlord;

(o) a disposal by South Somerset District Council of not more than 9,133 dwelling-houses to a registered social landlord;

(p) a disposal by Tameside Metropolitan Borough Council of not more than 904 dwelling-houses on the West Ashton estate to West Ashton Pioneer Homes;

(q) a disposal by Tewkesbury Borough Council of not more than 3,105 dwelling-houses to Severn Vale Housing Society;

(r) a disposal by the London Borough of Tower Hamlets of not more than 2,887 dwelling-houses on the Poplar estates to Poplar Housing and Regeneration Community Association; and not more than 2,322 dwelling-houses on the Cityside estates to Cityside Housing and Regeneration Community Association;

(s) a disposal by West Devon Borough Council of not more than 1,439 dwelling-houses to West Devon Homes;

(t) a disposal by Wirral Metropolitan Borough Council of not more than 1,108 dwelling-houses of the Leasowe estate to Leasowe Community Homes, a subsidiary of Liver Housing Association;

(u) a disposal by Wokingham Borough Council of not more than 3,101 dwelling-houses to a registered social landlord;

(v) a disposal by Worthing Borough Council of not more than 2,579 dwelling-houses to a registered social landlord;

(w) a disposal by Wrekin District Council of not more than 13,495 dwelling-houses to a registered social landlord.

City Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has for a replacement for City Challenge. [35310]

Angela Eagle: The Government will be considering in the light of the Regeneration Comprehensive Spending Review and the consultation on their paper 'Regeneration—the Way Forward', issued in November 1997, how to take forward the development of regeneration policy. In practice, the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) Challenge Fund has already carried forward the principles of City Challenge. The results of the fourth round of the SRB Challenge Fund are expected to be announced shortly.

Local Government Settlement

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many representations he has received from local councils concerning the last local government settlement. [35309]

Ms Armstrong: The Department received 406 written representations within the deadline for responses. I, and other Ministers at the Department, also met delegations from 95 local authorities and one special interest group during the consultation period. We then met the Local Government Association and the Association of London Government.

HEALTH

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many persons are suffering from relapsing-remitting MS in each health authority area in England; and what number and percentage have been prescribed beta interferon for the last 12 months for which figures are available. [34460]

Mr. Boateng: Information on the number of people suffering from relapsing-remitting multiple sclerosis is not available. Information available is for in-patient treatment and is shown in the table and is based on finished consultant episodes, which represent the number of episodes of care under individual consultants. It is possible that a patient has more than one episode.

Information on the number of people receiving treatment with beta-interferon is not available. 806 prescriptions for the medicine were dispensed by community pharmacists in England during 1996, the latest whole year for which data are available. This does not include prescriptions prescribed and also dispensed in hospitals.

Sports Injuries

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of persons injured in the last 12 months as a result of pursuing a hazardous sport; and what was the cost to the NHS. [34458]

Ms Jowell: Estimates from the leisure accident database, administered by the Department of Trade and Industry, suggest that there were 801,499 sporting injuries in 1996. The estimate was based on a sample of 18 hospitals in the United Kingdom. However, it is not possible to distinguish those resulting from "hazardous" sports from others. No estimate has been made of the cost of sporting accidents to the NHS. Accidents, generally, cost the National Health Service around £1.2 billion per annum.

Mental Health Act

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the provisions of the Mental Health Act 1983. [34625]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for South-West Surrey (Mrs. Bottomley) on 4 March 1998, Official Report, column 676.

Tobacco

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when representatives from the Police, HM Customs and Excise and the National Weights and Measures Laboratory and Ministers from his Department last met to discuss the issue of tobacco imported from Belgium and illegally resold in the United Kingdom. [34702]

Ms Jowell: There have been no such meetings.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last discussed with his EU counterparts the issue of health warnings on cigarettes sold in other EU member states being printed in English as well as the other major European languages; and what plans he has to raise it at the next such meeting. [34698]

Ms Jowell: No discussion of this issue has taken place. There are no plans to raise it at the next meeting of European Union health ministers.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of NHS prescriptions issued are exempt from any charge to the patient; [34750]

(2) what has been the income from prescription charges in each year since 1979; [34749]

(3) what would have been the annual increase in prescription charges each year since 1979 if they had been increased in line with inflation; what the proposed increase for the current year on that basis would be; and what the proposed new charge would be. [34748]

Mr. Milburn: The annual income from prescription charges, and the charge if it had been increased in line with inflation in each year from 1979 is in the table. In 1996–97, 86 per cent. of prescription items dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors[1] in England were free of charge.

[1] The analysis is based on a 1 in 20 sample of all prescriptions submitted to the Prescription Pricing Authority by community pharmacists and appliance contractors. Items dispensed by dispensing doctors and personal administration prescriptions are not included in the sample. (Dispensing doctor prescriptions are not analysed into exempt, non exempt, or other categories; personally administered items are free of charge). Items dispensed to holders of prepayment certificates are not counted as free in this calculation.

Medical Specialists

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will amend the European Specialist Medical Qualifications Order 1995, to permit experienced and qualified doctors with Irish specialist qualifications to gain access to the Specialist Register. [34942]

Mr. Milburn: Extending the transitional provisions in Article 12 of the European Specialist Medical Qualifications Order 1995 to doctors holding qualifications awarded in the Irish Republic would be difficult to justify as it would amount to discrimination against European Economic Area (EEA) nationals holding other EEA qualifications.

The effect of extending the transitional provisions in the Order to include all EEA qualifications would be to allow a large number of doctors holding EEA qualifications which do not meet the requirements of the European Commission Medical Directive (93/16/EEC) to gain access to specialist practice in the United Kingdom. This would represent a significant inroad into the principles upon which the Order was drafted, and could potentially compromise the standard of clinical practice in the UK.

General Practitioners (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of GPs in Shropshire for each year since 1979. [34868]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is shown in the table:

Netherton Park Assessment Centre

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will institute an inquiry into the management of Netherton Park Assessment Centre in Northumberland. [35067]

Mr. Boateng: No. It is, in the first instance, a matter for Northumberland County Council to decide what action they propose to take in the light of complaints they have received about the management of the Centre. We will monitor the position carefully.

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on revising guidance on the control of methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus in hospitals. [35146]

Ms Jowell: Clinical guidelines on the management of patients affected by methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus, published in 1990 and commended by the Department to the National Health Service in 1994, have recently been revised by the professional working group that originally produced them. It is expected that the final version of the revised guidelines will be published in the Journal of Hospital Infection in the next few months. The Department will then consider whether they should subsequently be issued to the NHS as Department of Health guidance.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he expects the first results from the pilot system of national surveillance from the 40 hospitals taking part on the control of methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus; [35144]

(2) when the reporting of (a) bloodstream infections and (b) wound infections of patients suffering from methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus was introduced; and whether he will make a statement. [35145]

Ms Jowell: The Nosocomial Infection National Surveillance Scheme (NINSS) is a new national surveillance system for hospital acquired infection. It is based at the Public Health Laboratory Service. NINSS will consist of a number of modules, each relating to a particular type of infection and/or group of patients.

Data from the hospitals are collected using a standard methodology and are collated and analysed by the Nosocomial Infection Surveillance Unit. Each hospital is given information about its own results together with anonymised aggregate data from the other participating hospitals. Individual results remain confidential to the particular hospital but once sufficient data have been accumulated to permit meaningful interpretation, the aggregated data will be published.

Two modules—blood stream infection and wound infections following certain surgical procedures—have so far been developed. These were successfully piloted in 1996–97 by 16 hospitals for bloodstream infections and by 34 hospitals for surgical site infection. Initial data have been fed back to these hospitals. Over 100 hospitals have now taken part in these surveillance schemes.

Data collected by NINSS include information about the causative organism of infection (where this has been isolated by the hospital's own laboratory) and its sensitivity or resistance to different types of antibiotics, including, in the case of staphylococcus aureus, sensitivity to methicillin.

Neuroleptic Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for the latest year for which figures are available, how many NHS prescriptions have been made (a) to all people and (b) to people aged over 60 years for each of the following neuroleptic drugs (1) chloropromaine (largactil), (2) thioridazine (melleril), (3) haloperidol (seranace, haldol, dozic), (4) promazine (sparine), (5) flupenthixol (depixol, fluanxol), (6) olanzapine (zyprexa), (7) pericyazine (neulactil), (8) risperidone (risperdol), (9) sulpiride (dolmatil, sulpitil), (10) trifluoperazine (stelazine) and (11) clozapine (clozaril); and if he will estimate the cost to the NHS of prescribing each of them. [33902]

Mr. Milburn: [holding answer 12 March 1998]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish (a) the number of places on each of his Department's non-departmental public bodies, (b) the number of places that are currently unfilled on each non-departmental public body, (c) the total number of members that have resigned since 1 May 1997, (d) the total number that have retired since 1 May 1997, (e) the total number that have not had their contracts renewed since 1 May 1997, (f) the total number that have remained in place since 1 May 1997 and (g) the total number that have been appointed since 1 May 1997. [35273]

Mr. Hoon: The following is a table showing the requested information.

NDPBs: Non-judicial appointments

[1] Many of the NDPBs do not have a specific number of places. The figure given is the number normally looked for.

[2] Not on contracts, generally interpreted as not re-appointed.

[3] This does not include the members of the various committees of the Board, who are not appointed by the Lord Chancellor.

[4] The appointment of one of whom is suspended until 30 October 1998.

Law Commission

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what were the results of the quinquennial review of the Law Commission. [35693]

Mr. Hoon: A review was begun during the first part of 1997, and was completed, following the General Election, in July of that year. It concluded that a managed programme of law reform remained an essential part of a modern democracy's responsibilities and that the Law Commission remained a vital part of that process.

In the course of the review the need for a number of changes of approach to the initiation and management of law reform projects was identified.

An action plan based on the review's conclusions, agreed between the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Law Commission and approved by the Lord Chancellor in December last, is now in large part complete. The action plan has today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what decisions he has reached on the unimplemented Law Commission reports within the responsibility of his Department. [35694]

Mr. Hoon: As previously indicated, the Government intend to bring forward legislation on "Delegation by Individual Trustees" (Law Com No 220) and the first part of "Restitution for Mistake of Law: Ultra Vires Public Authority Receipts and Payments Law" (Com No 227) when time permits. It will also bring forward legislation on "Privity of Contract: Contracts for the Benefit of Third Parties" (Law Com No 242), again when time permits. The Government's Green Paper on mental incapacity includes proposals in "Mental Incapacity" (Law Com No 231); the consultation period ends on 31 March.

The Government have decided not to implement "Transfer of Land—the Law of Positive and Restrictive Covenants" (Law Com No 127), but will ask the Law Commission to consider, in the context of its other priorities, how future developments in property law might affect the recommendations in this report. The Government have also decided not to implement the remaining part of "Overreaching: Beneficiaries in Occupation" (Law Com No 188), or "Land Mortgages" (Law Com No 204), as these proposals have not been supported sufficiently widely. However, we will invite the Law Commission to reconsider their proposals in "Law Com No 204" after they have finished their current work on land registration.

Decisions on other reports will, where possible, be reached by Easter and will be announced. All Law Commission reports, even though some remain unimplemented, play a valuable role in the clarification and development of the law. The Government are most grateful to the Law Commission for the extensive contribution it makes to producing a modern and effective legal framework for England and Wales.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Surveys

Mr. Forth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list each information, promotional, marketing and opinion survey contract, with its value, concluded by her Department and its agencies for the years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–2001 and (e) 2001–2002. [32012]

Mrs. Beckett: Information of these types of contracts is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The above information does not include contracts let by the Department's Executive Agencies, and I have asked the Chief Executive to reply separately to this question.

Letter from Michael Osborne to Mr. Eric Forth, dated March 1998:

I have been asked to reply on behalf of The Insolvency Service Executive Agency to your question regarding information promotional, marketing and opinion survey contracts tabled on 26 February.

I can advise you that The Insolvency Service has concluded no such contracts for the period 1997–2002.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Eric Forth, dated March 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply, in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS), to your question about expenditure on information contracts.

Expenditure on information contracts in the financial year 1997–98 has so far amounted to £51,980.00.

This figure is made up of the following three contracts:

B & B Press, to the value of £49,030, for the design and printing of information leaflets for Industrial Tribunal users;

Unicorn Press, to the value of £1,605, for customer information leaflets eg, Introduction to the Industrial Tribunals; and Trafford Print, to the value of £1345, for the printing of Citizen Charter Statements for the Industrial Tribunals and the Employment Appeal Tribunal (EAT) and EAT Appeal leaflets.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Eric Forth, dated March 1998:

CONTRACTS FOR INFORMATION, PROMOTIONAL, MARKETING AND OPINION SURVEYS

Margaret Beckett, President of the Board of Trade, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about contracts let by the Radiocommunications Agency for information, promotional, marketing and opinion surveys.

2. The Agency has let two contracts. The first with MORI Ltd for a series of customer satisfaction surveys (01/11/94–30/03/98) valued at £151,400, and the second with Meeting Deadlines Ltd for a series of regional seminars and road shows (01/01/97–31/12/99) valued at £164,660.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Eric Forth, dated March 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding information, promotional, marketing and opinion survey contracts.

For 1997/98, the value of contracts of an information, promotional, marketing or opinion survey nature amounts to £323k to date. Major contributors to this total are:

Central Office of Information £107k

Golley Slater £97k

Zenith Media £21k

Martin Hopkins £13k

Research & Marketing £12k

The remaining £73k is accounted for by small contracts with 27 different organisations.

There is no firm forward commitment to such contracts by Companies House for the years 1998/99 et seq.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Eric Forth, dated March 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about information, promotional, marketing and opinion survey contracts.

NWML currently has no plans to enter into any contract of this kind in the years in question.

Letter from J. C. Octon to Mr. Eric Forth, dated March 1998:

In the absence of the Chief Executive on official business, I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade on information, promotional, marketing and opinion survey contracts.

The contracts concluded by the Patent Office for the years 1997/98 to 2001/01 are:

i. a media relations contract with Peter Prowse Associates. This contract comes to an end in March 1998 and has in this financial year cost £65,000;

ii. a contract with Advance Multimedia Ltd for support of our marketing operations. This contract comes to an end in May 1998 and has in this financial year cost £95,000;

iii. a contract with Nimtech Ltd for the organisation of workshops and seminars on intellectual property rights. This contract comes to an end in May 1998 and has in this financial year cost £70,000;

iv. a contract with Mid Wales Litho Ltd for the printing and supply of promotional literature. This contract, which runs until April 2000, has cost £150,000 in this financial year and is expected to cost £175,000 in the years 1998–99 and 1999–2000.

The media relations contract is currently being retendered. The contracts with Nimtech Ltd and Advance Multimedia Ltd are to be retendered as a single contract later in the year.

Civil Servants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the number and percentage of civil servants in her Department, at each grade including and above higher executive officer who (a) attended university and (b) attended either Oxford or Cambridge University. [33074]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 March 1998]: I have asked Chief Executives of the Department's Agencies to reply to my hon. Friend separately.

For the headquarters area of the Department, excluding Agencies and the Government Offices, accurate data are not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply to the above Parliamentary Question with information about the Radiocommunications Agency.

From the information retained on staff in the radiocommunications Agency, the estimated number and percentage who attended university is as follows:

	Number	Percentage
HEO	9	21
HTTO/HPTO	34	48
SEO	2	12
STTO/SPTO	18	48
Grade 7 and equivalent	13	42
Grade 6 and equivalent	4	80
Senior Civil Service	5	71

Of the above staff, one Grade 7 equivalent and one Senior Civil Servant attended Cambridge University and one Senior Civil Servant attended Oxford University.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding the number of civil servants who attended university.

Companies House personnel records show that 52 staff, at all levels, attended university, of which one attended Cambridge. This is approximately 5% of total staff numbers.

Records are not maintained by grades and to identify those in former grades HEO and above could only be undertaken at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

The number of ETS Civil Servants at each DTI Band at HEO equivalent or above who (a) attended university and (b) attended Oxford or Cambridge is shown below:

Band B HEO Level: 2(6.3%) out of 32

Band C SEO+G7: 7(50%) out of 14

SCS: 1(100%) out of 1

Band B and C: Nil out of 36

SCS: 1(100%) out of 1.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the number of staff at each grade at and above Higher Executive Officer in The Insolvency Service who have (a) attended university, and (b) attended either Oxford or Cambridge University.

I regret that the information held by The Service on its staff is not maintained in a form which would provide the details you have asked for except at disproportionate cost.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question about the number of Patent Office staff at HEO (B3) level and above who attended university and attended either Oxford or Cambridge University. The information relates to grades that fall within the Office's grading structure (B3-D1) and excludes staff in the Senior Civil Service and its analogues.

Staff who attended university:

B3: 12 (21%)

C1: 24 (56%)

C2: 124 (94%)

D1: 2 (67%)

Staff gaining degrees at Oxford or Cambridge University:

B3: 1 (2%)

C1: 2 (5%)

C2: 10 (8%).

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the numbers of civil servants at each grade including and above higher executive officer who have attended university.

The information is not easily available in the form requested and could only be retrieved at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the number of civil servants in her Department, at each grade, who received their schooling in the independent school sector. [33075]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 March 1998]: I have asked the Chief Executives of the Department's Agencies to reply to my hon. Friend separately.

For the headquarters area of the Department, excluding Agencies and the Government Offices, the information requested is not readily available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply to the above Parliamentary Question with information about the Radiocommunications Agency.

From the information retained on staff in the Radiocommunications Agency, it is not possible to identify how many received their schooling in the independent school sector.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding the number of civil servants who received schooling in the independent school sector.

No information on schooling is maintained on Companies House personnel database and to derive this information otherwise could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your Question of 4 March 1998 to the President of the Board of Trade concerning Civil Servants who were educated in the Independent School sector.

ETS could obtain this information only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the number of staff in the Insolvency Service who received their schooling in the independent school sector.

I regret that the information held by the Service on its staff is not maintained in a form which would provide the details you have asked for except at disproportionate cost.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question about the number of Patent Office staff that received their schooling in the independent school sector. I am sorry to inform you that the information is not readily available.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the numbers of civil servants who received schooling in the independent school sector.

The information is not easily available in the form requested and could be retrieved only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate for each of the last five years, the number and percentage of new civil servants in her Department who attended Oxford or Cambridge University, broken down into the number of entrants joining the Department from (a) the regular Civil Service entrance procedure, (b) the fast stream and (c) the private sector. [33076]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 March 1998]: The table shows the estimated number of new civil servants in DTI headquarters who attended Oxford or Cambridge university through regular or fast stream entry procedures. Statistics on those with previous private sector experience are not readily available (there would be a disproportionate cost in producing the information).

			of which
Stream	Number of new civil servants	Number and percentage attending Oxford/ Cambridge	non fast stream	fast
1993	91	11 (12%)	4	7
1994	54	7 (13%)	0	7
1995	65	10 (15%)	1	9
1996	56	10 (18%)	1	9
1997	34	9 (26%)	1	8
Total	300	47 (16%)	7	40

I have asked the Chief Executives of the Department's Agencies to reply to my hon. Friend separately.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply to the above Parliamentary Question with information about the Radiocommunications Agency.

From the information retained on staff in the Radiocommunications Agency, there are no staff who fall into these categories.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding the number of new civil servants who attended Oxford or Cambridge University joining the Department from a) the regular Civil Service entrance procedure, b) the fast stream or c) the private sector.

In response, over the last five years only one person having attended Cambridge University has joined Companies House. The individual concerned was from the private sector.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about estimating the number and percentage of new staff in The Insolvency Service who attended Oxford or Cambridge University and joined The Service from (a) the regular Civil Service entrance procedure, (b) the fast stream and (c) the private sector.

I regret that the information held by The Service on its staff is not maintained in a form which would provide the details you have asked for except at disproportionate cost. I should explain, however, that all new entrants to The Service are recruited on merit in fair and open competition in accordance with the Civil Service Commissioners' Recruitment Code. The Service does not directly recruit staff for the fast stream.

Letter from J. C. Octon to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

In the absence of the Comptroller General on official business, I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about the recent recruitment of graduates from Oxford and Cambridge Universities. You asked for an estimate over the last five years of the number and percentage of new civil servants who attended Oxford or Cambridge University broken down into the number of entrants joining the Patent Office from a) the regular civil service entrance procedure, b) the fast stream and c) the private sector.

Over the past five years we have recruited from Oxford or Cambridge the following numbers:

1996: 3(14%)

1997: 2(4%)

All were recruited through regular civil service procedures.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about an estimate for each of the last five years, of the number and percentage of new civil servants in the Agency who attended Oxford or Cambridge University.

The information is not easily available in the form requested and could be retrieved only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Martin Wilson to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated March 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply, in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS), to your question about new civil servants who obtained degrees from Oxford or Cambridge.

ETS was established as an executive agency within the Department of Trade and Industry on 1 April 1997. Since that date we recruited 63 staff to permanent posts in administrative grades in the Agency. All staff were recruited in line with Office of Public Service principles of openness, fairness and on the basis of merit. None was recruited to a post requiring a university degree. We are not aware of any new recruits who attended Oxford or Cambridge Universities. There would be a disproportionate cost in researching this information in full.

Previous to our establishment as an Agency, recruitment was under the authority of the Department and we do not have separate records for that period.

Compact Discs

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received regarding the retail price of compact discs. [34492]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My Department has received 7 complaints about the retail price of compact discs since 1 May 1997.

These have been forwarded to the Director General of Fair Trading who is responsible for considering allegations of abuse of monopoly position, anti-competitive behaviour and restrictive trade practices. The Director General can act if he considers that a particular price is the result of anti-competitive practices.

Cars

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what action she intends to take to remove trade barriers which prevent United Kingdom car buyers purchasing right-hand drive cars elsewhere in the European Union; [34771]

(2) what action she is taking to require car manufacturers to make available new right-hand drive cars to United Kingdom citizens elsewhere in the European Union; [34772]

(3) if she will use the UK's presidency of the European Union to ensure that new car buyers from the UK are given the right to buy a car in any country within the Union. [34773]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 18 March 1998]: I am determined to ensure that there are not such barriers to UK consumers. EC competition law prohibits manufacturers from restricting the freedom of consumers to obtain new right-hand drive cars from whichever authorised dealer they choose within the European Community.

In January the European Commission, which enforces EC competition law, fined Volkswagen ecu 102 million (about £67 million) for prohibiting its dealers in Italy from selling cars to buyers from Germany and Austria. DTI officials are currently discussing with the Commission what the implications of this case are for UK consumers wishing to buy right-hand drive cars elsewhere in the European Community.

Kenyan Security Units

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what training has been provided for Kenyan security units in (a) internal control and (b) internal security by the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [28840]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for International Development fund one training project for police officers which aims to improve management skills and human rights awareness of senior officers. They intend to evaluate the impact of this project. No other assistance for the police is currently planned. No training in riot control has been provided to the Kenyan police or armed forces by the British Government.

We have expressed our concern over the excessive use of force by Kenyan police in dispersing crowds taking part in protests last year.

The only military training that we offer the Kenyan Armed Forces is focused on raising professional standards for tasks such as peace keeping duties throughout Africa.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish (a) the number of places on each of his Department's non-departmental public bodies, (b) the number of places that are currently unfilled on each non-departmental public body, (c) the total number of members that have resigned since 1 May 1997, (d) the total number that have retired since 1 May 1997, (e) the total number that have not had their contracts renewed since 1 May 1997, (f) the total number that have remained in place since 1 May 1997 and (g) the total number that have been appointed since 1 May 1997.[35277]

Dr. Howells: The numbers of (a) places and (b) vacancies on the Boards of the Non-Departmental Bodies sponsored by this Department are as follows:

NDPB	Places (a)	Current vacancies (b)
Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research (CILT)	13	0
Construction Industry Training Board (CITB)	18	0
Education Assets Board (EAB)	11	0

The total number of (c) resignations from the Boards of these bodies since 1 May 1997 is 3. The total number of (d) retirements from the Boards of these bodies since 1 May 1997 is 8. The total number of (d) members of the Boards of these bodies who have not been re-appointed since 1 May 1997 is 19 (some of these were not eligible for further re-appointment under the guidance issued by the Office for the Commissioner for Public Appointments (OCPA)). The total number of (e) Board members of these bodies who have remained in post since 1 May 1997 is 128. The total number of (g) appointments of these bodies since 1 May 1997 is 63, of which 15 have been re-appointments.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 23 January on behalf of Mr. Lee.[35325]

Dr. Howells: A letter was dispatched to the right hon. Member on 17 March.

School Achievement Targets

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) for what reasons, in setting achievement targets for primary and secondary schools, he uses data based on pupils' eligibility for, or take-up of, free school meals; [35330]

(2) what reasons, in setting achievement targets for primary and secondary schools, he does not use data based on pupils' prior achievement. [35331]

Mr. Byers: It is for schools themselves, rather than for the Secretary of State, to set achievement targets. In doing so they will draw on relevant data, including socio-economic characteristics of their intake and the prior attainment of their pupils. School targets should take account of the 1997 benchmark information and other comparative data set out in the Performance and Assessment reports recently provided to each school. School targets should also take account of the national targets for English and Mathematics at age 11.

Coventry Intermediate Labour Market Company

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from the Coventry Intermediate Labour Market Company. [34181]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 16 March 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not received any representations from Coventry Intermediate Labour Market Company.

New Deal

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the New Deal personal advisers to be trained by April 1998 will be recruited (a) from within the Employment Service and (b) externally. [32292]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Derek Foster, dated 19 March 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the recruitment and training of New Deal Personal Advisers. This is an operational issue which falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Employment Service.

The Employment Service has recruited, through internal means, almost 2,000 New Deal Personal Advisers who will be fully trained by April 1998. We have not ourselves recruited externally.

However, we will in all cases be working with partner organisations in the delivery of the Gateway, all of whom will be deploying their own staff on these programmes.

Within the Employment Service, New Deal Personal Advisers have been carefully selected from amongst the most experienced members of our current advisory teams. All of them either hold an NVQ III in guidance or will be working towards this qualification.

I hope this is helpful.

Student Grants

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many undergraduate students are in receipt of the maximum maintenance grants. [33800]

Dr. Howells: In academic year 1995–96, the latest year for which information is available, 350,000 mandatory award holders from England and Wales received a full maintenance grant.

Further Education

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many further education places he expects to be offered to participants in the Government's New Deal schemes following his decision to make available extra money to allow further education colleges to recruit students in the New Deal group above their targets. [33579]

Dr. Howells: The £6.05 million made available by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State may benefit up to 12,000 unemployed people in England who might otherwise be unable to access further education.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans he has in respect of the balance of funding between employers and the public purse in respect of further education provided through franchised arrangements with partnership organisations; [33577]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of increasing to 50 per cent. the contribution made by partnership organisations to franchised schemes managed by further education colleges on the subject availability of those schemes and the number of places provided on them. [33578]

Dr. Howells: We are seeking a fairer balance between state and employer contributions to the cost of employer-led provision in further education, against the principle that employers should be meeting at least half the cost. Last November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State asked the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) to make arrangements to secure next year an extra £20 million in employer contributions. In response, for 1998–99, the FEFC has decided to reduce by one third the rate of funding available for college provision delivered for an employer, normally on the employer's premises, either by direct or collaborative provision, in the expectation that colleges will seek a greater contribution from employers. There will still be significant public funding for such provision. We have had no evidence that this change will have an impact on subject availability.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what allowance he has made in the annual funding of further education colleges to accommodate the 500,000 extra students planned to enter further education by 2002. [33576]

Dr. Howells: We are taking forward our plans to expand further education opportunities in the context of the Department's Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the financial surplus or deficit of further education institutions in England at the end of the current academic year; and what were the figures for (a) 1995, (b) 1992 and (c) 1987. [33583]

Dr. Howells: The Further Education Funding Council's current estimate of the expected net deficit of the further education sector this academic year (1997–98) is £3 million.

The net deficit incurred by the further education sector in 1994–95 was £93 million. It is not possible to give figures for 1992 and 1987 on a comparable basis.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the total number of staff who left further education colleges during 1996–97 through (a) redundancy, (b) retirement and (c) premature retirement within categories (i) teaching staff, (ii) support staff and (iii) management staff. [33606]

Dr. Howells: Information on the number of redundancies in further education colleges is not available. The number of retirements during financial year 1996–97 from further education colleges is set out in the table.

Type of retirement	Total
Age	460
Infirmity	710
Premature	3,630
Total	4,800

Note:
Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

These figures are produced from the Teachers' Pension Scheme: they include some management staff, but no support staff.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Office Cost Allowance

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council, pursuant to her answer of 16 March 1998, Official Report, column 433, if she will list the total amount paid out in office costs allowances for 1992–93 to hon. Members who retired at the 1992 Dissolution or were defeated at the 1992 General Election, indicating the average sum per hon. Member. [35224]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: No—the information available is not held in a form that would permit provision of the details relating to defeated and retiring Members only.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council, pursuant to her answer of 16 March 1998, Official Report, column 433, on office costs allowances for 1997–98, if she will list the total amount paid out to hon. Members who retired at the 1997 Dissolution or were defeated at the 1997 General Election, indicating the average sum per hon. Member. [35225]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: During 1997–98 the total amount of Office Costs Allowance paid out to those Members who left the House at the last Election was £2,923,827.48. Because of the cash accounting requirements this figure includes amounts relating to the previous allowance year. The average sum paid to each hon. and right hon. Member was £11,602.49.

DEFENCE

NATO Enlargement

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the leading estimates of the costs of NATO enlargement. [35688]

Mr. George Robertson: I have today placed in the Library of the House a paper prepared by the Ministry of Defence which describes various previous studies of the costs of NATO enlargement and explains why all NATO countries accept the official NATO assessment as a realistic estimate.

Gulf War

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the results of his Department's investigation of the incident in which suspected Iraqi CW agent was found in Kuwait after the end of the Gulf War; and if he will make a statement. [35687]

Dr. Reid: I am today making public the results of a joint UK-US review of what has become known as the "Sabahiyah" incident, in which a large tank of liquid, initially thought to contain Iraqi mustard agent, was found in Kuwait after the end of the Gulf conflict. The review has concluded that the tank did not contain chemical warfare agent, but rather inhibited red fuming nitric acid to fuel Iraqi Silkworm anti-ship missiles.

This is the first of three reviews of events during the Gulf conflict which we pledged to carry out last July. Preparation of the case narrative, which is also being published today in the US, has involved close and detailed cooperation between the MOD and the US Department of Defense. A copy of the case narrative will be placed in the Library of the House.

US Visiting Forces

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 490, how many of his Department's personnel are based at (i) Abbey Wood, (ii) RAF Alconbury, Molesworth and Upwood, (iii) RAF Bentley Priory, (iv) Boscombe Down, (v) RAF Bracknell, (vi) RAF Brampton, (vii) RAF Brize Norton, (viii) RAF Coltishall, (ix) RAF Cranwell, (x) RAF Croughton, (xi) RAF Digby, (xii) RAF Daws Hill, Hythe and West Ruislip, (xiii) Eastcote, (xiv) RAF Fairford, (xv) RAF Farnborough, (xvi) RAF Fylingdales, (xvii) RAF High Wycombe, (xviii) RAF Honnington, (xix) RAF Lakenheath and RAF Feltwell, (xx) RAF Leuchars, (xxi) Landwater, (xxii) RAF Lyneham, (xxiii) RAF Morham, (xxiv) RAF Menwith Hill, (xxv) RAF Mildenhall, (xxvi) RAF Oakhanger, (xxvii) RAF Spadeadam, (xxviii) RAF Uxbridge, (xxix) RAF Valley, (xxx) RAF Waddington, (xxxi) Waterbeach, (xxxii) RAF Wittering, (xxxiii) RAF Wyton, (xxxiv) Ipswich and (xxxv) London. [33574]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 9 March 1998]: The numbers of MoD Personnel based at the requested locations are given in the table. Data are at 1 February 1998.

All MoD personnel within London and other selected locations as at 1 February 1998

[1] Personnel within these areas, although within London, are not counted within the London total, to avoid double counting

[2] Further to my answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker), 2 March 1998, Official Report, column 490, I regret that Landwater was erroneously typed as Loudwater.

Green Transport Co-ordinator

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he appointed a Green Transport co-ordinator; and on what date the appointment took effect. [32476]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 March 1998]: We have not appointed a Green Transport co-ordinator. The formulation of Green Transport Plans will be co-ordinated by my Department's environmental committee and their proposals submitted to me as the Department's Green Minister.

Salisbury Plain

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the annual quarry returns for each of the past five years relating to organisations, licensed or unlicensed, which have been permitted to take birds and animals at Salisbury Plain Army Field Training Centre. [34849]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the clubs and organisations, civilian and military, which are licensed to use (a) Schedule 3 land and (b) other land at Salisbury Plain Army Field Training Centre. [34851]

Dr. Reid: The civilian and military clubs and organisations licensed to use land at Salisbury Plain Training Area are as follows:

Joint Service Publications

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of Joint Service Publication No. 362. [34850]

Mr. Spellar: A copy of JSP 362 Defence Lands Handbook will be placed in the Library of the House.

Smart Procurement

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he intends to publish a White Paper on Smart Procurement before the end of March; and if he will make a statement. [35199]

Mr. George Robertson: The Smart Procurement initiative is part of the Strategic Defence Review. I envisage publishing the Review White Paper in the first part of this year.

Anti-personnel Mines

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Her Majesty's Government will have destroyed all HB876 anti-personnel mines within two years of signing the Ottawa Treaty. [34848]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. and learned Gentleman and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Trident

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the development and deployment of a lower-yield variant of the Trident warhead for the sub-strategic role. [35198]

Mr. George Robertson: The UK has some flexibility in the choice of yield for the warheads on its Trident missiles.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Sinn Fein

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance her Department gave to the delegation of Sinn Fein representatives at the ministerial meeting on 5 November 1997 concerning the protection of individuals who have become vulnerable following the loss or theft of personal files held by the security forces; and what steps have been taken (a) to assess the number of individuals currently at risk, (b) to provide greater access to information for individuals at risk and (c) to prevent breaches of security in the future. [32809]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 March 1998]: I met a delegation from Sinn Fein on 5 November, following which I wrote to Mr. Adams. It would not be appropriate to disclose the details of either the discussion or my subsequent letter. However, my hon. Friend may wish to consider making contact with Mr. Adams personally.

In answer to part (c) of his question I can advise my hon. Friend that instructions have been issued to the RUC by way of a Code Regulation.

Institute of Public Health

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors led to the all-Ireland Institute of Public Health being sited in Dublin; how many jobs are being funded there from UK public funds; at what annual cost; and if she will make a statement. [34616]

Mr. Worthington: The key factor influencing the initial location of the Institute of Public Health in Ireland was the opportunity to work in close proximity to the Royal College of Physicians of Ireland which will provide suitable accommodation and essential support for the new body. It is anticipated that the Institute will have seven staff and that the contribution to core funding from UK public funds will be approximately £100,000 per annum.

The Institute will be required to demonstrate that its activities in support of existing public health bodies benefit people throughout both Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. The location of the Institute in the long-term will be guided by the needs of the body in carrying out its work programme effectively.

Sex Abuse

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will increase funding for the counselling of sex abuse survivors; and if she will make a statement on the waiting times presently experienced for such counselling at the Nexus Institute. [34617]

Mr. Worthington: The Department of Health and Social Services does not allocate funds to Health and Social Services Boards specifically for the purposes of counselling victims of sexual abuse. The amounts to be committed for such purposes are matters for the Boards to decide within the context of their overall resource allocations and their priorities for the provision of services within their areas.

The lengths of the waiting lists for counselling by the NEXUS Institute are a matter of concern to the Department. However, a new counsellor training programme was launched by NEXUS in 1997 and it is hoped that this will have a significant impact later this year in reducing the waiting lists.

Restorative Justice

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish the papers on restorative justice that have been the subject of discussion in the talks process. [35691]

Marjorie Mowlam: I have arranged for "Restorative Justice and a Partnership against Crime", based on Government papers tabled for the multi-party talks, to be placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Incomes

10. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evaluation his Department has made of the impact of the current levels of the green pound on farms incomes. [33762]

Dr. John Cunningham: The Government recognise the impact of currency movements on agriculture, but it is difficult to assess these effects precisely. UK farmers receive a substantial degree of protection from the impact of currency movements on their receipts under the CAP through the EU agrimonetary system.

Welsh Livestock Industry

18. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representation he has received from farming representatives in Wales about the crisis in the Welsh livestock industry. [33772]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend met hon. Members representing Welsh constituencies as recently as 19 February to discuss the state of the livestock sector in the Principality.

Sheep Prices

19. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he is prepared to take to alleviate the fall in prices for sheep in the United Kingdom. [33774]

Mr. Rooker: Government action in this sector is constrained by the rules of the CAP regime for sheepmeat. In recognition of the depressed state of the sheepmeat market, I recently instructed my officials to ask the Commission to open tenders for Private Storage Aid in the UK. The Commission responded promptly to our request, fixing a flat-rate Private Storage Aid of 1,400 ecu per tonne for a maximum of 3,000 tonnes of sheepmeat to be placed into storage in the Republic of Ireland and the UK.

Farmers

20. Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the percentage of farmers who will leave agricultural production in the next five years. [33775]

Mr. Morley: I have not made such an estimate. The numbers of farmers leaving agricultural production will depend on the decisions they take in the light of economic circumstances.

Beef on the Bone

22. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on enforcement of the regulations banning the sale of beef on the bone. [33778]

Mr. Rooker: The Government believe that the Regulations are enforceable in accordance with existing food safety and consumer protection enforcement procedures.

Beef Export Ban

23. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made on lifting the export ban on British Beef. [33779]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friend the Member for Selby (Mr. Grogan) earlier today.

Urban Farms

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what support his Department gives to urban farms. [33758]

Mr. Morley: Urban farms have a role based more on education than production. The Department gives no specific support to farms simply because they are situated in an urban area.

Organic Farming

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met organic farming groups to discuss the future of organic farming. [33777]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend last met individuals concerned with organic farming on 9 February. I met the Board of the UK Register of Organic Food Standards today.

Cattle Cull

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made with the selective cull of cattle; and if he will make a statement. [35686]

Mr. Rooker: In Great Britain, we have contacted all the herds in which BSE cases were born and sought to identify animals which were exposed to the same feed as these cases. Where these animals have been sold off the farm of origin, we have tried to trace and locate them. Not surprisingly, given the age of the animals, we have found that about 156,000 animals have already been slaughtered, including those taken under the Over Thirty Months Scheme. But under the selective cull we have identified and slaughtered about 66,000 animals to date. A further 10,000 animals have been traced but not yet slaughtered, including a number for which the owner has the option to offer them but has not so far done so.

In addition, in Northern Ireland all the 1,461 animals to be taken under the cull have been slaughtered. As a result, the total to date for the United Kingdom is over 67,000. All these animals attract the special rates of compensation payable under this scheme.

It is now estimated that the total number slaughtered under the selective cull will be about 80,000–85,000. We are determined to finish the cull as quickly as we can and are continuing to treat it as a high priority. The last stages will focus on tracing animals which have moved from their natal herd. This is a time-consuming and difficult task, made more difficult by the lack of the computerised cattle tracing system which we are now developing. Progress on the cull will inevitably become slower, as increasingly often it is single animals that have to be tracked down. However we expect to complete the whole work by the autumn.

The selective cull has been an enormous task. Farmers themselves have made a substantial contribution. It has been an unwelcome and for many a distressing task. We are grateful for their co-operation and their recognition that this has been an essential step in fulfilling the Florence preconditions.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many counties in the South West of England he has visited since 1 May 1997. [32064]

Dr. John Cunningham: I have not visited the South West. However, my noble Friend Lord Donoughue, the Parliamentary Secretary, has specific responsibility for the MAFF South West region and he has visited Devon twice and Cornwall once since 1 May 1997. He hopes to visit both again in the forthcoming months. In addition, my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary has made the same number of visits to Devon and Cornwall since 1 May 1997.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Randall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many meetings have been requested with his Department's Ministers by (a) Labour and (b) Conservative hon. Members; and how many meetings have been granted in each category. [31298]

Dr. John Cunningham: I and my colleagues receive many requests for meetings from individual, and groups of, hon. Members, about numerous issues, many of which cut across party boundaries. To seek to identify those requests on the basis of party allegiance would be misleading and would serve no useful purpose. However, I can confirm that I and my Ministerial team have held meetings with hon. Members from both the Government and the majority of Opposition parties, including the Conservative Party.

Central Science Laboratory

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the individual estimates his Department has made of the financial and personnel impact of relocating Norwich-based scientific staff of the Central Science Laboratory to York. [33985]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 11 March 1998]: No decision has been taken regarding the future location of the Norwich-based staff of the Central Science Laboratory. In considering this matter, current best estimates indicate that the relocation costs involved would be £2.8m and efficiency savings resulting from the move would amount to £1.5m per annum. Eligible staff would then be offered a full relocation package in accordance with Civil Service rules and assistance would be provided for non-mobile staff not relocating.

Food Standards Agency

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions his Department held with (a) the Engineering Council and (b) the Institution of Agricultural Engineers prior to the publication of the White Paper on the Food Standards Agency (Cm 3830); and if he will make a statement. [35039]

Mr. Rooker: The Department held no discussions with either organisation prior to the publication of the White Paper 'The Food Standards Agency: A Force for Change'. The Engineering Council has, however, commented on the White Paper on behalf of the engineering profession (including the Institution of Agricultural Engineers). Their views will be carefully considered, along with all other responses to this consultation.

Anthrax

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has evaluated into anthrax, separately identifying that relating to Gruinard Island. [33773]

Mr. Rooker: Research funded by the Department and published last year evaluated the public health risks from pigs killed following an outbreak of anthrax infection. The Department has also gained information on decontamination of land following the successful project carried out by the Ministry of Defence on Gruinard Island.

Beef Farmers

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much agrimonetary compensation was paid to beef farmers between 1979 and 1997. [33765]

Dr. John Cunningham: None.

Common Fisheries Policy

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his objectives for reform of the Common Fisheries Policy. [33757]

Mr. Morley: The Government are pursuing a wide-ranging agenda of improvements to the Common Fisheries Policy. Our priorities include making the CFP a more effective instrument for conservation, improving community wide enforcement and introducing a greater regional dimension into decision-making.

Departmental Assets

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to make better use of his Department's assets in accordance with the guidelines set out by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 24 November 1997 by generating receipts from commercial activity and developing relationships with the private sector to bring in necessary skills and expertise. [35135]

Mr. Rooker: The guidelines to which my hon. Friend refers puts the onus on Departments to maximise the value they secure from the assets they retain. The Executive Agencies of the Ministry undertake commercial activities where appropriate, and along with the rest of the Department will continue to seek new possible opportunities in the market. The operating, commercial and legal aspects will require careful consideration, along with the need to ensure that the independence of those undertaking regulatory functions is not compromised.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to dispose of surplus assets of his Department in accordance with guidelines set out by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 24 November 1997. [35136]

Mr. Morley: In accordance with HM Treasury guidelines, over the next three years my Department aims to dispose of as many as possible of those assets in the National Asset Register which are or will be identified as surplus.

WALES

Local Government

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will publish his proposals for modernising local government in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [35834]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have today placed in the Library of the House copies of the first two consultation papers in a series inviting views on the options for modernising local government in Wales.

The first paper sets the broad policy in the context of Wales and the Assembly. The second, on local democracy and community leadership, makes proposals for developing new ways in which councils can listen to their local communities and involve them in their decisions for devising new ways of working, for strengthening councils' roles as community leaders and for modernising local electoral arrangements.

Later papers in the series will deal with best value, aspects of the local government finance system and a new ethical framework for local government.

Responses to the consultation exercise will be drawn on to prepare a White Paper on Local Government in Wales, which will be published in the summer.

National Assembly

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the comparative costs of the bids for accommodating the National Assembly for Wales. [33892]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have already placed a brief summary of the local authority bids for accommodating the National Assembly for Wales in the Library of the House. Once negotiations for the site of the Assembly are complete I intend to place a brief summary of the remaining bids in the Library of the House.

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to celebrate the millennium in Wales; and at what estimated cost. [34509]

Mr. Ron Davies: The celebrations of the Millennium in Wales, as for other parts of the UK, will be co-ordinated by the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC). My Department will work closely with NMEC and in particular with the office which they intend to open in Cardiff within the next month. The amount of lottery funding to be devoted to the celebrations in Wales will be announced soon: this will be supplemented by the sponsorship funding which NMEC intends to raise.

Hospitality

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list planned expenditure on hospitality for April and May, indicating the date, location and purpose of each event. [35122]

Mr. Ron Davies: It is not possible to provide a comprehensive estimate for total expenditure on Ministerial hospitality as the majority of events and meetings will not be finalised until nearer the time.

However, while there are currently no major events planned for April and May, I do plan to host a meeting of the Central Local Partnership on Wednesday 8 April at the Cabinet Office.

Rural Schools

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in relation to small schools in rural areas. [34871]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Montgomeryshire (Mr. Öpik) on 18 March 1998, Official Report, column 655.

Telecommunications

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps his Department is taking to ensure that all rural communities in Wales obtain the benefit of high-quality telecommunication services including ISDN. [34801]

Mr. Hain: The provision of telecommunications is a matter for the infrastructure companies. However, the wider provision of ISDN and digital services to rural communities should become a practical and cost-effective reality in the relatively near future through the use of radio fixed access technology and the roll-out of more comprehensive digital mobile networks. In addition, support from the European Regional Development Fund is being made available to assist the development of advanced services in parts of rural Wales. I will continue to press for Wales to benefit from high grade telecommunications links.

Public Bodies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish (a) the number of places on each of his Department's non-departmental public bodies, (b) the number of places that are currently unfilled on each non-departmental public body, (c) the total number of members that have resigned since 1 May 1997, (d) the total number that have retired since 1 May 1997, (e) the total number that have not had their contracts renewed since 1 May 1997, (f) the total number that have remained in place since 1 May 1997 and (g) the total number that have been appointed since 1 May 1997. [35283]

Mr. Ron Davies: My department does not gather centrally precise data on the number of seats and vacancies on non-departmental public bodies since many of them have some flexibility in the total number of members. Neither does it hold central data on whether members have retired, resigned or not been reappointed. Information on the public appointments which I make in Wales is collated and published quarterly. The December edition, a copy of which is in the library of the House, shows that 622 of those currently serving on public bodies were appointed before 1 May 1997 and the remaining 90 were appointed subsequently.

Tram Scheme (Llandudno)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) which signatories authorised the bid by Conwy County Borough Council for Government funding for its proposed tram scheme in Llandudno; [34841]

(2) how much funding his Department has made available for Conwy County Borough Council's proposed tram scheme in Llandudno; and if he will make a statement; [34842]

(3) what measures he has taken to ensure that the Government grant to Conwy County Borough Council for the purpose of establishing a tram scheme in Llandudno has not been allocated to another local authority scheme; [34843]

(4) if he will establish which organisations have made a financial contribution towards the proposed tram scheme in Llandudno; and if he will make a statement; [34844]

(5) under which Government scheme his Department supported the proposed Conwy County Borough Council bid for a tram scheme in Llandudno. [34845]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Tuesday 17 March 1998, Official Report, column 550.

Crickhowell House

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1998, Official Report, columns 459–60, if he will estimate the cost to WHCSA reserves of the void office space at Crickhowell House. [35336]

Mr. Ron Davies: The cost of WHCSA reserves of empty space at Crickhowell House, including rent, reduced and other associated costs, is estimated at £1,005,000 per year.

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if the defects period pertaining to his lease of Crickhowell House remains in operation; and if he will make a statement. [35338]

Mr. Ron Davies: The defects liability period expires on 31 March 1998. Discussions are taking place with the landlord regarding an extension.

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1998, Official Report, columns 459–60, if privity of contract applies to his lease and to sub-leases of Crickhowell House; and if he will make a statement. [35339]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Secretary of State for Wales being party to the lease, I am presently advised that I would retain privity of contract in the event of the leases for Crickhowell House being assigned or sub-let.

Civil Servants

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what grades of civil servants have been responsible for negotiating the potential sites or buildings for the National Assembly for Wales; and if the same civil servants were responsible for negotiating the lease of Crickhowell House. [35335]

Mr. Ron Davies: A range of civil servants, from Permanent Secretary to junior management grades, have been involved in the siting of the Assembly. One of these officials had some involvement in the process of acquisition of Crickhowell House, but not in the direct lease negotiations.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1998, Official Report, columns 459–60, what payments have been made by Associated British Ports to Cardiff Bay Development Corporation under the development agreement; if he will give the dates of such payments; and if he will make a statement on future payments under the development agreement for which Associated British Ports would be liable. [35337]

Mr. Ron Davies: Payment details are an operational matter for the Corporation and I have asked the Chief Executive to reply. A copy of his reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what allowance he has made in setting the budget of the Cardiff Bay Development Corporation for the (a) present year and (b) 1998–99, of expected income from Associated British Ports under the development agreement. [35334]

Mr. Ron Davies: Total estimated income receipts from various sources included in the budget for 1997–98 was around £13 million. The budget figure for 1998–99 has yet to be agreed. Details of receipts from Associated British Ports under the development agreement with the Corporation are operational matters for the Corporation and I have asked the Chief Executive to reply. A copy of his reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales under what authority rental guarantees were given by Cardiff Bay Development Corporation to Associated British Ports for the Scott Harbour office development; and what is the maximum public financial liability under such guarantees. [35328]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Scott Harbour rental agreement with a maximum financial liability of £1.4 million was approved by the Department and the Treasury in May 1995. This liability does not extend beyond the lifetime of the Corporation.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Public Bodies

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the bodies within the responsibility of her Department currently required by legislation to lay a report before Parliament. [33563]

Mr. Field [holding answer 9 March 1998]: There are three bodies who are required by legislation to lay a report before Parliament. These are the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority, the Pensions Compensation Board and Social Security Advisory Committee.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will publish (a) the number of places on each of her Department's non-departmental public bodies, (b) the number of places that are currently unfilled on each non-departmental public body, (c) the total number of members that have resigned since 1 May 1997, (d) the total number that have retired since 1 May 1997, (e) the total number that have not had their contracts renewed since 1 May 1997, (f) the total number that have remained in place since 1 May 1997 and (g) the total number that have been appointed since 1 May 1997. [35286]

Mr. Field: The information is set out in the table using the headings (a) to (g) as set out in the question.

[1] Legislation requires that CACWP should comprise of not less than 12 War Pensions Committee Chairmen and 1 war disabled pensioner. Currently there are 22 Members excluding ex-officio members and a Departmental official.
[2] There is no distinction between members of CACWP who have retired or resigned as members are generally over retirement age. One Member has died since 1 May 1997.
[3] Members of CACWP have no formal contracts.
[4] There are no prescribed maximum or optimum numbers of Tribunal Chairmen and Members. Numbers are maintained at levels which are considered appropriate in view of current and predicted work-loads and sitting-patterns.
[5] There are currently no significant shortages of Tribunal Chairmen and Members.
[6] Figures at (c) and (d) have been compiled by interrogating a number of separate databases which are not identically configured. It is not possible to distinguish if some Tribunal Chairmen and Members have resigned or retired.
[7] Members of the Tribunals are not employed under contracts of employment. They are appointed for set periods, at the expiry of which are considered for re-appointment. Figures of those re-appointed since 1 May 1997 are not readily available.
[8] Legislation requires that DLAAB should comprise 1 Chairman and between 11 and 20 Members. Currently there is 1 Chairman and 18 Members.
[9] As DLAAB do not have a set number of places members are not recruited for a particular vacancy.
[10] Legislation does not provide for an exact number of IIAC places, it is for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to decide how many members are appointed. Currently there are 15 Members.
[11] Members of IIAC do not have formal contracts.
[12] Legislation requires that OPRA should comprise 1 Chairman and not less than 1 Chairman and 6 Members. Currently there is 1 Chairman and 8 Members.
[13] It is not proposed to recruit above the current OPRA membership of 9.
[14] There is no distinction between members of WPCs who have retired or resigned as members are generally over retirement age. The information given at (c) does not take account of any deaths.
[15] Members of WPCs have no formal contracts.
[16] The WNC has 50 member organisations, each of which is represented by a senior woman, who is nominated by the organisation which they represent. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no responsibility for appointing member organisations or their representatives. As changes in representative are determined by the individual member organisations no records are held by this Department.
[17] Reappointments.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) on what date the Contributions Agency decided not to pursue arrears of national insurance contributions on allowances paid to Crown employees serving overseas from 1975; and if this decision was approved by Ministers; [35058]

(2) on what date advice was received by her Department that arrears of national insurance contributions on allowances of Crown employees serving overseas should be waived; and by what means this decision has been implemented; [35196]

(3) if he will make a statement on the number of cases and departments involved in respect of the waiving of arrears of national insurance contributions relating to allowances of Crown employees. [35197]

Mr. Denham: Regulations (SI 1997/820) came into force on 6 April 1997, amending regulations 19(1) (payments to be disregarded) of the Contributions Regulations 1979 by adding a new disregard in respect of allowances which are not taxable income by virtue of Section 319 of the Income and Taxes Act 1988 and similar allowances paid to those in the service of Commonwealth War Graves Commission and the British Council.

In a written answer to the hon. Member for South Dorset (Mr. Bruce), 18 March 1997, Official Report, column 572, the previous Government announced their decision to make this and other changes. This brought the treatment of overseas allowances for crown servants under national insurance legislation into line with their tax treatment, which had remained unchanged since 1943, and into line with the understanding of the legislation the Government had held previously. Ministers of the day decided that the Contributions Agency should not pursue arrears.

From the information available from the Departments concerned it is not possible to establish the number of cases involved. In the course of assisting the National Audit Office with its Report on the National Insurance Fund Account 1996–97 (HC 465) the Department, from the information available to it about the amounts paid in the form of these allowances, estimated that arrears of £530 million had not been collected over the period since 1975. The large majority of such payments had been made to service personnel and members of the foreign service by the Ministry of Defence and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The collection of arrears would have involved a considerable administrative cost and produced no additional Government revenue.

Pensions

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would have been the estimated cost to public funds in each of the financial years (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–2001 and (d) 2001–2002 if contracted-out salary-related pension scheme and contracted-out money purchase pension schemes had been compensated for the abolition of the dividend tax credit at the same rate as appropriate personal pensions. [34696]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

No estimates have been carried out for the tax year 1998–99 as the rebates could not be altered before April 1999.

Additional estimated amount of revenue forgone from the national insurance fund should the rebate in respect of contracted out salary-related schemes be adjusted to take account of the changes to tax credits on advance corporation tax

Year	£ million
1999–2000	225
2000–2001	250
2001–2002	250

Note:
This assumes an annual real rate of investment return in excess of earnings of 2 per cent., the same as that used for calculating the rebate levels for appropriate personal pensions from April 1999.

Additional estimated amount of revenue forgone from the national insurance fund should the recently announced rebates in respect of contracted out money purchase schemes be adjusted to take account of the changes to tax credits on advance corporation tax

1999–2000	5
2000–2001	5
2001–2002	5

Note:
This assumes an annual real rate of investment return in excess of earnings of 2 per cent.

No estimates have been carried out for the tax year 1998–99 as the rebates could not be altered before April 1999.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to reply to the three questions tabled by the hon. Member for West Chelmsford for named day answer on 2 March on the New Deal for Lone Parents. [35226]

Mr. Field: I refer the hon. Member to my written answer on Thursday 19 March 1998.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when she expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 22 December 1997 on behalf of Mrs. Baldock; [35322]

(2) when she expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 19 January on behalf of Mrs. Ebbage; [35320]

(3) when she expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 26 January on behalf of Mrs. Brooks; [35323]

(4) when she expects to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire of 21 January on behalf of Mrs. Lindgren. [35321]

Ms Harman: Replies were sent to the right hon. Member's letters on behalf of Mrs. Baldock, Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Lindgren on 16 March 1998. A reply to the right hon. Member's letter on behalf of Mrs. Ebbage was sent on 18 March 1998.

Lone Parents

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many of the 431 lone parents who gained employment through the New Deal between 23 October and 30 November 1997 are now in receipt of income support and have no earnings; [33349]

(2) how many of the 151 lone parents who gained employment through the New Deal between 1 and 31 December 1997 are now in receipt of income support and have no earnings; [33350]

(3) how many of the 98 lone parents who gained employment through the New Deal between 1 and 31 January are now in receipt of income support and have no earnings. [33351]

Mr. Field [holding answer 9 March 1998]: It is not possible to use the data from the New Deal for Lone Parents to draw conclusions about the lone parents' exit rate from employment because the data sample is small, and provides only a snapshot of lone parents in short-term work. It is also not possible to draw comparisons between the exit rates of these lone parents and that of different groups in society based on this information. However, analysis and comparison of exit rates will be made when the New Deal for Lone Parents is evaluated by the independent Social and Community Planning Research, which will report in 1999.

The number of lone parents who gained employment through the New Deal for Lone Parents between 23 October and 30 November 1997 was 391. Of that number, 66 have reclaimed Income Support and have no earnings.

The number of lone parents who gained employment through the New Deal for Lone Parents between 1 and 31 December 1997 was 141. Of that number, 19 have reclaimed Income Support and have no earnings.

The number of lone parents who gained employment through the New Deal for Lone Parents between 1 and 31 January 1998 was 228. Of that number, 26 have reclaimed Income Support and have no earnings.

Note:

The discrepancy between the figures quoted in the hon. Member's question results from a change in the method of counting: up to 31 December 1997 results on the New Deal for Lone Parents were obtained clerically, but from 1 January 1998, results on the New Deal for Lone Parents have been obtained directly from the Lone Parent Adviser (LPA) Database. Due to certain anomalies in the clerical records it is not possible to reconcile the numbers obtained clerically with the number obtained through the LPA system. The source of the figure quoted in the last question is not clear.

Income Support

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage and number of people aged over 60 years received income support by each Benefit Agency district for the latest year for which figures are available. [35200]

Mr. Field: The information has been placed in the Library.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of (a) fraud, (b) customer error and (c) departmental error have been identified by the Benefit Integrity Project; of those cases in which fraud is suspected how many have been referred to the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service; and what estimate her Department has made of the number in which there is a realistic prospect of a conviction. [35109]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of Disability Living Allowance are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible. Also, we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. We have, therefore, acted to introduce an extra safeguard to improve the quality of, and confidence in, benefit decisions made by the Project.

The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Andrew Love, dated 18 March 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked Peter Mathison to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning how many cases of (a) fraud; (b) customer error and (c) departmental error have been identified by the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP); of those cases in which fraud is suspected, how many have been referred to the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service; and what estimate her Department has made of the number in which there is a realistic prospect of a conviction. As Mr. Mathison is away from the office on leave, I am replying.

The BIP aims to ensure that those people in receipt of Disability Living Allowance are entitled to it and are receiving the correct amount. While the Project has, broadly, sustained the estimated level of incorrectness, it has not sustained the level of fraud estimated by the Benefit Review.

The information is not available in the format requested. As at 31 January 1998, the BIP had identified 157 cases in which fraud was suspected, of which 49 have been referred to the Benefit Fraud Investigation Service for further investigation. These investigations are still ongoing. In the remaining 108 cases, fraud staff in the Disability Benefits Directorate decided that there was no realistic prospect of determining whether fraud had occurred and the files were closed without further action.

Information in respect of customer and Departmental error is not routinely available.

A monthly report covering a range of statistics can be found in the House of Commons Library.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 20 March 1998

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Interests

Mr. Forth: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 Cabinet Ministers have instructed their permanent secretary to investigate matters involving the Secretary of State's personal, family or constituency interests. [34529]

The Prime Minister: None.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Co-operatives

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of her overall bilateral aid budget in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000 will be delivered through local co-operative, mutual or community-owned organisations. [35104]

Clare Short: I regret that my Department does not allocate or record expenditure in this way. Many bilateral aid projects work with and through local NGOs, groups and people.

Hospitality

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list planned expenditure on hospitality for April and May, indicating the date, location and purpose of each event. [35126]

Clare Short: Neither I nor the Under-Secretary of State has planned any major events which will involve hospitality for April or May.

Burundi

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the assistance her Department is providing to projects in Burundi. [35205]

Clare Short: Since October 1993, the UK has provided over £38.6 million in humanitarian assistance to Burundi; including our share of assistance provided through the European Commission. Our bilateral assistance is channelled through UN agencies and international Non-Governmental Organisations. We also continue to be a major supporter of human rights work in Burundi. This month, we pledged a further £0.8 million to the UN's human rights operation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Victim Compensation

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the enforcement of compensation orders; and what assessment he has made of the advantages of establishing a victim compensation fund. [35064]

Mr. Michael: The Government have implemented provisions in the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997, currently being piloted in Norfolk and Manchester, which will allow courts to impose community service orders, curfew orders or a disqualification from driving for up to 12 months on those in default of paying fines or compensation orders. This Act also enables courts to impose an attendance centre order on such a defaulter aged under 25 where this had previously been possible only for those under 21. The Working Group on the Enforcement of Financial Penalties, set up by the Lord Chancellor's Department, continues to look for improvements in the enforcement of financial penalties and has issued good practice guidance to magistrates' courts on the subject.

The question of whether those awarded compensation by the courts should receive payment from some sort of central compensation fund is being reconsidered as part of the current comprehensive spending review.

Roisin McAliskey

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he discussed with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland his consideration of the case for refusal of extradition in respect of Ms R. McAliskey. [34531]

Mr. Straw: No such discussion took place.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will agree to set in motion consideration of a prosecution of Ms R. McAliskey if requested to do so by the German authorities; [34536]

(2) if he will list the matters he will take into consideration before deciding whether a prosecution of Ms R. McAliskey in this country is justified. [34535]

Mr. Straw: Article 7 of the European Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism requires that any such matter be referred to the United Kingdom prosecuting authorities for consideration. Article 7 also requires that their decision to prosecute be taken in the same manner as in the case of an offence of comparable seriousness alleged to have been committed in the United Kingdom.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at what precise time on 9 March the Irish Government (a) Ministers and (b) officials were informed that he had decided not to extradite Ms R. McAliskey to Germany. [34538]

Mr. Straw: I spoke to the Irish Minister of Justice at 5.30pm on 9 March, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland spoke to the Irish Minister for Foreign Affairs at 6pm. Irish officials were also informed.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at what precise time on 9 March he released to the press his decision not to extradite Ms R. McAliskey to Germany. [34537]

Mr. Straw: A Home Office press statement was issued at 6pm on 9 March.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the medical advice on which he based his decision not to extradite Ms R. McAliskey. [34530]

Mr. Straw: No. It is confidential material.

TREASURY

Budget

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account he took of the Pre-Budget report of the Environmental Audit Committee Session 1997–98, HC 547 in framing the proposals for his Budget. [35034]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 March 1998]: The Environmental Audit Committee's report was published on 10 March. It was not possible to give detailed consideration to the Committee's recommendations at that late stage of the Budget preparations. The Government will, however, formally respond to the Committee's report in due course.

Public Private Partnerships

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has received from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for improvements to the efficiency with which that Department conducts its business and delivers services to the public, including the scope for extending the use of public and private partnerships. [35138]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 19 March 1998]: Proposals for efficiency improvement in all departments are being addressed in the context of the Comprehensive Spending Review. The results of this review will be announced this summer.

Correspondence

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors governed the length of time taken to answer the letter from the hon. Member for North Essex of 28 November 1997 relating to Government policy on EMU. [35417]

Mrs. Liddell: Inquiries have revealed that the hon. Member's letter was mislaid during an accommodation move in the Treasury and only recently came to light. This is regrettable; steps have been taken to ensure no other correspondence has been affected in this way.

Credit Unions

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proposals he has to permit credit unions greater control over the definition of their common bond and to permit the merger of credit unions; and if he will make a statement; [35048]

(2) what consultations he has held with the Credit Union Movement regarding changes to the Credit Unions Act 1979; and if he will make a statement; [35050]

(3) what proposals he has to introduce a share protection plan for credit unions; and if he will make a statement; [35049]

(4) what consultations have been held with the Credit Union Movement regarding changes to the regulatory regime consequent on the creation of the Financial Services Authority; and if he will make a statement. [35051]

Mrs. Liddell: I have met with the Association of British Credit Unions. The Government support fully the credit unions' ethos of self help and thrift, and the encouragement they give people to save. We are currently examining ways—including some of those which the hon. Member has raised—to promote further growth, whilst continuing the movement's current focus on poorer communities. We will announce our intentions once the deliberations are complete.

DEFENCE

Defence Bills Agency

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he intends to undertake a review of the Defence Bills Agency. [35892]

Mr. Spellar: The Defence Bills Agency, DBA, which was launched in 1995, is responsible for:

(a) paying and accounting for bills submitted by MOD's suppliers and contractors;

(b) raising invoices and pursuing moneys receivable for goods and services sold by MOD;

(c) maintaining accounting records for the MOD central ledger;

(d) providing accounting and management information on all these activities to MOD managers.

In accordance with the DBA's framework document, a periodic review of the Agency is underway. The performance of the DBA since its launch will be evaluated and a review of the options for the best management of its functions will be undertaken. Comments and contributions from those with an interest in DBA and its work will be welcomed. They should be sent by 31 May 1998 to:

Arms Exports

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of selecting national champions from amongst United Kingdom suppliers bidding for defence export orders; and if he will make a statement. [34710]

Mr. Spellar: As a general policy the Ministry of Defence, by means of the Defence Export Services Organisation, DESO, provides equal support to all United Kingdom suppliers bidding for defence export orders.

However, both Government and industry accept that, where there is a likelihood of competing British firms damaging each others' prospects and thereby jeopardising British success, DESO should concentrate its support on the company most likely to win.

In adopting this approach we aim to work by mutual agreement with industry and the following general principles are applied:

(a) MOD (DESO) will not intervene, unless it is considered necessary to avoid damage to British prospects;

(b) The assessment of this must be well founded but not become a ponderous bureaucratic exercise;

(c) While HMG will focus their support behind a single British firm, we have no powers to, and do not seek to, instruct other British firms to withdraw; nor of course, will we comment adversely on the companies or products upon which our support is not being focused;

(d) Any case for focusing Government support in this way is subject to Ministerial endorsement. The companies concerned are informed of the action to be taken and are provided with the reasons.

Official Residence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of the refurbishment of his official residence since 1 May. [25183]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 23 January 1998]: The total amount paid for the repair and refurbishment of my official residence in Admiralty House was £16,546.53.

Car Parking

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has (a) to reduce the number of car parking spaces available for use by staff and (b) to introduce charges for staff using workplace car parking spaces. [32457]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 March 1998]: In line with the Guide to green transport plans circulated last September by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my Department will be considering this issue in preparing Green Transport Plans for its key buildings.

Service Personnel Executions (World War I)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has receiving concerning a pardon for service personnel executed in the First World War; and if he will make a statement. [35141]

Dr. Reid: I have received a number of written representations and am holding meetings with a number of leading contributors to the debate as part of my ongoing consideration of this matter. It was in this context that, on Wednesday 18 March, I met at my request, two of the foremost experts in the field, Judge Anthony Babington and Julian Putkowski.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to publish his review of the cases involving the execution of soldiers during the First World War; and if he will make a statement. [35401]

Dr. Reid: The review is in progress. No final decisions have yet been taken. I will announce my conclusions when the review is complete.

Field Sports

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors led his Department's personnel to donate a tour of RAF Leeming to the British Field Sports Society; what guidance his Department issues on such matters; and if he will ensure that similar tours are provided on request for groups opposed to field sports. [35222]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 19 March 1998]: Visits to RAF Stations by local organisations and local residents are made generally at the discretion of station commanders. They are designed primarily to maintain and promote good relations with the local communities and to raise awareness and understanding of the Royal Air Force, and particularly of the functions of a station and the reasons why its operational activities, which can be intrusive, are nevertheless necessary. All requests for such visits should and will be judged in this overall context.

It is in this context that RAF Leeming donated a tour of the Station as a prize for a charity auction being run by a local landowner, the proceeds of which went to the British Field Sports Society.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the armed forces are from the ethnic minorities, broken down into percentage figures for (a) officers and (b) other ranks for each of the following categories (i) RN/RM, (ii) Regular Army, (iii) RAF, (iv) RNR/RMR, (v) Territorial Army and (vi) RAAF. [35552]

Dr. Reid: The latest available figures show that at 1 January 1998, personnel from the ethnic minorities represented about 1 per cent. of the total Regular Armed Forces strength. Ethnic minorities represented: 0.94 per cent. officers and 0.72 per cent. other ranks in the Naval Service; 0.94 per cent. officers and 1.05 per cent. other ranks in the Army; and 1.12 per cent. officers and 1.27 per cent. other ranks in the RAF. No information is collected at present about the number of people from ethnic minorities in any of the Reserve Forces. I hope, however, to be able to make an announcement shortly about the introduction of ethnic monitoring among the Reserve Forces.

Land Mines

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stocks of anti-personnel mines the United Kingdom holds outside United Kingdom territories. [35070]

Dr. Reid: None.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Castle Cement

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the source of the thallium cited in tables 4.65–4.66 of the Government Agency's volume, "Monitoring at Castle Cement"; what was the total thallium content, gas phase and particulate phase of emissions to air on 28 and 29 October 1996; and what factors underlie the difference in thallium inputs and outputs between the No. 5, No. 6 and No. 7 stacks. [34455]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency has advised my officials that some 75–80% of thallium emitted in the cement manufacture process comes from the raw material used, with the remainder emanating from the fuel. The Agency further advises that Tables 4.65 and 4.66 of the Air Quality Monitoring Report indicate that the total amount of thallium released to air from kilns 5 and 6 was 0.02kg on each of 28 and 29 October 1996, with 95% being emitted in the particulate phase. The Environment Agency has explained that kilns 5 and 6 use the "wet" production process, whilst kiln 7 use the "dry" process. The two types of process differ in many characteristics including releases. Differences in thallium releases are a feature of the difference in process technology and are higher in the "dry" process. A wet scrubber due to be installed on kiln 7 in April will reduce emissions of thallium from that kiln. The Environment Agency has advised that it is in the process of making further investigations into thallium and that it would be happy to provide further information direct.

Footways

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the Government's policy on the designation of footways for the use of shared facilities in respect of pedestrians and cyclists. [34547]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Shared use facilities do not offer a ubiquitous solution to providing better conditions for cyclists. They are very much a last resort measure, where there is a safety problem which cannot be solved on the road.

Conversion of a footway to a cycle track may be feasible in ensuring the continuity of a cycle route where numbers of pedestrians are low, or where there is a road safety problem which cannot be solved on the carriageway. Decisions on what is appropriate in particular cases fall to individual local highway authorities, who are able to take account of local circumstances.

The Department intends to review existing guidance to local authorities, and to update it so that it fully reflects policies for promoting both cycling and walking. The review process will involve consultation with interested organisations.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the timescale for completion of the informal review of the Single Regeneration Budget; and if he will make a statement. [35090]

Angela Eagle: The review of regeneration policy, including the Single Regeneration Budget, is part of the input to the Government's comprehensive spending review. The outcome of the comprehensive spending review is expected to be announced in the summer.

M6 (Widening)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the concession agreement between the Highways Agency and Midland Expressway contains provisions relating to the M6 and M6 widening; and if he will make a statement. [35053]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No, except to the extent that the agreement deals with the engineering and operational links of the BNRR to the M6.

Agencies

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are (a) the number of staff employed at, (b) the salary bill for and (c) the administrative costs of (i) the Marine Accident Investigation Branch and (ii) the Air Accident Investigation Branch at each office in (1) London, (2) the South East of England and (3) Scotland. [34777]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 March 1998]: The information requested is as follows:

	1996–97 outturn	1997–98 outturn forecast
Marine Accident Investigation Branch (MAIB)[1]
Number of staff	20	20
Pay costs	618,000	650,000
Non-pay costs	153,000	180,000
Programme costs	71,000	180,000
Total costs	842,000	1,010,000
Air Accident Investigation Branch (AAIB)[2]
Number of staff	43	43
Pay costs	2,116,000	2,160,000
Non-pay costs	851,000	474,000
Programme costs	447,000	474,000
Total costs	3,414,000	3,549,000

[1] The MAIB are located at a single site in Southampton
[2] The AAIB are located at a single site in Farnborough

Roads (A27)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what would be the saving in construction costs if the planned split-level roundabout proposal for the western end of the A27 Polegate bypass were to be replaced by an at-grade one. [35223]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 19 March 1998]: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 20 March 1998:

The Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson, has asked me to reply to your parliamentary question asking what would be the saving in construction costs if the planned split level roundabout proposal for the western end of the A27 Polegate Bypass were to be replaced by an at-grade one.

No detailed analysis has been carried out, but we estimate that the savings would be in the order of £2.5 million. However, there could be additional costs to offset this. For example, if we were to put the junction at ground level the surplus material from the excavation of the split level roundabout would not be available for use as say, noise screens, and material would probably need to be brought in. There would also be the cost of designing the revised scheme.

The Polegate Bypass has completed the statutory procedures and major changes now, such as making the Cophall junction at-grade, may require further orders (because of a knock-on effect to a side road and on the alignment of slip roads).

The scheme is at present subject to the Review of the place of trunk roads in an integrated transport system.

Human Rights (Tibet and China)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will discuss (a) human rights and (b) Tibet with the Chinese Government during his visit in June; and if he will report the results of his visit to the House on his return. [35543]

Mr. Prescott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 3 March 1998, Official Report, column 546.

Conservation Areas

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government will announce the submission of further areas to the European Commission as candidate special areas of conservation. [36013]

Mr. Meacher: A further list of UK proposals has today been sent to the European Commission. This consists of 24 new candidate Special Areas of Conservation, boundary extensions to 13 existing sites already submitted to the Commission as candidate SACs and the addition of further qualifying interests on another 10 candidate SACs. This represents a significant step forward in the implementation of the Natura 2000 network in the UK.

Consideration continues to be given to the few remaining sites included in the two consultation exercises carried out in March 1995 and October 1997 which have not yet been submitted to the Commission. I hope to announce the submission of further sites in the near future.

The list of proposals sent to the Commission is as follows.

Figures are not available for the whole of the last three years, as the partnership Board was only formed in February 1996. The figures stated are therefore from February 1996 to date.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service has provided financial assistance to each of the following groups who are interested in the welfare of prisoners:

Group	1995/96	1996/97	1997/98
(a) Prisoners
Probation Board (NI)	[1]—	810,000.00	810,000.00

Total	65,000.00	894,100.00	885,000.00

[1] No figure is available for the year 1995/1996, as prior to year 1996/1997 payment was not the responsibility of NIPS.
[2] This was a one off payment made to Save the Children Fund in respect of staff redundancies at the Visitors Centre in HMP Belfast at the time of the prison's closure.

Under the Probation Board (Northern Ireland) Order 1982, the Probation Board for Northern Ireland (which receives grant-in-aid from the NIO) has a statutory duty to provide social welfare services in prisons. At the beginning of 1996/97 the budget for these services was transferred from PBNI to the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

The NIO core funds two voluntary organisations (NIACRO and Extern) who work towards the rehabilitation of offenders. In addition the NIO acts as a conduit for Making Belfast Work projects aimed at reducing the incidence and fear of crime. The NIO is also responsible for monitoring peace and reconciliation money paid through the Department's Intermediary funding body, the Northern Ireland Voluntary Trust. Figures for the past 3 years are as follows:

Group	1995/96	1996/97	1997/98

Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 26 February 1998, Official Report, columns 336–37, on what statutory authority she authorised to the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights to provide advice on issues beyond those set out in its statutory remit; and on what statutory basis it is permitted to expend moneys in such circumstances. [34615]

Marjorie Mowlam: Given the broad terms in which it is cast, the advisory role which the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights has under section 20 of the Northern Ireland Constitution Act 1973 is wide. Successive Governments have acted on this basis, but have also sought advice on other issues from SACHR on an extra-statutory basis. All of SACHR's functions are paid for by moneys provided by Parliament from the Northern Ireland Office Administrative, Law, Order, Protective and Miscellaneous Services, Class XV Vote 1.

Wimbledon Football Club

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if it is the Government's policy to encourage Wimbledon football club to relocate to Northern Ireland. [35270]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 19 March 1998]: I believe that, in general, major sporting and cultural events can bring significant direct and indirect economic benefits to Northern Ireland, help to bring the two sides of the community together, and assist in projecting a more positive image of the area to an international audience. The relocation of any football or other sporting club to Northern Ireland is, however, a matter for that club and the relevant governing bodies in the sport concerned.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Minister authorised civil servants in her Department to seek to persuade Wimbledon football club to relocate to Northern Ireland. [35269]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 19 March 1998]: There has been some exploratory correspondence and discussion at both Ministerial and official level initiated by a group of Northern Ireland business people about their outline concept for building a new sports stadium in Belfast. There has been no contact between civil servants and Wimbledon football club seeking to persuade that club to relocate to Northern Ireland.

Work-related Injuries

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the number of (a) claims brought and (b) occasions when compensation was paid, by courts in Northern Ireland in respect of injuries received at work in each of the last five years indicating the number of injuries recorded per 100,000 persons at work in Northern Ireland in each year or as much information as is readily available to her. [34574]

Mr. Hoon: I have asked to reply. The information requested is not immediately available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Hospitality

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his current estimate of the expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on hospitality since 1 May 1997. [27785]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Expenditure by the Department, and reported by its agency and non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) on hospitality since May 1997 is shown in the table:

DfEE	12,000
Employment Service	3,000

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii)1997–98 to date. [27782]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Details of the information provided to compile the Department's 1995–96 and 1996–97 annual returns to Treasury and that collected for 1997–98 to date is as follows:

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98 to date
DfEE
Internal	41,147	21,195	18,750
External	201,000	8,600	118,931
Its agencies
Internal	26,144	549,729	3,900
External	1,020,000	275,500	25,800
NDBP
Internal	22,995	3,254	11,886
External	463,964	149,245	127,150

Lost and Stolen Items

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those items valued at more than £25 stolen or lost from his Department since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [27783]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 5 February 1998]: Details of items stolen or lost from this Department since 1 May 1997 which have been reported for recording in the losses register are as follows:

Items	Circumstances	Value (£)
Lap top computers (2)	Lost/stolen in the post	2,531
Lap top	Stolen from car of visiting officer	2,200
All thefts from Sanctuary Buildings
Palm top computer		400
Lap top computers (3)		3,900
Answering Machine		30
Portable Printer		300
Lap top computer		1,200
Notebook computer		1,200
Hayes Optima		80
Lap top computers		4,000
Flat bed scanner		680
Total		18,021

The level of reported thefts from Sanctuary Buildings has given cause for concern. As a result guidance has been issued by the Director of PSSD to all staff on increased vigilance in the safeguarding of assets. If the thefts continue, further security measures will be considered.

Mature Students

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applications from mature students were received in the year 1997–98; and how many there are for the forthcoming year. [35413]

Dr. Howells: Centrally held information on applications to higher education courses covers only those applying through the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) for full-time and sandwich degree, DipHE and HND courses. It therefore excludes those applying for part-time and post-graduate courses and also those who apply direct to the institutions rather than through UCAS.

The UCAS data for the 1997–98 academic year show that 97,400 or 24% of home applicants to full-time and sandwich undergraduate courses in the UK were mature students. Final figures for the 1998–99 academic year will not be available until the autumn, but the latest figures published by UCAS show that, as at 15 December, the number of applications from mature students was 18% down compared with the same point in 1997–98. This fall in part reflects trends in demographics and the numbers of potential entrants with the relevant entry qualifications. Even so, these figures are not a particularly good guide to final numbers for mature applicants as typically only 50% apply as at that date. More recent evidence suggests some recovery in mature applicant numbers.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what provision will be made for childcare for children of mature students whose spouses are in full-time work. [35414]

Mr. Alan Howarth: FE Colleges are often ideally placed to help parents, including those who are taking vocational and other courses to further their employment prospects, by providing on-site childcare. The Government have allocated £5 million to the Further Education Funding Council for 1998–99 to increase the out of school childcare provision available in FE colleges.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the ratio of mature students to non-mature students in higher education in each of the past five years; and what are the figures for the forthcoming year. [35412]

Dr. Howells: The figures for the five years up to 1996–97 are given in the table. Figures for 1997–98 are not yet available. Although the Department produces projections of total student numbers these are not disaggregated by age.

Full-time and part-time home postgraduate and undergraduate students in Great Britain (excluding the Open University)

Academic year	All students (000)	Percentage mature[1]
1992–93	1,197.4	55
1993–94	1,305.6	57
1994–95	1,423.2	58
1995–96	1,473.2	60
1996–97	1,521.2	60

[1] Mature undergraduates are defined as those aged 21 or over. Mature postgraduates are defined as those aged 25 and over.

Student Loans

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to change the repayment schedules of existing student loans. [35415]

Dr. Howells: We have no plans to change the repayment schedules of loans taken out under the existing scheme. The Education (Student Loans) Act 1998 which came into force on 1 March 1998 fixed the repayment terms of existing loans and they cannot unilaterally be changed by the Government or any other party involved in the administration of student loans.

The Education (Student Loans) Regulations 1998 have improved the repayment terms for some disabled borrowers who can now qualify for an extended repayment schedule or deferment period if they are in receipt of certain disability benefits.

Funding Agency for Schools

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are employed at each of the offices of the Funding Agency for Schools; and on what contractual terms. [35544]

Mr. Byers: The information requested is presented in tabular form:

Head count by contract type (as at 28 February 1998)

	York	Darlington	London	Total
Permanent	146	88	8	242
Loan	14	32	0	46
Fixed Term contract	27	24	0	51
Casual/Long Term temps	12	14	0	26
Total	199	158	8	365

New Deal (Colchester)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what targets he has set for the New Deal in the Colchester Employment Service District; and if he will estimate the cost of achieving them. [35416]

Mr. Andrew Smith: National targets for the New Deal will be included in the 1998–99 Annual Performance Agreement with the Employment Service, which will be published soon. The ES will then set its own targets at District level to reflect local circumstances. The programme has been designed to meet the individual needs of unemployed people within each locality and as a result it is not possible to predict what type of help will be most suitable for everyone, or what its cost will be.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Television (Listed Events)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to publish the report of the Review Committee on Listed Events. [35715]

Mr. Chris Smith: The independent advisory group under the chairmanship of Lord Gordon of Strathblane has completed its deliberations and submitted its report to me. I have today placed copies in the Libraries of the House. The final decision on what changes, if any, to make to the current list is mine, and I expect to announce that decision within the next few weeks.

Cricket

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what grants have been given to the England and Wales Cricket Board in each of the last five years from (a) the Sports Council, (b) the National Lottery and (c) other public funds. [35329]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 19 March 1998]: The information requested is as follows:

(a) the England and Wales Cricket Board was established in 1997 and was awarded £212,750 exchequer funding in that year by the English Sports Council, which included funding for the development of cricket for women and young people.

In previous years, the then GB Sports Council made exchequer awards to the Cricket Council for similar purposes, as follows:

Year	£
1996	216,700
1995	150,000
1994	150,000
1993	130,000

(b) neither the ECB, nor the Cricket Council, has received an award from the Lottery Sports Fund; and

(c) the ECB has received 2 awards from Sportsmatch, totalling £65,000.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Ministerial Travel

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) of 19 February 1998, Official Report, column 851, on ministerial travel, what was the purpose of his visit to Leigh Day & Co., Solicitors, London on 15 January; what has been the outcome; and if he will make a statement. [34540]

Mr. Hoon: I was invited on 4 November by Leigh Day & Co. solicitors to visit their firm to discuss the Government's proposals regarding legal aid. As with all visits to practitioners, I found the discussion very useful.

Legal Aid

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the largest sum of money granted towards legal aid costs in a single case in 1997. [34713]

Mr. Hoon: It is not possible to answer the question in the form requested as our records contain only closed cases. The most expensive closed case in 1996/97 financial year was R. v. Maxwell & Others which concluded in September 1996. The costs to the Legal Aid fund of this case to date are £14.85 million. Although all claims have now been determined, eight bills remain to be re-determined and therefore it is not yet possible to give the final cost of the case.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total amount of money granted in legal aid in 1997. [34714]

Mr. Hoon: The total of Gross payments (including payments on account) made during 1996/97, the last full year for which records are available, from the Legal Aid Fund for Criminal Legal Aid in the Higher Courts was £1,923.54 million. Over the same period, receipts totalled £447.87 million. Net expenditure (including payments on account) was £1,475.67 million.

Industrial Injury Claims

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the number of (a) claims brought and (b) occasions when compensation was paid, by English courts in respect of injuries received at work in each of the last five years indicating the number of injuries recorded per 100,000 persons at work in England in each year or as much information as is readily available to him. [34573]

Mr. Hoon: For the county courts, information is collected centrally only on the total number of personal injury claims issued and cases heard in England and Wales. It is not broken down into the number of claims brought or occasions when compensation was paid in respect of injuries received at work. The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In the High Court, the only information available is the number of personal injury cases disposed of after being set down for trial. Again, these data are not available by type of claim or by region and could also be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to hold, during the British presidency bilateral meetings with EU member and applicant states to discuss the need for computer systems to be millennium compliant; and if she will make a statement. [33864]

Mrs. Roche: The century date change was on the agenda at the 26 February Telecommunications Council and will be discussed again at the next Telecommunications Council on 19 May. It was also raised at the European Conference in London on 12 March, and I will be discussing the matter at all suitable opportunities with my Ministerial counterparts. The UK will also be hosting an EU Millennium Bug Conference in May.

Public Bodies

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the bodies within the responsibility of her Department currently required by legislation to lay a report before Parliament. [33564]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 March 1998]: I am not aware of any bodies within the responsibility of my Department which are currently required by legislation to lay a report before Parliament in their own right. However, a number report to me and I am then required to lay their report before Parliament. They are:

Advisory Conciliation and Arbitration Service (ACAS)
Atomic Energy Authority
British Shipbuilders
British Steel Corporation
Certification Officer
Coal Authority
Commissioner for Protection against Unlawful Industrial Action
Commissioner for the Rights of Trade Union Members
Director General of Electricity Supply (OFFER)
Director General of Fair Trading (OFT)
Director General of Gas Supply (OFGAS)
Director General of Telecommunications (OFTEL)
Monopolies and Mergers Commission
National Research and Development Council
Post Office
Post Office Users' Councils.

Mr. Burns: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will publish a list of non-departmental public bodies (a) she has abolished since 1 May 1997 and (b) she has established since 1 May 1997; and what are the planned annual running costs of those that have been established since 1 May 1997. [34832]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 17 March 1998]: Since 1 May 1997, my Department has abolished one non-departmental public body—the Advisory Committee for the Joint Environment Markets Units. It has also established one—the Spectrum Management Advisory Group. This Group is an advisory body and will not need running costs provision.

Task Force on Vertical Agreements

Mr. Breed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many times the Taskforce on Vertical Agreements has met since its inception. [35209]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: There have been five meetings of the working group of the task force and one meeting of the review group.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to bring mobile phone companies under OFTEL. [34524]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 16 March 1998]: Mobile phone companies, like all other telecommunications operators, are licensed under the Telecommunications Act 1984 and regulated by OFTEL. In regulating the provision of licensed telecommunication services, the Director of Telecommunications may refer matters which he considers operate or may be expected to operate against the public interest to the MMC and ask whether any effects adverse to the public interest could be remedied by way of licence modification.

Coal-fired Power Stations

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans the Government have to subsidise the generators to burn additional volumes of coal. [35228]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 19 March 1998]: Choice of energy sources for power stations is currently the subject of a Government Review. I refer the right hon. Gentleman to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. King) of 22 December 1997, Official Report, columns 519–20.

Digital Television

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the additional electricity demand that will arise from the introduction of digital television; and if she will calculate the additional Carbon Dioxide emissions that will arise based on different estimates of the use of digital television. [34417]

Mrs. Roche: I understand that the power rating of different digital set top boxes are currently expected to be in the range of 10–30 Watts; equivalent to a low power light-bulb. It is expected that this will fall as refinements are made to designs. How much this adds to electricity demand and Carbon Dioxide emissions will depend, as with current analogue decoders, on how long consumers leave their decoders switched on, and how quickly they adopt digital television services. It is not possible to predict either of these factors with any certainty at this stage. The net impact in the longer-term will also be affected by the savings in energy consumption, estimated at roughly 5 Mega Watts, from eventual closure of the analogue transmitters which are always on and which run at significantly higher power levels than their digital replacements.

Milk Market

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will ensure that the MMC inquiry into the milk market will investigate margins and returns earned by major dairy firms. [33739]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The reference into the supply of raw milk in Great Britain was made by the Director General of Fair Trading (DGFT) under the Fair Trading Act 1973. He asked the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) to investigate because of concerns he has about the competitiveness of the milk market in Great Britain. The reference was framed by the DGFT to enable the MMC to look at all aspects of the supply of raw milk in England, Wales and Scotland. It is for the MMC to decide what factors they will take into consideration in the course of their inquiry, within the framework of the reference.

The hon. Member should submit his views on margins and returns earned by major dairies to the MMC (The Reference Secretary, Milk), MMC, New Court, Carey Street, London WC2A 2JT.

WALES

Medical Staff

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives his Department is taking to increase the recruitment and retention of medical staff in the rural areas of Wales. [34356]

Mr. Win Griffiths: General practitioners working in rural areas are able to obtain assistance under their remuneration system by claiming Rural Practice payments, an Associate allowance and an Inducement allowance if eligible.

In July 1997 I announced the setting up of an Equity Fund of £0.5 million to help address local recruitment and retention problems. Additionally, the Government identified in the Primary Care Act 1997 a range of flexibilities for addressing local service needs and recruitment difficulties.

In 1998–99, health authorities in Wales will receive an additional £3.9 million increase to their cash limited budget for GP practice staff and premises. This is a 7.8 per cent. cash increase on last year or a 5.0 per cent. increase in real terms growth. The budget includes provision, at health authority discretion, to reimburse GPs a proportion of practice staff costs which may include the employment of salaried doctors and practice nurses.

General Practitioners (Stress)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will conduct a survey into GP stress levels in Wales. [34623]

Mr. Win Griffiths: We have no plans to do so at present as this is primarily a matter for the profession. I understand that the General Medical Council and the BMA have each established helplines to give advice to GPs who may be affected by stress.

For its part, the Government are taking steps to relieve the pressure on the GP workforce. More doctors are being trained than ever before and medical school intake is being increased by 11 per cent. over the next few years. Overall GP numbers are increasing and the average list size continues to fall (down to 1,705 in April 1997).

We have also taken steps to simplify the remuneration and operational aspects of the GP contract to relieve the burdens on individual GPs.

New opportunities for GPs to provide services in different ways which are best suited to individual and local circumstances were introduced with the Primary Care Act 1997. For example, some doctors have indicated that they should like to move to salaried status in order to be relieved of the administrative and other burdens of independent practice.

In November of last year we also introduced changes to the national contract for GPs enabling practices to fund the employment of other doctors with the aid of funds held at Health Authority level.

Finally, we have accepted the recommendations of the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' Remuneration that an additional £60 million be made available on a GB basis from 1999–2000 for the enhancement of general medical practitioners' net remuneration (in addition to the general award of a 5.2 per cent. increase which is to be implemented in two stages during 1998). We are exploring with the profession ways in which this money may best be targeted to help relieve the burdens of practices with the greatest pressures.

Public Bodies

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what policy he has put in place for the transfer and retention of staff of the non-departmental public bodies affected by the Government of Wales Bill; and if he will make a statement. [35965]

Mr. Ron Davies: In line with the proposals in the White Paper 'A Voice for Wales', I have agreed the following policy on the transfer and retention of staff of affected NDPBs and on the staff of the two Special Health Authorities which, although not directly affected by the Government of Wales Bill, will be joining the proposed National Assembly for Wales.

Careful consideration has been given to the need to ensure the continuity of management and customer service during a period of great change for these organisations. Once the overall structure of the 'economic powerhouse' and the relevant parts of the National Assembly is agreed then staff will be considered for the resulting posts as follows:

- staff in posts which remain largely unchanged will be able to retain these jobs if they wish;
- where a post has changed then internal applicants from the affected bodies will be able to apply in the first instance;
- if no suitable candidate is found, then the post may be subject to wider competition, including open advertisement.

Targeted voluntary early retirement/severance will also be used if and where necessary.

These principles were communicated to staff in December 1997 and underpin the arrangements now being planned or implemented by senior management in all of these organisations. Specific arrangements apply, or are expected to apply, to each of the affected organisations as follows:

1) All staff currently employed by Housing for Wales (Tai Cymru) who wish to transfer to the Welsh Office will be able to do so. A postings policy is in place to ensure fair competition for the posts in the new Housing Department of the Welsh Office. Those who are not successful in obtaining jobs in that Department, and who wish to join the National Assembly, will be offered posts elsewhere in the Welsh Office.

2) Subject to consultation, a similar policy will apply to staff of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales and those parts of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority which are to be transferred to the proposed National Assembly who have not taken voluntary early retirement/severance. Other staff in WHCSA will transfer to other parts of the NHS as agreed following a series of reviews currently being carried out.

3) All staff of the Development Board for Rural Wales and the Land Authority for Wales will transfer to the Agency on the abolition of those bodies, in accordance with the provisions of the Staff Transfer Order to be made under powers contained in clauses 122 and 128 of the Government of Wales Bill. All the staff of the three agencies are eligible to apply for early severance.

Staffing requirements following the establishment of the National Assembly and the 'economic powerhouse' will be a matter for those bodies to determine.

National Assembly

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library the documents pertaining to the net present value comparisons of the alternative sites and buildings for the National Assembly for Wales. [35593]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend has already placed in the Library of the House a brief summary of the local authority bids for accommodating the National Assembly for Wales.

Once negotiations for the site of the Assembly are complete my right hon. Friend intends to place in the Library of the House a brief summary of the remaining bids.

Industrial Injury Claims

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of (a) claims brought and (b) occasions when compensation was paid, by courts in Wales in respect of injuries received at work for each of the last five years indicating the number of injuries recorded per 100,000 persons at work in Wales in each year or as much information as is readily available to him. [34571]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

For the county courts, information is collected centrally only on the total number of personal injury claims issued and cases heard in England and Wales. It is not broken down into the number of claims brought or occasions when compensation was paid in respect of injuries received at work. The information requested could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. In the High Court the only information available is the number of personal injury cases disposed of after being set down for trial. Again, these data are not available by type of claim or by region and could also be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

New Deal (Young Unemployed)

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps have been taken to facilitate participation by the Civil Service as an employer in the New Deal programme for young unemployed people. [35605]

Dr. David Clark: The Government want the Civil Service, as an employer, to play its full role in the New Deal programme.

Recruitment to the Civil Service is governed by the fundamental principle of selection on merit on the basis of fair and open competition. The Civil Service Commissioners have agreed to a modification of that principle so that departments and agencies can take part in the New Deal by offering New Deal participants fixed term appointments in the Civil Service. The Privy Council yesterday approved the necessary amendment to the Civil Service Order in Council 1995. Copies of the amendment Order are being placed in the Libraries of the House.

Under their Recruitment Code, the Commissioners will allow the appointment of New Deal participants on fixed term contracts of up to three years without the need for open competition. However, they have made it clear that the selection of successful candidates must be done in a way that is demonstrably fair and based on the requirements of the job, and that there should be competition between those New Deal participants who may be considered suitable for appointment. Any Civil Service appointment beyond the limited period allowed for under these arrangements may be made only after fair and open competition and selection on merit under the terms of the Commissioners' Recruitment Code. Departments and agencies will construct their own programmes within this framework, but a key objective for all will be to prepare participants to compete successfully in fair and open competition for longer term appointments.

Officials in the Office of Public Service have been discussing with departments and agencies and the Council of Civil Service Unions the arrangements for participating in the programme within the Civil Service.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when all testing on Year 2000 compliance will be completed within his Department. [32602]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 3 March 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wolverhampton, South-East (Mr. Turner) on 3 March 1998, Official Report, columns 621–22.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the (a) consultants and (b) contractors engaged by his Department to address millennium computer compliance problems, indicating the cost of such consultancies to his Department. [32599]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 3 March 1998]: In the Cabinet Office (which for these purposes includes the Prime Minister's Office, the Office of Public Service and its Agencies) the list of names and costs of consultants and contractors engaged to address specific millennium compliance problems is as follows:

	Consultants/Contractors	Cost (£)
Cabinet Office	Chessington Computer Services	11,410
	Logica UK Ltd	23,500
Agencies	David Hinley Associates	12,165
	K2	5,000
	Admiral Computing Ltd	15,000
	Unisys Ltd	21,000

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many individuals working within his Department on millennium compliance have (a) given notice of their intention to leave and (b) left the Department in the last six months. [32590]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 3 March 1998]: In the Cabinet Office, (which for these purposes includes the Prime Minister's Office, the Office of Public Service and its Agencies) the numbers of individuals working on millennium compliance who have (a) given notice of their intention to leave and (b) left the Department in the last six months are as follows:

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

BBC World Service

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 10 March 1998, Official Report, column 300, to what instances he was referring when he stated that, when the Government have made a stance on human rights issues, the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe has been critical. [34681]

Mr. Fatchett: The Government have no responsibility for statements made by Opposition spokespersons.

Colombia

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if the Government will support the extension of the mandate of the office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights in Colombia; [35069]

(2) if he will press for the appointment of more international monitors of human rights in Colombia. [35068]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We fully support an extension of the mandate of the office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights in Colombia. We also support the proposal that the staffing complement of this office be increased to help it fulfil its mandate.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Colombian Government on human rights. [35073]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We take every opportunity to raise with the Colombian Government our concerns about the human rights situation in Colombia. Since May last year, Ministers and senior officials have discussed human rights issues with, among others, the President of Colombia, the Vice-President, the Foreign Minister and the Defence Minister.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government intend to raise the issue of human rights in Colombia at the UN Commission on Human Rights in Geneva. [35079]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I expect the issue of human rights in Colombia to be addressed in the EU's item 10 statement, to be delivered by the UK as Presidency. I also believe that, as in previous years, the Chairman of the Commission will deliver a statement on human rights in Colombia.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current human rights situation in Colombia. [35080]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The human rights situation in Colombia is serious and continues to be of concern. We are supporting the Colombian Government in their efforts to tackle the problem and in particular to end the long-running internal conflict as the most effective long-term means of improving the human rights situation.

In addition to helping to facilitate a dialogue between the Colombian military and human rights NGOs, the UK also contributed, both directly and through the EU, to the establishment of the UN Human Rights office in Bogota which is tasked with helping the Colombian Government to develop programmes for the protection and promotion of human rights. The UK also provided funding towards the visit of Organisation of American States (OAS) observers to the local and municipal elections in Colombia in October last year.

Anti-personnel Mines

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many anti-personnel mines under the control of the Government of the United States are held on United Kingdom territory. [35071]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: There are no US anti-personnel land mines on the UK mainland. I understand that some US mines are stored on US warships which are presently in the territorial waters of the British Indian Ocean Territory. The US Government generally do not make public the details of the specific locations, types and quantities of their military stocks.

Cambodia

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Royal Cambodian Government on human rights. [35072]

Mr. Fatchett: We are concerned about the human rights situation in Cambodia. We seize every suitable opportunity to raise our concerns with the Cambodian authorities. Most recently, as EU Presidency, we delivered a formal demarche on human rights to the Cambodian authorities on 26 February. Our Ambassador at Phnom Penh raised human rights with Cambodian Second Prime Minister Hun Sen on 11 February. I pressed the Cambodian Deputy Prime Minister strongly on these issues during the latter's visit to London on 21 January.

We are also exerting pressure on the Cambodian authorities to improve their human rights record through multilateral forums including the UN, G8 and "Friends of Cambodia" process spearheaded by the ASEAN Troika.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current human rights situation in Cambodia. [35074]

Mr. Fatchett: We are concerned at the human rights situation in Cambodia. There have been some recent improvements on the ground, including a ceasefire between opposing forces in northern Cambodia and the return of some prominent political exiles to contest the forthcoming elections. But important problems remain, notably in respect of investigations into serious human rights abuses catalogued last August by the UN Secretary General's Special Representative on Cambodia. We continue to exert pressure on the Cambodian authorities to improve their human rights record, through bilateral and multilateral forums.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals the Government have to support the forthcoming elections in Cambodia. [35075]

Mr. Fatchett: We are providing electoral assistance for Cambodia through the European Union. The EU assistance package—totalling 9.5 mecu—is being disbursed subject to strict political conditionality. As EU Presidency, we are ensuring that the Council keeps the situation on the ground in Cambodia under close review. We stand ready to suspend assistance if we judge that elections will not be free and fair.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government have taken in respect of the request by the UN Secretary General's Special Representative to Cambodia in August 1997 for criminal investigations into cases of alleged torture and execution. [35076]

Mr. Fatchett: We strongly support the work of the UN Secretary-General's Special Representative to Cambodia. We ensured that the UN General Assembly Resolution on Cambodia last December renewed the call for investigations into the human rights abuses catalogued in the Special Representative's report of August 1997. I pressed the Deputy Prime Minister of Cambodia strongly on these issues on 21 January. As EU Presidency, we delivered a formal demarche on human rights and the need for investigations to senior Cambodian Ministers, including Second Prime Minister Hun Sen, on 26 February. The Cambodian Government have recently agreed to accept UN experts to help facilitate investigations into human rights abuses.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Government of Cambodia in respect of the coup by Hun Sen in July 1997. [35077]

Mr. Fatchett: Since the military clashes in Cambodia last July, we have sought to promote national reconciliation and respect for democracy and human rights. Through bilateral and multilateral contacts, including the "Friends of Cambodia" process, we have encouraged the Cambodian authorities to restore representative government by holding free and fair elections which are now due on 26 July.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government propose to raise the issue of human rights in Cambodia at the UN Commission on Human Rights in Geneva. [35078]

Mr. Fatchett: We will work to ensure that the forthcoming UN Commission on Human Rights adopts a resolution on Cambodia based on an objective assessment of the situation on the ground. We want the Resolution to give credit for recent positive developments and to identify specific areas in which we seek urgent improvements by the Cambodian authorities.

Departmental Commerciality

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1998, Official Report, column 475, on making his Department more commercial, if he will list the 35 business leaders who have agreed to act as ambassadors for British business. [35588]

Mr. Fatchett: The 35 business leaders appointed to be Ambassadors for British Business are as listed. In addition Sir David Alliance, Chairman of Coats Viyella, has just been appointed an Ambassador for British Business, and Adair Turner, Director-General of the CBI, has agreed to act in this capacity as well.

Ambassadors for British Business

1. Sir Christopher Benson, Chairman, Albright & Wilson plc
2. Sir Ian Prosser, Chairman, Bass plc
3. Mr. David John, Chairman, BOC
4. Ms Anita Roddick, Chief Executive, The Body Shop International plc

35. Sir David Barnes, Chairman, Zeneca Pharmaceuticals.

Tibet

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed Tibet with the Chinese Government; and what specific representations he made to them. [35556]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 19 March 1998, Official Report, columns 678–79.

Panel 2000

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will (a) make a statement on the aims and (b) list the members of Panel 2000. [35554]

Mr. Fatchett: This Department's Panel 2000 will draw up a strategy for the public presentation of Britain worldwide and identify key messages to put across. It will bring together members of the private and public sectors under my chairmanship.

The process of choosing panel members is not yet complete, but the Panel will be made up from a wide range of people from the public and private sector.

Mochtar Pakpahan

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Minister of State met Mochtar Pakpahan during his recent visit to Jakarta; and if he will make a statement. [35553]

Mr. Fatchett: No, as my mission to South East Asia was a European Union presidency function concentrating solely on the regions' financial difficulties. We do however follow Mochtar Pakpahan's case closely: our Embassy in Jakarta maintain contact with Mr. Pakpahan and have been attending his trial.

China

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from (a) hon. Members and (b) NGOs concerning his decision not to support this year's UNCHR resolution on China's record on human rights. [35555]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received representations from certain hon. Members and from NGOs who disagree with the decision not to pursue a resolution on China at this year's UNCHR. We remain of the view that the EU's dialogue-based approach, supported by practical cooperation, is the best way to bring about real improvements in China.

India

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the new Government of India concerning the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty. [35547]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We believe that all states should sign and ratify the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. We shall make this clear to the new Indian Government, as we did to their predecessors.

Sino-British Liaison Group

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the forty-second meeting of the Sino-British Joint Liaison Group. [35564]

Mr. Fatchett: The Joint Liaison Group held its 42nd Plenary Meeting in London from 17 to 18 March. The two sides consulted and exchanged views on a range of matters related to the implementation of the Sino-British Joint Declaration on Hong Kong, including the forthcoming legislative elections in Hong Kong; basic rights and freedoms, including freedom of the press; the registration and indemnification of Hong Kong satellites; Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong; and the continued application of international treaties to Hong Kong.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1998, Official Report, columns 474–75, what further representations he has received from Mr. Wei Jingsheng since their meeting. [35592]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has received no representations from Mr. Wei since their meeting on 11 March.

Iraq

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what products UN Resolution 986-Oil for Food and Medicine permits Iraq to buy abroad; what calculation he has made as to the value of the products the resolution permits Iraq to buy each year; and what calculation he has made as to how much Iraq actually spent on such products (a) last year and (b) so far this year. [35084]

Mr. Fatchett: United Nations Security Resolution (UNSCR) 986 and successor resolutions 1111 and 1143 permit Iraq to export oil to fund the purchase of foodstuffs, health supplies, medicine and supplies for essential civilian needs.

The value of oil these resolutions permit Iraq to sell is $US 2 billion over a 6 month period. Of this, $US 1.2 billion is allocated to the purchase of the goods listed.

The most recent "oil for food" resolution, UNSCR 1153 increases the value of oil Iraq is permitted to sell over a 6 month period from $US 2 billion to $US 5.2 billion. In addition to permitting the purchase of the goods listed, it also allows for funds from the export of oil to be used to improve Iraq's infrastructure. UN statistics give figures for Iraq's spending under each resolution. According to the latest available UN figures, under UNSCR 986, contracts for goods valuing $US 1,212,863,515 have been approved. Under UNSCR 1111, contracts for goods valuing $US 999,938,770 have been approved.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Millennium Award Grants

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the impact of millennium award grants made (i) as cash payments to the individual, paid (a) as a one-off grant, and (b) as a regular series of payments and (ii) in other ways, on (A) income support, (B) job seeker's allowance, (C) family credit, (D) housing benefit and (E) council tax benefit. [35418]

Mr. Denham: Millennium awards should have no impact on benefits because Award Partners are expected to ensure that awards are made in such a way that an individual's benefit is not affected.

Independent Tribunal Service

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants who appealed to the Independent Tribunal Service had their appeal for (a) income support, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) jobseeker's allowance and (d) disability living allowance, (i) turned down and (ii) accepted in the two most recent years for which figures are available. [29227]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Outcome of income support, incapacity benefit, jobseekers allowance and disability living allowance appeals cleared at Social Security Appeal Tribunals (SSATs) in the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS), for the calendar year 1995

National Insurance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how she will protect the benefit entitlement of the low paid following the aligning of the starting point at which employees pay national insurance contributions with the single personal allowance. [35589]

Mr. Denham: In his Budget Statement, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor announced that future reforms will ensure that no one pays National Insurance contributions on the first £81 of their weekly earnings. He added that all employees earning between £64 and £81 will have their benefit rights protected. We shall be considering how best to provide this protection and will bring forward proposals in due course.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the effect on revenues from employee NICs in each of the next 10 financial years if the upper earnings limit for employee NICs were to be indexed to earnings rather than prices, with the lower earnings limit continuing to be indexed to prices; and what would be the level of the UEL in each year. [34358]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 13 March 1998]: The information is set out in the table.

Estimated upper earnings limit and net additional revenue from class 1 national insurance contributions paid by employees in Great Britain in each year from 1999–00 to 2008–09 if upper earnings limit indexed to earnings from April 1999

Year	Upper earnings limit (£ a week at 1998–99 prices)	Net additional revenue from employees' contributions (£b at 1998–99 prices)
1999–00	492	0.1
2000–01	500	0.2
2001–02	507	0.3
2002–03	515	0.5
2003–04	522	0.6
2004–05	530	0.8
2005–06	538	0.9
2006–07	546	1.1
2007–08	555	1.2
2008–09	563	1.4

Note:
These estimates assume that earnings will increase by 1.5 per cent. a year in real terms throughout the period covered by the table.

HEALTH

Fluoridation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into the public health effects of fluoridation of the public water supply. [34463]

Ms Jowell: Relevant research has been sponsored by the Department and its predecessors and by the Medical Research Council, the main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research. The initial programmes of research were described in the Report of the United Kingdom Mission on the Fluoridation of Domestic Water Supplies in North America As a Means of Controlling Dental Caries (HMSO-1952) and Ministry of Health: Report on Public Health and Medical Subjects 105 (HMSO-1962) on health surveys carried out in Watford, Kilmarnock and part of Anglesey. Subsequent studies have considered fluoride and cancer, fluoride and mutagenicity, and the effects of fluoride on bone. The extensive scientific literature on fluoride indicates that optimal fluoridation of the water supply is harmless and results in substantial reductions in dental caries.

Focus Groups

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department (a) has spent since 1 May and (b) is planning to spend on focus groups. [34966]

Ms Jowell: The estimated cost of work commissioned in respect of focus groups since 1 May 1997 is £111,363. Information for 1998–99 and future years is not yet available.

Research Contracts

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the food science research contracts allocated by his Department and its agencies in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97 broken down by (i) length of contract, (ii) value of contract and (iii) institution securing the contract. [35404]

Ms Jowell: I shall let my hon. Friend have such information as is available as soon as possible.

Treatment Statistics

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the number of treatment episodes per thousand of population in (a) London and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom. [35410]

Ms Jowell: The information is set out in the table.

Number of finished consultant episodes (FCEs) and the number per 1,000 population for health authorities in London and total for England for the financial year 1996/97

	Population (000s)	Total FCEs	FCEs per 1,000 population
London	7,074.2	1,404,553	199
England	49,089.0	10,636,721	217

Questions relating to other parts of the United Kingdom are for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Cot Deaths

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the expert group on cot deaths to publish its final report; what factors have led to the delay in publication; and if he will make a statement. [34501]

Mr. Boateng: The Expert Group on Cot Death Theories held its last meeting on 16 March 1998. The results from additional research commissioned by the group were not available until autumn 1997 and the time needed to fully assess this data was greater than expected. The group will report to the Chief Medical Officer in April and hopes to publish its report as soon as possible thereafter. Abstracts from the report will be available on the internet.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 308

SESSION 1997–98

9th March—19th March 1998

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
